PURCHASE EIGHT PUREBRED RAMS

Five leading Boone county farmers S. B. Sleet, Ossman Jack, Roy Kenney, J. C. Bedinger and Herbert Grant and County Agent H. R. Forkner attended the Kentucky Accredited Pure Bred Ram Sale at Lexington last Thursday, August 6th. While in Lexington the above farmers purchased eight good pure bred Hampshire and Southdown rams to head their flocks this year.

An exceptional good offering of Accredited purebred rams were offered thru the sale. Contrary to many breeders expectations the rams sold readily for good prices. Mr. Sleet purchased two yearling Southdowns, Mr. Kenney one two-year-old Southdown, Mr. Bedinger two yearling Hampshires, Mr. Jack one yearling Hampshire and Mr. Grant two Hampshires.

The next public opportunity for Boone county farmers to purchase purebred rams will be on sheep day at Florence Fair. No auction sale will be held this year but breeders have been invited to exhibit their sheep this year not for the premium money offered but for the opportunity it will give farmers to look over a number of good rams and purchase the best in breeding to head their flocks. Boone county is behind central Kentucky in the production of quality lambs. This loss is not due to the ewes but to the use of inferior quality of rams.

The County Agent is pushing the following projects in an effort to improve the quality of market lambs produced in the county; 1st use of pure bred rams of good type and breeding; 2nd—early breeding as only good lambss marketed early can compete with western lambs; 3rd—lamb standardization as ewe and wether lambs bring $1.00 or more per hundred than ewe and buck lambs; 4th—stomach worm control; 5th—early rye pasture, balanced rations and pasture rotation to produce good healthy lambs quick.

PLANS TO BEAT UNEMPLOYMENT

By ROWE G. STEPHENSON

President American Bankers Association

SOME look upon unemployment as a social or political problem. For them the remedy is compulsory accumulation of reserve funds on the insurance principle through contributions from the government, the employers, the employees or all three. That will not meet the present emergency, since these reserve funds have not been built up and it would take years to do so. At best this plan could only become effective at some indefinite time in the future as against the return of another catastrophe of general unemployment. Others look upon unemployment as purely an economic problem, holding that the only fundamental preventive is in business stability.

R. G. STEPHENSON

It may well be asked whether either of these cures—namely, the creation of unemployment insurance funds on the one hand or the maintenance of everlasting business stability on the other—do not present in themselves bigger problems than the problems they seek to cure. However I am inclined to the belief that the more practical approach to the solution of such problems and the prevention of such situations as general unemployment presents is along the latter lines of economic foresight rather than along lines of social legislation.

National Foresight

Economic foresight is conceivable not only for the individual but for business as a whole. Millions of individuals and virtually all lines of industry failed to practice it during the last stages of the recent prosperity.

The public welfare of the United States demands that industry as a whole vigorously and sincerely devote itself to the development of plans of economic foresight, aimed to prevent repetitions of the present unemployment situation. The general outlines for such plans are clearly definable. They demand that industry adopt a long range viewpoint and lay out its production and distribution plans with the thought that it is far better to have a long period of good sound business activity than a short period of frantically over-competitive endeavor. This would tend to lessen over-production in various lines, to prevent over-expansion of plant capacity, to avoid over-stimulation of public buying and above all to avoid periods of slumps and stagnation following periods of over-stimulation with their disasters of unemployment.

For business, too, there is a part in such a conception of economic foresight. It should aim to cooperate with industry in its endeavor to avoid reckless over-production, over-stocking and over-selling the public.

In this picture of national economic prudence, banking and finance, too, have their place. Their effort should be to influence the use of credit and other financial facilities into channels of sound public economy consistent with the attitude I have already sketched for industry and trade. All finance, whether current commercial banking or industrial investment banking, should seek by their influence in granting or withholding credit to stimulate and build up a balanced economic situation.

The Individual Must Help

Finally, the individual too has a place in any such plan of a sounder economic future for the United States. It is the duty of the individual to make every effort to take care of himself and provide for himself. Neither government nor industry can do that for him. They can give him the opportunity to succeed but they can't succeed for him. He must out of his own initiative and effort earn and create his own means and defenses against the requirements and contingencies of life.

Individual determination to provide against sickness, accident and death by insurance before indulgences in extra comforts and luxuries are given place in the family budget, and individual responsibility to guard against the contingency of unemployment by means of a sound program of thrift and savings are to my mind the true foundation of economic stability for the United States as a whole.

A limestone spreader, owned by a bank in Illinois is rented out to farmers for ten cents a ton, and also a phosphate spreader at five cents a ton. The "limestone project" was the principal contribution of the bank to banker-farmer work, during 1930, and was carried on in cooperation with the Farm Bureau. A man trained in the testing of soil, and in the making of soil maps was employed by the bank. The unit maps used covered forty acres, on which 23 surface tests were made at mathematical points. At five other points three tests were made—surface, sub-surface, and sub-soil. The completed map showed, by varying shadings of red, the points which needed limestone. Arrangements were also made by the bank to have limestone shipped in in car lots for sale to farmers in any quantities needed.

Artistic Treasures in Cities of Sunny Spain

Exalting one of the most charmed of any country where the others is always dangerous, Spain is the seat of one of the world questing the right of its glorious and varied monuments of architecture to a pre-eminent position. Most fortunate in this respect than other Continental countries, its Gothic and Renaissance masterpieces of art are supplemented by the mosques and palaces left as a heritage to the nation by the Moorish occupation of southern Spain.

Romance and magic lie in the very mention of the Spanish place names and treasures of art—the storied Alhambra and the stately Alcazar of Granada, the Mosque of Cordoba, the Pillar of Saragosa, the massive Cathedral of Burgos, with its lovely towers; Seville's magnificent cathedral, the famed Giralda and the Alcazar, the immensity and beauty of the Monastery of the Escorial, the richness of the facade of Santiago's cathedral, the University of Salamanca, the Roman aqueduct of Segovia, the arabesque treasures of Valencia (the city of the Cid), the royal palace of Madrid and the splendor of Toledo's cathedral. All these and many more are gems of art and symbols of a rich history. Their beauty is rivaled only by their surprising variety.—Exchange.

Trace of Absurdity in This Legal Phraseology

The witness, being duly sworn, did affirm, assert testify and declare, without mental reservation, and neither impelled, persuaded, coaxed, cajoled, bribed, begged, besought, urged, pressed or in any way whatsoever importuned by another, but of his free will, unrestricted, unobstructed, clear, independent, unchecked, unfettered, unhindered, untrammeled and undisturbed;

To wit, that he was the possessor, owner, master and keeper of a dog, and hereafter when the name of the dog shall appear it shall be construed, interpreted, defined and accepted as meaning neither a cat, bear, pig, elk, pony, mule, civet, deer, squirrel, lynx, wolf, fox, lion, cow, horse or other four-footed beast; neither fowl, fish nor insect nor other living creature, nor such creature as may have lived in a past age, nor such as it may be conceived will live in ages to come, but as a plain dog, which is to say, a four-footed, carnivorous, domesticated mammal of the family canis.—Exchange.

Ye Simile

"He's false, Marie, as false as Neptune's beard in a beauty pageant."

"Oh, I don't know, I think he's clean—like a linked writer's shirtfront."

"And as tight as a rubber band around a bootlegger's bankroll."

"No! You know if he would take you out, you would be as happy as a red ant on a picnic plate—"

"Bored as an aviator on a tricycle, you mean."

"Well, he's prominent—"

"Yes—like knees in Scotland."

"Elderly—perhaps—"

"I know—but he wears his age as gracefully as a last week's newspaper. Ha! Ha!"

"Oh! You're as impossible as a blind beauty doctor!"—Kansas City Star.

Hamilton and Burr

The rivalry between Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr began when they were studying law. Alexander Hamilton completed his study and passed the bar examination first. Later when the election of Burr and Jefferson was thrown into the house of representatives, Hamilton, although disliking Jefferson, threw his influence in favor of him and secured the defeat of Aaron Burr. Still later when Burr ran for the office of governor of New York and was defeated, he blamed this defeat on Hamilton and challenged him to a duel.

End of Famous Pirate

Edward Teach, or Thatch (?-1718), an Anglo-American pirate, popularly known as Blackbeard, became widely known and feared for his robberies and atrocities throughout the West Indies and along the coast of Carolina and Virginia. At Pasquotank, N. C., in 1718, he was attacked by two small sloops under the command of Lieutenant Maynard of the British navy, and by a successful ruse led to board the vessels, when he and several of his men were killed.—Washington Star.

Age-Old Tradition

The ground hog superstition is the American descendant of a tradition ages old. Its foundation is the general truth that a mild February is apt to be followed by change and a chilly spring. Our pagan ancestors were more familiar with the habits of hibernating animals than they were with calendars, and the premature return of these creatures became a forecast of bad weather. The notion persisted in Christian times and attached itself to Candlemas day—February 2.

Diplomatic

Bobby had been warned that punishment awaited him if he asked for candy during a visit to a neighbor with his mother.

The little fellow spied the appetising sweets, took the most tempting piece from the plate, saying: "What's a piece of candy like that good for, Mrs. C?"

Two Dates for New Year in Several Countries

We ought to be thankful that the affair of the calendar was settled for us by our ancestors, for it must have been a very muddling business to live in the Seventeenth century, for instance, when the new year did not begin officially until the last week in March, while at the same time people counted December 31 as the last day of the old year. Long before the time of Pepys, for example, many people regarded January 1 as New Year's day, though the old year went on until March 24. Thus on December 31, 1659, Pepys notes in his diary: "At the end of the last and the beginning of this year. . . . I take myself now to be worth 1300 (about $1,600) clear in money." But this did not alter the fact that January 1 was not 1661, but 1660, March 25 he reckons merely as "Lady day," though on that date he had to change the year.

It is really remarkable that nothing was done until 1752 to bring the end of the year by ordinary reckoning and the legal end of the year together—though, after all, it may not be so wonderful when we remember that we ourselves still begin the fiscal year as from Old Lady day, which is April 6 of our modern calendar. Yet there are compensations even in anomalies. The sufferings of the ordinary citizen about the turn of the year are serious enough without having a budget to add to them.—Manchester (England) Guardian.

Height of Human Agony in Waiting Return of Lost

In Brittany they are always awaiting the return of lost fishermen. Day after day the bereaved ones of their families wait, gazing out over the treacherous waters. Mothers, wives, sweethearts haunt the quays. For them, in the strange absence of their loved ones, all life is suspended. Bodies without hope or conscious life, almost without souls, they wait upon the piers. Of all the agonies that rack the human heart, such waiting is the cruelest. The uncertainty of hope deferred plunges the heart into a constancy of the bitterest grief. Better far to know the worst than to hope on and on, without even the poignant consolation of a knowledge of the dear one's fate. That persistent anxiety and dread paralyzes every healthful activity, destroys the savor of one's food, makes every night a sleepless one and exiles all joy and peace from human souls. The only refuge left such Breton fisherfolk in life is passionate and daily prayer to God for the return of the missing men who went out upon the sea, and who have not returned.—Le Matin (Paris).

Tracing the Word "Pie"

"The word pie was unknown to English speech until the year 1808, and we are told by the late eminent philologist, Sir James A. H. Murray, that it occurred in our literature first in Compotus of the Bolton priory in Lancashire in 1303, in which there is an entry concerning the use of fruit in pyis and pastellis for the bodyguard of the priory. Celerario priorie," writes Frank H. Vizetelly, dictionary editor. "The earliest work on cookery of which we have any record is dated 1300, and is in manuscript; the first book on English cookery was printed in 1498; but, ten years before Christopher Colmbus discovered America, the Worshipful Company of Cooks was formed and chartered in the city of London in 1482."—Detroit News.

Authors and the Bible

A list of authors whose work shows the influence of the Bible would be endless, but we cite a few examples: Coleridge said, "Intense study of the Bible will keep any man from being vulgar in point of style." Daniel Webster said, "If there be anything in my style or thought to be commended, the credit is due to my kind parents in instilling into my mind an early love of the Scriptures." A Scotch nurse taught Byron to love the Bible and his "Hebrew Melodies" are drawn wholly from the Scriptures. In Robert Burns' "The Cotter's Saturday Night" there are some 20 Biblical references.—Washington Star.

Spider's Deadly Enemy

There is one enemy against which spider cunning and ferocity cannot contend—a little blue wasp. Finding the door ajar, the wasp swoops down, stuns the doorkeeper with a stab of its sting, then leaves a calling card in the form of an egg among the living blobs of jelly in the silken hammock and disappears. From the wasp egg comes a grub, which devours the baby spiders, whereupon in that subterranean chamber it spins a cocoon around itself and metamorphoses, under protection of the murdered mother spider's trapdoor, into a blue wasp that will repeat its mother's performance on another trapdoor spider.

Legendary Potentate

Prester John was a semi-mythical potentate of the Middle ages, believed to reign over a Christian kingdom in the Far East. It is, however, certain that no Christian potentate ruled in Asia in the Twelfth century, though the legend must have had some basis in fact. Prester John has been variously identified with a certain Mongol chief and with the founder of the Khara Khitai, who called himself "Gur Khan or "Supreme Khan." The legend of Prester John's existence provided a continual stimulus to medieval exploration.

Adobe Now Turned Out by Modern Machinery

The lowly adobe has gone modern. No longer is one of this cheap and once proletarian building material restricted to the Mexican poon and to the lonely homesteader. The sun dried mud block of the West, says the Los Angeles Times, has been adopted by the people of means and by the Twentieth century builder accustomed to working in stone, and concrete, and brick, and lumber.

Modern machinery is now employed in the manufacture of the adobes. Once the mud and the straw which helps to hold it together were mixed by bare feet treading industriously in a big box, a trough or a mere puddle in the ground. Now this is accomplished by a concrete mixer.

The tradition that only a Mexican can make good adobes has been exploded in Arizona and the veil of semi-mystery thrown about the art has been rent. Formerly it was thought that the "paisano" possessed some mysterious sixth sense, some faculty inherited from remote Indian ancestors which no mere white man could hope to acquire. Now it is known that any competent workman can turn out adobes as durable as any molded by the Aztecs before the days of Cortes, and a really bright one is likely to figure out improvements in the process.

Great Moghul Emperor Also Inventive Genius

India never had a greater king than Akbar, the Moghul, who at thirteen years of age found himself shouldered with the cares of an empire which showed unmistakable signs of collapsing into ruins. During the 40 years of this remarkable man's power he turned back the tides of dissolution, rebuilt his kingdom, enlarged and extended it throughout India, brought it under unity of organization. He died in 1605.

Akbar was a great lover of sports and hunting. He rode with all the address of his Moghul ancestors. His courage was reckless and astounding—once inducing him to attack with but 40 followers a whole hostile army, which was promptly routed. He disliked luxury and was a modest eater. His spare time, during the earlier years of his rule, was given over to inventions. One of these was a machine for cleaning 16 guns simultaneously, and another a device for firing off 17 cannon at the same time. Both aided him greatly in his campaigns.—Boston Globe.

"House in the Wood"

Situated in The Hague wood in Holland is the famous "House in the Woods"—a royal villa erected about 1645 for the widow of Frederic Henry of Orange. Here Mary Stuart, wife of William II, passed the happiest years of her life. At The Hague in 1899 was held the international peace conference. The Hague is rapidly extending to the popular seaside resort of Scheveningen. Close to this popular resort is the Peace palace, erected at a cost of $1,500,000, donated by Andrew Carnegie. The foundation stone was laid July 30, 1907, and bears the inscription: "Paci justia firmandae hanc aedem Andreae Cornegii munificentia dedicavit." The building was founded after the first peace conference and was intended to be the meeting place of the permanent court of arbitration.

Unwelcome Reform

Queen Victoria's bonnets belong to history. Mrs. A. M. W. Stirling, sister-in-law of William de Morgan, the novelist, has told in her reminiscences, "Life's Little Day," how her mother who patronized the same milliner as did the queen, once begged the bonnet maker to become a "national benefactor and persuade the queen to wear less hideous bonnets."

"Oh, madam, I did try," cried the milliner in despair. "I ventured to modify the shape ever so little and put a pretty bow at the side, and they were sent back to me with a crushing message: 'What her majesty requires is a bonnet—not a cap."—Kansas City Star.

Ancient Slave Ship

Comparatively sound, despite its great age, the hull of the only remaining slave ship known to have brought "black ivory" to the coast of North America lies drawn up on the beach at St. Croix, Virgin Islands. The vessel, the property of Cornelius Penthony, bears the name of the Vigilant. She was operated under the Danish flag until slavery was abolished in the Virgin islands in 1848. Both before and after that time she was engaged in the slave trade, landing slaves illegally in United States territory, Cuba, Porto Rico and Brazil.

Lawmakers Rowed to Work

Washington's first legislature, says an article in the Seattle Times, with two exceptions, was composed of west side men, the two from the east side of the Cascades being representatives of Clark county, which at that time spread all over eastern Washington. Nearly the entire membership journeyed to and from the capital in boats, and it required two good days at the oars to reach Olympia from Seattle, a journey more or less hazardous.

Durable Food

We once put a mark on the edge of a railroad lunch-counter sandwich and found it there two years later. It had been newly half-soled, but it was the same sandwich.—Woman's Home Companion.

Every Variety of Song In the Library of Boston

In Boston public libraries songs are closely connected with the lives of the people. From the time of birth through all the grades of life until death claims them, they serve in a musical accompaniment. The return of spring is celebrated by a host of choral dances termed the Maypole; marriage, being a most important time, brings forth many songs such as "The Birchwood Splitter" ("Lastchrist"), "Glorification," "The Matchmaker" ("Svat svabka"). There are boating songs, laboring songs, lullabies and dance songs. Most of the dance tunes are in the major mode, the slow tunes, and these are best liked in the minor. Cesar Cui, in his book "La Musique en Russie," divided the Russian composers into three groups: First, the old lyric school, Glinka Darhomisky and Seroff; second, the New-Russians, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Mussorgsky, Borodin, and lastly Rubinstein and Tschaikowski in a class by themselves as being less distinctively national.—Washington Star.

Paw-Paw Tree Products Put to Various Uses

Papuya, or paw-paw trees, which grow in the tropical jungles of South America, are put to various uses. They are versatile in that they furnish food, medicine and soap. The Field Museum of Natural History, in Chicago, which has one of these trees in its botany exhibit, states emphatically that the tree is not to be regarded as a link between the animal and vegetable worlds. The tropical paw-paw tree is described as an odd-looking affair, tapering from the base of the stem to a height of about 20 feet. It exudes a peculiar juice which, rubbed on meat, will make the toughest beefsteak as tender as venison, according to Popular Science Monthly. The natives living in the districts where the paw-paw tree abounds use the juice for this purpose. The juice is an acid, milky substance and has medicinal value. The seeds are used as an effective vermifuge or worm destroyer. Furthermore, the tree has a delicious fruit. It is large, pulpy, oblong in shape, and has a heavy rind.

Ruby Rates Above Diamond

A ruby is harder than any stone except the diamond. Carat for carat, rubies of the first quality are rarer and consequently more valuable than diamonds of a corresponding grade. No other stone increases as rapidly in value in proportion to increase in weight as this.

One peculiar property of the ruby is that it becomes green upon exposure to high temperature but regains its original color on cooling. That red rubies are found in Siam, and purplish ones in Ceylon, but Burma alone may claim the "wonderful pigeon's blood ruby. A cloudy variety exists also which, when cut with a convex surface, exhibits a luminous star, giving it its name of star-ruby.

Odd Methods of Fishing

Natives of some sections of India have several unusual methods of catching fish, Popular Mechanics Magazine says. In Assam, fishermen crouch on the banks of shallow lakes and emit a shrill whistle which attracts a species of mountain fish. Lured by the sound, this fish darts into the open palms of the whistler and is caught. In other places the direct rays of the sun force mountain fish to seek shelter beneath or beside rocks along the banks of streams. The cunning hillman crawls to a bowlder behind which a fish is hiding, strikes the rock a heavy blow with his steel-shod club, and catches the fish, stunned by the sound vibrations.

His Move

In the wee hours of a recent morning a group of grownup kids emerged from a restaurant, went into a huddle on a prominent corner at the direction of a lad whose fiery red hair waved in the breeze from the broken places of a crushed derby, and began to harmonize. Soon the deserted city canyon was ringing with the strains of "Here we are together!"

The young cop on the beat listened for a moment, then turned the other way and started down the street. "I guess I'll go down here and look for robbers," he said.—Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Eagle as a Symbol

The eagle stood for two things in ancient symbolism. The Greek name for the monarch of the air was a word meaning "rapid motion." The deeply mystic Hebrews, after watching the great bird sitting motionless, contemplating the sun, gave it a name which meant "meditation." In early Christian art the eagle became the symbol of spiritual power, because it was able to soar direlessly through the highest places. The lion was the symbol of human pride and temporal power.

Engraving Is Ancient Art

Engraving dates back to the ancients, but the first authentic engraving of which there is any record was that of St. Christopher, 1423. Baron de Reiffenberg claims to have found an earlier one, dated 1418, and a manuscript discovered in the middle of the Eighteenth century given reason for believing that the art was known as early as 1306 in England, but there has been too much controversy concerning those prior to St. Christopher to accredit the earlier ones.

Belief in Bell Spider

Common in All Peoples

Where are many superstitions of all lands and when the story of the Devil or Satan originated, but it is safe to say that no one knows when the first personage first came upon the earth and who or what event first brought him here?

The belief in evil spirits has been found in practically all religions and among all peoples from the earliest times, and how the idea has been modified from time to time may be gathered by reference to cyclopedia articles on the subject, to articles in Bible cyclopedias, dictionaries of religious knowledge, Catholic cyclopedias, Jewish Cyclopedia, etc. The word "Satan" signifies "an enemy" and the word "Devil" signifies "a slanderer." The International Encyclopedia says in part: "In later Jewish and Christian belief, a mighty spirit of evil who has during unknown ages ruled over a kingdom of evil spirits and is in constant and ceaselessly active opposition to God." The writer of that article states that the Hebrews knew little about such evil spirits until they came in contact with the religions of Babylonia and Persia during their captivity in Babylonia. These ideas were developed by the Jews and many of them were carried over into Christian theology, where they were subject to other influences.

Fainting Spells One of Acrobats' Great Perils

It is not unknown for acrobats to faint in mid-air. One famous acrobat has said that during a somersault in mid-air from a trapeze his brain is numbed, and for a second or two he is practically unconscious. This he attributes to the speed with which the evolution is performed, and the sudden shock it gives to the brain. One night a woman performer was preparing to do a sensational flying act from one trapeze to another when, suddenly, at the moment she should have jumped, she was seen to sway dizzily. The next second the horrified crowd saw her tumble head first from the trapeze. Fortunately, the rope was twined around her ankle so that she hung head downward. She was obviously in a dead faint. Quick as a flash another trapezist swung himself out, and, in a flying leap, grasped the trapeze from which the girl was dangling. He pulled her back to safety, fastened a rope round her waist, and lowered her—still in a faint—to the stage.

Origin of "Sine"

"Sedere" is a Latin verb from the same root as our "to sit" and has the same meaning. With the addition of "ad," meaning "to," we have "assidere" or "assidere," meaning literally "to sit to." From this comes the medieval law-word "assize," which has several meanings, of which the most important is "a sitting of a judge," preserved in our "assize." The French form "l'assise," meaning, "the assize," was probably mistaken for "la sise." The latter word meant, first, "legal regulation by a judge sitting in assize," then the thing regulated particularly weights and measures, next a standard of magnitude, and so at last simply "bigness."

...olution's Beginning

The French revolution was mainly the result of the oppression of the French people, who rose in revolt against the extravagance and tyranny of the kings and nobles. In addition they had no adequate representation in the legislature. The taxes were heavy and in 1777 there were as many as 1,250,000 beggars in France. Alarmed by the increasing signs of unrest in the country, the king and some of the nobles began to gather the army near Paris. This so enraged the people of Paris that they stormed the bastille on July 14, 1789. This is regarded as the beginning of the revolution.

Buddhist Cave Temples

Though the Ceylon Buddhists did not make such fine cave temples as their fellow religionists in India, there are several which are of more than passing interest. One very curious example is to be found at Dambulla, not far from Kandy, where natural caves have been enlarged, and huge images have been carved in the interior. But modern structures have been built in front of these caves, thus spoiling the whole conception. The whitewashed brick walls seem very incongruous in the vicinity of ancient cave temples, which are probably nearly two thousand years old.

Different Kind of Work

In a south side school the class in literature was very much interested in the poem, "The Village Blacksmith." In the midst of the discussion the teacher asked:

"Why does the blacksmith have such large muscles? My arm isn't like that."

After a pause, one of the girls replied:

"He does his work with his arm, while you do yours with your mouth."—Indianapolis News.

Took His Word

Brown inserted an advertisement in a newspaper offering his car for sale. At 8 p. m. the door bell rang, and a man asked to see the car. "It's out in front," said Brown. He had no garage, so parked it there.

"There's no car there," said the man—and he was right. Brown's advertisement read: "For sale, good car. A gift. First to see it will take it."

SOME DEPRESSIONS WORSE THAN THIS

By ROME C. STEPHENSON,
President American Bankers Assn.

ONE of the most significant aspects of the present business period is that, while we had a speculative panic and while we have had a general economic breakdown yet we have not had any semblance of a financial panic, such as occurred in 1907, and in other years when the credit and monetary machinery broke down and we had money panics, suspension of specie payments and kindred disasters.

R. C. STEPHENSON

None of these elements of a true financial panic has been present in this depression of the 1930's. At no time was the banking structure as a whole shaken, despite the unprecedented rate of small bank failures that it had to absorb. At no time was the banking and credit machinery unable to extend support to the panic-stricken and broken stock markets and cooperation to all kinds of business and manufacturing. Anyone would have been a wise prophet who could have foretold that our banking and credit structure would stand up so well under conditions so bad.

Finance Taking Cuts

And banking and corporate finance in this period of depression are unflinchingly taking their portions of short rations and enforced self-denial that the nation's need for readjustment demands. Interest rates on money, yields on securities and dividends on corporate investment have all dropped to levels that constitute drastic reductions in the compensation of capital. These are but part of the necessary economic realignments that all phases of the country's working life must go through before a general revival of business activity can start.

It is my belief—indeed it is my hope—that the tempo of the next cycle of prosperity will be somewhat more moderate than the mad whirl of jazz that brought the last one to a close. I think it will be agreed that the worst aspect of the collapse of that period of false prosperity is the condition of insecurity for employment which it caused. Unemployment is our greatest public problem today.

Unemployment is the worst wage cut that the worker can suffer. It is the worst cause of stagnation that business has to strive against. The sooner we can get our masses of workers back into jobs on almost any terms the better it will be both for capital and labor.

TRUST BANKING SPREADING FAST

Government Official Shows That This Type of Financial Service Is Enlarging Its Field

SPECTACULAR growth of trust service in the banking field is reflected in the national banking system, Aubrey B. Carter, in charge of Trust department supervision in the office of Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D. C., brings out in an article in the American Bankers Association Journal.

"At the close of the 1930 fiscal year there were 2,472 national banks with trust powers," he says. "Their banking resources aggregated $23,529,100,000, which represented 34 per cent of the number of banks and 80 per cent of the total banking resources of the 7,252 national banks. Trust departments had been established by 1,829 of these banks which were administering 79,900 individual trusts with trust assets aggregating $4,473,000,000, and in addition were administering 11,500 corporate trusts and acting as trustees for outstanding note and bond issues aggregating $11,803,700,000.

"These figures represent an increase during a four-year period of 446, or 22 per cent, in the number of national banks authorized to exercise trust powers; an increase of 725, or 66 per cent, in the number of banks actively administering trusts; an increase of 65,370, or 250 per cent, in the number of trusts being administered; an increase of $3,500,000,000, or 385 per cent, in the volume of individual trust assets under administration, and an increase of $9,340,000,000, or 379 per cent, in the volume of bond issues outstanding for which these institutions were acting as trustees."

These facts, he concludes are "a striking testimonial of the growing public recognition of the desirability of the corporate fiduciary in the settlement of estates and the administration of trusts."

"No corn—no credit" was a slogan adopted by bankers of Saluda, South Carolina, last year. "The proposition was kept before our people by a display advertisement in the county paper several weeks prior to corn planting time. As a result we have more corn raised in the county this year than ever previously, regardless of the need of rain in many sections," said one of the bankers in reviewing the results. Home gardens was another [illegible] with fine results.

INSECTED SPICES DECALLY MEET FEDERAL REGULATIONS

"A little spice goes a long way in the average kitchen, but men in the past have traveled far longer distances for small quantities of these valuable palate pleasers," says W. R. M. Wharton, chief of the Federal Food and Drug Administration's eastern district. "The quest for spices has set armies marching, set the hammers ringing in a thousand ship yards, and raised the black flag to the tip tall mast of innumerable pirate vessels."

Spices no longer reach our shores in plodding four-masters; they come in huge freighters and ships of the line. But they still come—from the four corners of the tripical world—and the luxury of kings has become a commonplace in the most humble home.

The extent of spice imports to the United States is suggested in Mr. Wharton's latest report of spice shipments and detentions at eastern district ports of entry His report covers the year which ended May 31, 1931, and shows that of more than 31,000,000 pounds of spices examined in that year by Federal officials of the eastern district only about one and one-half cause they failed to meet the million pounds were detained by standards of quality and purity set under the Federal food nd drugs act.

Since the bulk of America's spice supply enters the United States through ports of the eastern seaboard, the fact that but 3.9 per cent of all lots offered for entry at these ports was detained by Government food officials indicates the high quality of spices reaching our shores, says Mr. Wharton.

Spices are required to be essentially free from foreign material, and if Federal inspectors find any appreciable amount of dirt, sand, stems, moisture, or evidence of worminess or moldiness in stocks offered for entry they detain them. Sometimes it is possible to remove this extraneous material and bring the spices up to the standards set under the law. In this case they are reconditioned and then allowed to enter the channels of commerce in the United States.

The pure food law requires that all imported foods and drugs—and all foods and drugs shipped in interstate commerce in this country—be pure, wholesome, and honestly and truthfully labeled. Of 1,959 shipments of spices docket at eastern seaboard port in the year ended May 31, '67 were detained.

Black pepper led all spices in bulk of imports during the year, followed in order by mustard seed, caraway seed, cassia and cinnamon, ginger, and nutmegs.

NEW VEGETABLLE PEST IS SPREADING IN SOUTH

Add another to the worries of the truck grower.

The vegetable weevil, a new hardy, strong flying insect which has a healthy appetite for a wide variety of common garden crops is spreading in the Southern States and is known to occur in California, the United States Department of Agriculture reports.

This weevil is a small, grayish-brown beetle, about a third of an inch long. It was first found in Stone County, in Mississippi, in 1926. Since then it has spread to many counties in that State as well as in Louisiana, Alabama, and Florida, and in 1930 was discovered in the vicinity of San Jose, Cala.

The pest is a hardy flyer, and this makes it difficult to control its spread. Some of the plants which it attracts are turnip, cabbage, collard, carrot, mustard, spinach, beet, chard, radish, potato, tomato, lettuce, onion, parsley, parsnip, chickweed, mallow, pigweed, dock and milk thistle.

Arsenical poisons will control the the insect, but in such crops as lettuce the use of poison involves an element of danger. Poisoned bran bait as used for cutworms is partially effective during May and June.

COPYRIGHTED PAPER SAVES PEARS

Copperlined paper wrappers for pears boted for shipment in Washington and Oregon will practically prevent the spread of "gray mold" or "nest decay in storage, Dr. J. E. Cooley, plant pathologist of the United States Department of Agriculture has discovered. Washington and Oregon pear growers are accustomed to the wrapping of fruit, but ordinary paper does not check the spread of this rot to sound fruit.

The decay is caused by the fungus Botrytis, and caused serious losses. Doctor Cooley developed a wrapping paper impregnated with copper, and this proved highly satisfactory last year in packing about 30,000 boxes of pears. Reports to the department say that most of the Oregon pears to be stored for any length of time this year will be wrapped in the copperlined paper. The department has applied for a public-service patent on the new process.

NEW POP CORN VARIETY POPS TO GREATER SIZE

Pop-corn specialists have surpassed the record of two blades of grass for one. Through selection they have produced a new strain which pops to twenty-six times its volume.

The new strain, a yellow pearl pop corn named Sunburst, was produced during a 7-year period by agronomists of the United States Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station.

They produced the new strain by testing ears of pop corn and retaining for seed the ones which gave the greatest volume of popped corn. The test consisted of popping a sample of the seed from each of the selected ears and measuring the volume of the resulting popped corn. Each sample was also tested for flavor and texture. The remainder of the seed on the good ears was kept and planted the following year. The process was then repeated.

Renew Your Health by Purification

Any physician will tell you that "Perfect Purification of the System is Nature's Foundation of Perfect Health." Why not rid yourself of chronic ailments that are undermining your vitality? Purify your entire system by taking a thorough course of Calotabs,—once or twice a week for several weeks—and see how Nature rewards you with health.

Calotabs purify the blood by activating the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels. Trial package, 10 cts. Family package, 35 cts. All dealers. (Adv.)

Although the testing cost a heap pop, it proved worth the effort in producing better popping corn. It took more than a day to test from 50 to 75 ears of corn. However, the new strain showed an average of twenty-six times the volume of the seed when popped, while Queen Golden, the variety from which Sunburst was developed, gives slightly more than nineteen times the volume of the grain.

Such careful selection of seed, while not practical for the small grower, has possibilities for the commercial grower of pop corn seed, declare the argronomists who made the Kansas tests.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

SUMMER FIRST AID

The day's outing for Mamma and the kiddies....Over on the creek four miles west. Shade and grass; trees and flowers; and—emergencies Red Cross Day too—for Mamma. She should be prepared, wisely.

For there's Bob, he just will drive, and he's on the sunny side of the Ford; gets sunburn on the left ear, till it looks like a wheat cake right off the griddle.

Then Junior, always an explorer, picks up a locust thorn in his most prominent muscle—it penetrates half an inch.

And Clarice, fond of butterflies, gets stung on the upper lip by a new species that she finds bussing over the horse-mint bloom.

Little Mary insists on carrying the lunch basket many times too heavy for her—trips over a lump—takes off a section of epidermis from one fat knee.

Tom, the profound, none too energetic and peppy—picks up at least a pint of chiggers—and they ALL depend on MAMMA for first aid. All run to Mamma when in distress.

On that day's outing, take along a kit containing (1) scissors; (2) a roll of clean adhesive plaster; (3) a bottle of mercurochrome; (4) clean muslin or gauze for bandages; (5) a splinter forcep; (6) a bottle of carbolated vaseline; a can of antiseptic dusting powder. Don't rely on liquid vegetable antiseptics—most of them are powerless for killing germs. If a cut finger, let it bleed awhile; then pour merurchrome into the cut and around it. Dry quickly and apply adhesive plaster to close wound. Treat "skinned" abrasions much the same, except carbolated vaseline on gauze next to the wound.

For the thorn in Junior's flesh—pull it out with splinter forcep; soak the puncture with mureurochrome; cover with adhesive. Treat the chiggers and sunburn at home. Carbolic soap and cold cream applied freely. Watch this column for next.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in predicting that the Federal Government will give direct aid to the hungry and unemployed this winter, expressed the opinion that no extra session of Congress would be called. On the other hand, Senator John J. Blaine, Republican insurgent of Wisconsin, gave out a communication which he has sent to President Hoover, urging an extra session in September. Senator Blaine declared the oncoming winter presents a dark picture with its promised hunger, poverty and distress widespread. He held that a heavy responsibility rests on the President and Congress and the necessity was "never greater."

The already somewhat elongated list of favorite sons continues to lengthen—almost daily. At Hillsboro, Texas, the other day several friends of Melvin A. Traylor the Chicago banker who is a former Texan, got together to start a campaign for his nomination and election as the Democratic candidate for President in 1932. In Hill County, the citizens feel they best know his capabilities, even though he has gained international banking fame since he left there. His admirers count for support on Texas, where he ascended from a grocery boy; Illinois and the Middle West, where Mr. Traylor is the friend of every stock raiser; New York, where financiers have come to respect his business acumen, and Kentucky, where he was born. In addition to ballots from these States, they expect votes from other agricultural States, even some regularly Republican.

Congress has seldom run into such a barrage of criticism as has been fired at it in recent years. Business organizations, educators, the press and even officials in high Government positions have joined in censuring the general conduct of the two legislative houses that meet on Capitol Hill. In recent weeks several members of Congress have added complaints of their own against the manner in which legislative matters are handled. These are especially significant because members of long experience have an intimate knowledge of the defects they point out.

In the opinion of those best posted, by far the bitterest and fiercest struggle next winter will be between the President and Congress over the matter of appropriations for relief of the unemployed. It is agreed that the situation will be more acute, that the suffering and distress will be increased and the problem of relief greater. That the drive in Congress for Federal appropriations will be determined and powerful is apparent. It is equally clear that Mr. Hoover will resist as strongly as he can every effort to relieve distress by direct gifts of Federal funds from the Treasury. It savors of the "dole."

* * * * *

Probably the scheme to transform the Treasury into an almshouse will be disguised as a plan to "cooperate" with States and cities. The Government will be asked to contribute fifty-fifty with States in relieving unemployment. Then, it is said, the States will fall down on the job, and Congress will generously transfer the entire burden to the Federal Treasury.

* * * * *

Senator George H. Moses, who is President of the Senate has announced his intention to vote against any proposal for a dole to aid unemployed. His statement followed a report that $15 a week should be asked for idle heads of families when Congress meets. Senator Moses said he expected Congress would be deluged with requests for direct cash relief in various forms, and that he would continue to vote against doles as he had in the past.

* * * * *

The President enlists what should be his most powerful ally in the fight against the impending threats of a Federal "dole" this winter when he calls upon the leaders of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Their response is encouraging. Julius H. Barnes and Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the board and president, respectively, of the national body, report that a survey of the situation is under way and that its findings will be ready for the President the first of next month. Both of them are of the opinion that, as Mr. Strawn puts it, there will be "more kinds of legislation for the dole than England or Germany ever heard of" unless there is a very real and concrete plan for dealing with the situation ready and working by the time Congress meets.

* * * * *

Administration leaders became more confident of being able to meet the unemployment situation this winter without any form of Federal "dole" when President Hoover was told by Allen T. Burns, executive director of the Association of Community Chests and Councils, that this organization will be able "wholly" to undertake the burden of relief. The President was informed by Mr. Burns that organizations had been completed in 127 cities, that their plans were going forward actively and that more communities were being heard from daily. The organizations in every city had reported "complete confidence" that, in cooperation with municipalities and other local agencies, they will be able to meet whatever situation develops in the coming months.

Alarmed by the sharp decline in cotton prices this week, the Federal Farm Board has taken the drastic action of appealing to the Governors of fourteen cotton-producing States to mobilize all interested agencies to induce growers immediately to destroy one-third of the crop in their fields. While the board's telegram to the cotton State Governors was worded as a suggestion, it carried an inferred threat that unless the growers in ten of the largest cotton States agreed to this proposition the Government agency would let loose its stabilization holdings and thus further depress prices.

* * * * *

Eugene Talmadge, Georgia Commissioner of Agriculture, says that the proposal of the Federal Farm Board to hold off the market its stabilization cotton for one year, provided the ten largest cotton growing States in the South would destroy one-third of the 1931 crop was "nothing more than a bluff on the part of the board." He said he did not believe the Farm Board has one-third of the cotton on hand they claim to be holding," and that "Congress ought to name a special committee to investigate the board and find out whether it has this cotton on hand. The plan is to destroy one-third of the crop is nonsense."

Even Uncle Sam's big ditch, the Panama Canal, has been hit by Old Man Depression. Normal toll collections, expected to amount to three or four million dollars, actually total $2,431,433 less than collections for the previous fiscal year. There was a decrease of 656 vessel transits during the intervening twelve-month.

Of more than $2,000,000,000 spent for advertising last year, more than 40 per cent was spent for newspaper advertising, Dr. Herbert T. Baker, instructor in advertising and layout in advertising at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, recently told the afternoon session of the United States Building and Loan League's annual convention. "Newspaper advertising is still the bulwark of the Nation's advertising," he said. "It is one of the best mediums for building and lasting advertising. However, we must remember the difference between a skirmish and a campaign. A single piece of advertising, no matter how skillfully done, is a hazardous venture because it ignores the great effectiveness of cumulative power of many pieces and because in being a single unit, it encourages inattention by being too complete."

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

"I WAS WRONG"

Like many other business men, I subscribe to a confidential bulletin issued by a private news agency in Washington.

It contains interesting comment on affairs both here and abroad, gathered from official sources and from important visitors to the Capital. No one is quoted by name and hence the writers of the bulletin can exercise considerable freedom. Sometimes their information is useful.

In a recent number they answered certain questions as to how they get their news. I quote the following paragraph:

"For example, take the Washington prediction as to when business will recover. There have been two kinds. First, the formal, publishable statement of officials, which the newspapers have carried. Second, the unofficial, private, more sincere views which the Washington correspondents have known but were under obligations not to print. We have sent you the latter. Our advices have been less wrong than most, but not particularly good at that, and this is one example of why you should not trust our letters 100%."

That made a great hit with me. If the writers had said: "We misled you a little about the time of the business recovery, but we were not responsible. The officials deceived us;" or, "While we were wrong on the business recovery, still our competitors were much worse"—if they had written any sort of alibi at all, every word of it would have lessened my confidence.

But when they come out frankly and say: "We were wrong, and you should never depend on us one hundred per cent," then I begin to think they must be pretty smart men.

I have never forgotten an experience with one of my first employers, a man who is now at the very top of his profession.

In those days I was getting $40 a week, and he was earning $40,000 a year. He lived in a fine apartment on Park Avenue, and I lived in one room in the Y. M. C. A.

One morning early I was called out of bed to answer the telephone. It was my employer. He said:

"After you left the office last night I hunted up some additional information on the subject we had been discussing. I tried to reach you during the evening, but you were out. I am calling you now to let you know that you were right, and I was wrong."

You can imagine what that did to me! I would have jumped off the roof for that boss, and I never meet him even now without an impulse to raise my hat.

Little fellows feel that they must be infallible in order to maintain the world's respect. It is a badge of bigness to be able to say frankly, "I was wrong."

INTRODUCE WEEDS IN FIELD SEEDS

A study of 50 strawberry fields and gardens, made by Erle Vaughn of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, revealed 31 kinds of weeds. Sixteen are listed as introduced species; that is, they did not grow originally in the localities where they were found, but were in from other places.

New weeds are most commonly introduced as impurities in field seeds, Mr. Vaughn points out. Many of the worst weeds, such as Canada thistle, quackgrass, sourdock and dodder, were introduced in this way.

"Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the value of using clean seed," he said. "The first step in the eradication of weeds as farm pests is a change from the practice of buying field seeds on a price basis to that of buying them according to quality."

Fifty acres of cantaloupes growing in the vicinity of Waco in Madison county will be marketed cooperatively.

Fifteen commercial peach growers in Allen county have organized a marketing association.

Henry Newdigate, a Fleming-co., farmer, threshed 500 bushels of orchard grass seed, the largest amount ever produced by one farmer in that county.

Jeff Doolin, a Butler county farmer, reports a yield of 75 bushels of oats to the acre from 15 acres of limed land on Green river.

Henry county farmers expect to produce 7,500 bushels of orchard grass seed, most of which will be marketed cooperatively.

Boyle county raspberry growers picked 1,400 crates of berries, or about double last year's production.

MISLEADING FOOD LABELS

There are tricks in all trades, and a few unethical food manufacturers label their products with statements and photographs which are misleading but not necessarily illegal under the Federal Food and drugs act. A picture of an Italian olive tree on a label, for example, does not necessarily indicate that the product is Italian olive oil. Sirup in a can bearing a picture of a maple sugar camp may be maple sirup—or it may not.

The consumer may assume that "Golden Corn" is Golden Bantam corn, which may or may not be the case; and the word "Yolkin" may give the impression that the product—perhaps made of soybean lecithin—is egg yolks. The careless label reader may infer that "Pineapple Hearts" are a superior kind of canned pineapple, but this term as used by one canner meant pineapple cores.

A label "Pure Vegetable Oil Flavored" may indicate that the product is a mixture of vegetable oil and mineral oil.

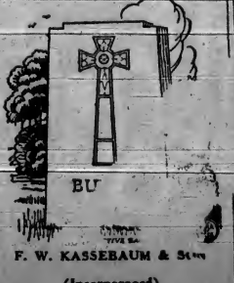
Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years



"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years, I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Principal Or Interest ?

We believe a depositor is more interested in the safety of his principal rather than a PROMISE of high income return.

For that reason this bank joins with the banks of Boone County and the banks of our neighboring Counties in announcing

A Safe and Conservative Rate of
3% ON TIME AND SAVINGS DEPOSITS
on and after August 1st., 1931

When money rates were high in the open market and City correspondents were able to allow a high rate on daily balances, banks could afford to pay 4% on Time and Savings Deposits. With these rates considerably reduced and it being no longer profitable to make investments that will return a profit on 4% money, we think it a sound and conservative move on the part of the Bankers to pay a rate of interest that will enable the banks to continue a sound banking policy.

We will appreciate having our friends call in and discuss any matter of business with us.

PETERSBURG IS SCENE OF FIRST SERIES BATTLE SATURDAY

SERIES PRICE 35 CENTS

Since both the contending teams in the county base ball series are "in the red" on this season's operations it was decided at their meeting Monnday night to raise the price of admission to thirty-five (35c) cents for each game of the series.

This price will apply to adults while children under fifteen years will be admitted for fifteen (15) cents. These two clubs have supplied their followers with high class base ball this season and their respective managements certainly should not be compelled to suffer a deficit. The price to be charged is not excessive and there is no doubt that all who see the games will get full value received.

The regular season closed last Saturday with Petersburg and Walton, the two contending clubs in the series, both winning their games. Walton defeated Hebron 8-4, while Petersburg, with Hugy in the box, won from Believew 5-2.

BIGGEST PROBLEM

OF FRUIT GROWERS SAID TO BE GRADING AND MARKETING OF YIELD—LARGE CROP DECLARED ON HAND

The grading and marketing of the large crop of fruit produced this year were considered the present biggest fruit problem by Boone county orchardmen at two fruit meetings held at C. L. Hempflings of near Constance and Hubert Conner's of near Hebron last Thursday. Commission marketing, retail marketing in town and road side marketing were given special consideration.

The commission market is one of the easiest ways to handle a large volume quick. Local growers agreed that only first quality fruit properly packed should be sold through these channels with all second grade and poorer quality fruit left at home. A ring packing demonstration given by Mr. W. W. Magill from the College of Agriculture was of special interest to all growers present. The ring packing of the fruit alone was recommended as adding 25c per bushel to the selling price.

The selling on the city markets and the road side market at home requires more work but considered as means of securing more money from the crop. Mr. Magill said that Northern Kentucky was far behind other sections of the state in developing of road side markets. The public must be treated fair in this method of selling and made to want to come back.

Mr. Magill in a parting word to peach growers recommended the spraying of the fruit with soluble sulfur to prevent brown rot. Soluble sulfur can be applied 24 hours before picking with not bad results. It is not poisonous and is composed only of sulfur. This is not a cure for brown rot but in two days time may be the means of having a peach crop or not having a peach crop. The meetings were considered profitable by all attending.

Miss Dorothy Nell Furnish and brother, Harvey Winn, left Tuesday for their home in Golden Pond, Trigg county, after an enjoyable visit of several weeks with their grandmother, Mrs. Laura Martin. They will visit relatives in Sparta enroute.

PLENTY OF BURGOO

There will be plenty to eat for everyone at Winchester, Kentucky, on September 12th, the date of the opening of the Democratic State campaign.

At least 1,500 gallons of old-fashioned Kentucky burgoo, made by an expert, will be served to the crowd expected to gather in the Clark county capitol.

About 750 pounds of beef, 144 hens, 25 bushels of tomatoes, 25 bushels of corn, thirty bushels of potatoes, 12 bushels of onions, 2 bushels of turnips, 1 bushel of carrots, 1 bushel of okra, 98 cabbages and 5 pounds in preparing the burgoo.

Ingredients for the savory concoction will be donated by farmers of Clark and adjoining counties, which much interest is being shown in making the event a success.

In fact, the latch string will be out in the Bluegrass counties on Sept. 12th and no one will go hungry—be he white or black, rich or poor—on the day Judge Ruby Laffoon opens the State campaign at Winchester.

AUTOGIRO

TO BE EXHIBITED AT KENTUCKY STATE FAIR—ANNUAL STATE EXHIBITION DECLARED TO BE "KENTUCKY'S SHOW WINDOW"

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 27 (Special)—In line with the Kentucky State Fair's policy to stress educational features at this year's exposition arrangement has been made for a flying exhibition by the first commercial autogiro owned in Ohio. This new type of strange and novel aircraft is said to bring to air travel a hitherto unheard-of degree of the development of popular aviasafety and seems destined to speed tion. The autogiro is owned by the Standard Oil Company of Ohio and has been christened the Sohiogiro. The craft will be on hand for the opening of the fair on Monday, Sept. 14, through the courtesy of Mr. W. E. Smith, President of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky.

"The State Fair" said Newton Bright, Eminence, commissioner of Agriculture, "is Kentucky's greatest show window. The exhibits this year, as perhaps never before, will portray vividly the progress that agriculture is making in our state. The business of farming, like all businesses, is taking note of world-wide changed conditions. Farming is the greatest business in the world because it's the backbone and support of all other businesses and the successful farmer today is the farmer who approaches his problem scientifically. He makes it his business to learn all of the new knacks of management, the selection of profitable crops and better avenues of marketting all of his products whether from field or orchard, live-stock of dairy enterprises. Likewise, the farmer's wife absorbs new ideas for increasing the production and sales of poultry and eggs. We welcome these men and women to the State Fair this year believing that such a visit with its many opportunities for studying new methods will yield rich return in real pleasure and actual profits."

The baptismal services for the Baptist church took place at the Woolper bridge, about six miles west of Burlington, last Sunday afternoon. Rev. F. E. Walker had charge of the services.

Walton and Petersburg Teams Appear To Be Very Evenly Matched as They Prepare For First Conflict of Annual Fall Boone County Championship Base Ball Classic

ONE HAS PITCHING EDGE—OTHER HAS HITTING

Arrangements for the annual fall base ball classic in Boone county were completed at a meeting of representatives of the Petersburg and Walton clubs with R. E. Berkshire, president of the league, Monday night at Burlington.

Lady Luck was on the side of Petersburg and "heads" came up when the coin was tossed, thereby giving them the choice for the opening game, and of course the Petersburg park will be the scene.

Other important details attended to at the meeting included in selection of umpires, division of proceeds and choice of a site for the fifth game, should one be necessary. The first team to win three games will be declared the winner.

The plan is to play the first game at Petersburg, the second at Walton and a third at Petersburg. Each team will take all receipts at each home game until the third, when the proceeds will be divided 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser, if the successful team shall have won three straight. If three straight games have not been won at the end of the third contest the home team will continue to take all receipts through the fourth, which will take all of the net receipts of the deciding game, which will be played on the Burlington grounds.

The question of umpires was decided readily, the Petersburg team offering Claude McWethy and the Walton team Marvin Hudson. A third umpire will be agreed upon before each game. Each team was well pleased with the arbiter selected by the other. At Petersburg McWethy will be the umpire-in-chief and will call balls and strikes behind the plate, while Hudson will work at first base, the third umpire covering second and third. At Walton Hudson and McWethy will reverse, the third man continuing at second and third.

The Petersburg team was represented at the meeting by Manager Charles Ruth and Business Manager H. A. Rogers, Walton being represented by Manager Clyde Laws, Roland Glenn, Bobby Ross and Clifford Dudgeon. Both groups appear extremely "cocky" and neither side was one whit backward about claiming the series in three straight games. It's a safe bet that both were wrong.

Naturaly the Petersburg boys based their claim upon the prowess of their star hurler, Big George Boehler, while Walton quite as naturally founded their assertions on their unquestioned hitting ability. There is no doubt about their prowess in that respect, as witness the fact that they have bumped Boehler harder than any other club he has faced this year.

As to the Walton pitching selection, there is some doubt. They have pitched no one man regularly this season, the work having been divided between Glenn, Norman and Benson, either of which is plenty good when right. But one is constrained to believe that Manager Laws sits behind an ace in the hole in the person of Thomas, of Williamstown, who is on the Walton roster. At any rate the starting hurler for Laws is an unknown quantity, in so far as identity is concerned, but it is safe to say that whoever takes the mound will be ready and will give a good account of himself.

Both of these teams are fast, aggressive, and clever. Both hit well, although Walton possibly has the edge in that respect. In fielding there is possibly very little difference, although close followers of each team will claim the edge. In the box Petersburg will offset the Walton hitting difference with a decided advantage.

The Walton club will be reinforced for the series by Ryan, Berling and Norman, three greater Cincinnati stars of the first water. Norman, one of the best hitters ever to show his wares in this county, has been in the Walton line-up all season, but Ryan and Berling have played but intermittently. So, in spite of Petersburg's great hurling, Walton will show a punch that will force Boehler to trot out his entire repertoire and, suffice it to say, that he will be in there with plenty.

Psycychology, always an undisputed factor in a short, important series, also comes in for consideration. And, again, there seems little to chose from. There is Walton with a row of pennants dangling from their wigwam walls and every man on the team having had

But, on the contrary, one must recognize that fact that the Petersburg club is pungent with youth and literally bubbling over with enthusiasm at being in their first championship series, at the same time owning unlimited confidence in their big pitcher, behind whom they have played inspired base ball throughout the year. And there is no reason to believe that they won't continue in the series.

Another invisible factor in favor of Petersburg is that they have unlimited support of a confident and and enthusiastic fandom, who are volubly jubilant over their maiden entrance into the annual fall setto.

To mention a particular instance the jubilance of one fan down there, John Klopp, to be specific, took form last Thursday night in a chicken supper, which was enjoyed by some twenty odd players and intimates, beside the ladies. Fried chicken and all the trimmings comprised a delicious bill of fare, which was topped off with a desert of "pep" and confidence"—and some of John's choice watermelon.

So, there they are fans. You may take your choice and lay yours on the line. We have no choice and therefore will keep ours in our pockets.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro, of Erlanger, returned last Monday evening from a week's vacation, during which time he visited Mammoth Cave, Nashville, Knoxville and Rugby, Tenn.

Tom Ross, of near Burlington, passed thru town early Wednesday morning enroute to the Florence fair with a very fine looking colt.

Miss Mary Phillips, who had been sojourning with kinspeople in Cincinnati, returned home last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Beemon returned Tuesday evening from Batavia, Ohio, where they had spent a most enjoyable week with Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Atwood.

ORGANIZATION

TUCKY METHODISTS FOR RAISING OF $660,000.00 EDUCATION FUND

Winchester August 24—Organization of forces for the $660,000 Kentucky Methodist Education Fund Campaign is under way this week following a series of meetings of educational leaders from all parts of the State.

Headquarters for the state-wide financial program to raise $660,000 have been established in the Brown-Proctoria Hotel Building here in Winchester, and from this point will be directed the work of organizing 100,000 Kentucky Methodists for this movement.

Funds to be raised in this program for the endowment of Kentucky Wesleyan College at Winchester and Lindsey Wilson Junior College at Columbia, and to meet all outstanding obligations of the Joint Board of Education of the Kentucky and Louisville Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This board governs the two colleges.s

Heading the entire organization will be Bishop W. F. McMurry, of the M. E. Church, South. Bishop McMurry has been in Kentucky assisting in the work of organizing the campaign forces, and he is urging all Methodists of the two Conferences to co-operate to the fullest extent to assure the future of Kentucky Methodism's two colleges.

Working with the Bishop in this stage of the organization are members of the Joint Board of Education and Dr. C. M. Connelly, president of Kentucky Wesleyan, and Dr. R. V. Bennett, president of Lindsey Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Cowen, of Cincinnati, were visiting relatives here last Sunday.

HARVEST HOME

BEING PREPARED FOR ANNUAL MEETING DAY ON SEPTEMBER 12TH—"BABES OF AIR" WILL BE THERE

That historic beech woods at Harvest Home, which has been publicized so often that the mention has become proverbial, again will welcome a "home" coming on September 12th., the second Saturday in the month.

To mention just all that will take place on that notable day would be drawing too much upon our imagination, but the catalog, of course, speaks for itself. These books may be had upon application at this office, or at the various banks in the county. The Recorder force has completed the printing of the catalogs the first of this week and they are now being distributed by officers of the association. If you see a red booklet—its one of them.

Beside the various farm exhibits that always attract, one will find the usual fair concessions and amusements on the grounds, while a number of special attractions have been obtained. Free dancing all afternoon, while you may continue at a nominal sum in the evening.

Possibly the greatest attraction of the day annd evening will be the Air, Betty and Flossie, whose prowess is familiar to every radio fan. These former stars of W. C. K.. Y. will be there for your entertainment. They boast the first prize at the Ohio State Fair last year and the Harvest Home management is especially proud to have them on their program. These youthful stars will go on Paramount Circus October first.

The management urgently invites you and insists that you will be sorry if you make any other date for September 12th.

PUTTING AMERICANS ON THE JOB

There is food for thought for all state governments in a recent action by the Federal Government, taken at the instance of the State of Massachusetts. Briefly, Massachusetts asked the Federal Commissioner of Labor to stop issuing labor permits to French-Canadian workers until times improve, and Washington thereupon cancelled all existing permits and issued an order to refrain from granting any more for a time. As a result hundreds of American workingmen are back on the pay-roll.

The situation arose from the closing down of many newsprint mills in Canada, where poper for most of the newspapers in the U. S. is made. This action threw hundreds of French-Canadian woodchoppers out of work and they flocked across the border into Maine and readily got jobs cutting timber for pulp-wood for American mills.

French-Canadians have a special aptitude for chopping down trees. It takes a special knack to fell a tree so that it will not injure standing timber in its fall, and this is an art that has long been mastered by Quebec workers. They are much sought after by all companies who are felling trees.

In former years many of these men emigrated to New England and became naturalized, pursuing their former calling. Recently, however, they found work slack and flocked by the hundreds to Boston and other Yankee coast towns, waiting for hard times to end. Meanwhile hundreds of French-Canadians have been working in the Maine woods while their American fellow-workers were idle. This has been changed by action from Washington.

Other states might profit by following Massachusetts' example. It might pay Florida to investigate how many Cuban cigar-makers are working in Tampa; Texas might study how many Mexicans are riding herd while American cowboys are whittling; Kansas may be employing many Canadian harvest hands, and so on.

There is hardly a state in the Union which might not be able to return many of its taxpeyers and citizens to work by uncovering a similar situation to that of the alien wood-choppers in the Maine woods and following the lead set by Massachusetts.

The Family Garden

TIMELY TOPICS

CELERY—The season of cool nights and improved moisture conditions is about to come, and celery will begin growing toward maturity. The first step in finishing celery is drawing soil to the row, and packing it about the stems so as to hold them upright. Very good, too, is sidedressing the rows with nitrate of soda, at the rate of one pound to 100 stalks. If water is at hand it is excellent to soak down the soil about the roots in order to dissolve the nitrate. Next best is to wait until just before a rain. A second dressing should te made in two weeks, when blanching can be begun.

A thorough spraying with 4-4-50 bordeaux should be given now.

There are two methods of blanching. One is to use soil, and the other types of roofing paper. For the easy-blanching types, such as Silver Plume, Columbia and Golden Self Planching, earth blanching is not generally used, because the blanching of these varities is begun while the weather is still warm. The earth used in blanching lies so close to the stems that air is excluded, and heating and rotting takes place rapidly. The blanching of the winter varieties Winter Queen and Giant Pascal is begun about two weeks after that of the earlier sorts, and the weather is correspondingly cooler.

FALL LETTUCE—The last week in August is the time for setting fall lettuce seedlings in the garden or in coldframes. The soil should be well enriched with fairly well-rotted manure worked in thoroughly. It is advisable to shade the transplants during the heat of the day, with a lattice, of brush or canvas, raised about 18 inches above the ground surface. The spacing for Grand Rapids leaf lettuce should be 8 inches each way, but that for New York, a heading sort, should be 12 inches. May we say, incidentally, that head lettuce such as New York, Hanson (Big Boston should not be used in the fall) will make heads of itself; no tying is needed. In fact, tying up heads cannot help.

BEANS—Since there has been more or less of a shortage of this important vegetable, it is not a bad idea to try, even late as it is, to mature another planting. If any variety will do this, Tennessee Greenpod will. So may Red Valentine. Refertilizing, particularly with a phosphatic fertilizer, will hasten matters.

CABBAGE WORM—This pest has been most troublesome throughout the season, and shows little sign lead arsenate and lime, in the proportions of 1 to 6, by weight, makes an effective dust.

PLANT LICE—It is well to watch closely the kale and turnip seedlings just coming up, for the plant lice start so unobstrusively that irreparable damage may be done in short time. Nicotine sulphate spray or dust, or pyrethrum spray (either of the lately developed commercial forms) are control for plant lice.

TOMATOES—If the foliage has been kept protected by bordeaux mixture, but if the fruit size is dwindling, it may be because of the exhaustion of fertility. This may be remedied by sowing nitrate of soda about the plants where the later roots are, at a radius of 12 to 15 inches from the center of the hills. The rate is 1 pound to 35 plants. Plants so fertilized will take on new life, when the fall rains come, and an acceptable "second crop may be harvested.

OWNERS OF BETTER SIRES ALSO WANT BETTER DAMS

When a farmer enrolls in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign sponsored by the Bureau of Animal Industry he sends to the United States Department of Agriculture a pledge to use only purebred sires in his flocks and herds.

The "better sires" beget better stock, but it is also evident that the better sires beget ideas in the minds of their owners. The man who owns a purebred sire is likely soon to want purebred dams as well—and is likely to get them.

The basic idea of the "Better Sires"—Better Stock" campaign is that the purebred sires will "grade up" and improve the flocks and herds. Give them time, and they will. But reports from the more than 17,500 stock owners who have enrolled show that many of them want to hasten the improvement. They know they can do so by acquiring purebred females.

The latest figures showing improvement of livestock, as acquired to the department, reveal han on these 17,500 farms where there are no scrub or grade sires there are, on an average, for every purebred sire includinug cattle, horses, swine, sheep, and goats—6 purebred females, 2 crossbred females, nine grade females, and less than half a scrub female.

RAILROADS FIGHT FOREST FIRES

Recently a locomotive engineer discovered a "smoke" while making his run in the Whetstone mountains in the Coronado National Forest near Tucson, Arizona. He telephoned the forest supervisor from Mescal railroad station, and forest rangers promptly extinguished the fire.

Railroads were formerly one of the leading causes of forest fires. While many fires still break out along railroad lines, trainmen are showing increasing interest is improving spark arresters, safeguarding rights of way, and in other ways cooperating to present the outbreak of forest fires, according to the U. S. Forest Service.

"THAT LITTLE GANE"

NUTS IMPROVE IN QUALITY UNDER THE PURE FOOD LAW

Uncle Sam kept a sharp eye on nuts, both domestic and imported, during 1930, according to W. R. M. Wharton, chief of the Federal Food and Drug Administration's eastern district, who reports that inspectors of his district examined 1,000 importations of nuts, totaling more than 26,000,000 pounds. The varieties covered include almonds, Brazils, cashew nuts, chestnuts, filberts pistachois, and walnuts. Of the thousand lots examined, the Government detained 92 aggregating slightly more than a million lbs., because they violated the Federal food and drug act, being wormy, moldy, rancid, decomposed, shriveled, or empty.

Just before the holidays Federal food agents inspected nuts held in storage in order to determine their quality prior to the sale during the holiday season. About 1,400 lots were examined, and the inspection resulted in 14 seizures of different kinds of nuts and the removal from the market of large quantities which were unfit for sale.

"This regulatory work, says Mr. Wharton, "with its resulting improvement in quality of the nuts finally going into consumption, has protected the consumer and also increased the confidence of the buyer in the quality of nuts on sale. Careful inspection is also a good thing for the producer and dealer, since it encourages consumption. The public buys more nuts when it is assured of a sound and wholesome product."

BREED EWES NOW FOR EARLY LAMBS

It is especially important to Kentucky farmers to market lambs ahead of Western lambs. This can be done, but farmers must breed their ewes early. During the early part of the season the main competition is from Tennessee and California. Later lambs from the north west and central west are moved to market in large quantities, thus increasing market supply.

In a study made by the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, prices of lambs show a distinct drop in June. Often this decline amounts to as much as $3.00 per hundred. Consequently if Kentucky lambs were finished for market prior to this June decline in prices, even at a slightly greater cost of production, farmers would be well paid for it.

In order to produce early lambs the ewes should be bred in either August or September. This would result in lambs being dropped in January or February. Some farmers would of necessity have to change their methods slightly and give more care to the ewe prior to lambing. More feeding both prior to lambing and afterward will be necessary, as pastures during that period will not be sufficiently advanced to provide the necessary feed. Feed, however, from all present indications should be relatively cheap next winter, and farmers could undoubtedly afford to use more of it in getting lambs on the market early.

Twenty Clay county farmers are growing Neal's Paymaster corn this year, in an effort to find an improved variety.

Many Wayne county farmers are growing their first tobacco crop, according to County Agt. H. J. Hayes.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

ARE ALL THE CHANCES GONE?

You run across all sorts of surprises in the course of a business week. For instance, the vice-president of a big chain store organization was telling me a business story. And what do you suppose he based it on? The Bible.

He has charge of the company's personnel. It is a job to sort over a hundred young fellows in order to find the one who will start at small wages, work long hours, and fight his way up to the top.

The prizes are big, but the battle is hard, and only the toughest survive.

The part of the Bible to which the vice-president referred was the Feeding of the Five Thousand. Five thousands tired and hungry people The Lord said, "Feed them."

His disciples who were practical men, were aghast. "We can't do it," they protested. "It would take too much money."

Others urged "Send them away."

Finally a boy was discovered in the crowd with five small loaves and two fishes. Said my friend: "All they had to work with was what that boy had.

"So with our company," he continued. "It's one of the leaders, yet there isn't a really brilliant man in it. We've all come up from the ranks.

"We can get money to do anything that we need; but money alone won't do it.

"We can get materials and equipment.

"But all we really have to work with is what our four thousand boys have. They are going to decide what this business will be in the years to come."

When we had this conversation business was booming and all big industries were employing more people. Since then we have had a heart-breaking period of unemployment.

But, good times or bad times, the search for ability goes on. At the bottom of the depression the president of one great industry asked me if I knew where he could find a twenty-five-thousand dollar man. The president of another said: "We have installed a system of compulsory pensions. We must make sure that this business will continue in the future to be run by young men."

The size and the set-up of business change, but their message to youth is just the same

"Come on with your five loaves and two fishes. All we have to go on is what you boys have."

MORE FIRST AID

A small boy isn't worth a cent that doesn't try to climb the shade tree in the rear lawn once in awhile. Naturally he may fall in his effort to get somewhere that he doesn't belong. He may tumble from his tricycle in an unusual spurt of speed. He cuts his scalp; it bleeds something fierce; he runs to mamma howling for first aid.

Don't fear fracture of the skull from a trfling injury. Don't fear bleeding to death. Wash the wound with clean soap and warm water, using clean things always. DON'T POUR PEROXIDE IN A SCALP WOUND at any period. After washing as above, paint the wound with tincture of iodine; smarts a little, but apply it freely. Dust freely with talcum powder and apply a loose bandage. Keep the wound dry until recovery.

For a crop of chiggers, get at 'em early as possible, before they have bored in deeply. First a scrubbing with good soap and water, dry, and apply the bug-i-cide, whatever you have. I use a mixture of carbolic acid, one dram, spirits camphor, one ounce, menthol twenty grains, and rose-water, enough to make four ounces. This can be daubed over the lesions freely, allowing it to dry without wiping off.

Sunburn is not to be sneezed at —it has been accompanied by big doses of the ultra-violent ray—a blessing in disguise. The oxide of zinc, a dram to the ounce of rose-water ointment will soothe the inflamed skin in time. Keep out of the fierce sunlight until well.

For a child's "busted toe," bruised, torn and bleeding, soak the foot in water with a teaspoonful of carbolic acid—or formalin—to the pint. Make the member clean. Then apply soft dressing of carbolized or borated vaseline and wrap comfortably.

And, O, green apples! Colic! A big dose of milk of magnesia real quick. Who would object to fifteen drops of paregoric for the pain?

THE E MISSION OF CYRUS
Acts 11:25-13:13
Rev. Samuel Price, D. D.

Foreign missions is a genuine romance and there is always an abundance of thrills in its study, whether you go back to the Acts or turn to events in modern history. Antioch had become a new and larger center of Christian activity, but not neglected. The apostle had agreed to gather funds for the poor saints of the mother church and the friends in Antioch send such an offering by Barnbas and Saul. Some months previously Saul had been called from Tarsus by Barnabas to help in the growing work in Antioch. At Jerusalem they met John Mark, probably the young man who drew the sword in the garden of Gethsemane in defense of Jesus, and brought him with them to Antioch.

Christianity always has an outreach and ceases to be Christian when only self is considered. While in prayer in the Antioch church the needs of others are being considered and, through the Holy Spirit, there is a definite call for Barnabas and Saul to undertake a preach ing mission in Cyprus, an island some distance off the coast. The call is accepted and John Mark is taken along as a general helper.

Preaching begins at the first port and the messages are continued until they reach the further side of the island. At Paphos they had an audience with Sergius Paulus, the governor. As the truth is proclaimed, Elymas, the sorcerer, is greatly disturbed, for if what these messengers declare is accepted by the governor the magician will lose his pull at court. An outcry is made by Elymas which is replied to in an forceful language by Saul and blindness is the penalty for his presumption to seek to stay the progress of the gospel. Such evidences are not to be denied and Sergius makes open confession of his faith.

Hints for the Home by Nancy Hart

Rhubarb Dumplings

Wash and cut the rhubarb in inch pieces, and stew with little more than half its weight in sugar and just a little water. While it is cooking mix a flour batter in the proportion of a pint of flour, a half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and a scant cup of sweet milk, then drop it by the spoonful into the boiling rhubarb. The result is delicious. Eat hot with or without cream.

Beet and Rhubarb Jelly

This is a fine relish to serve with the meat course. Take equal parts of young beets, boiled tender, and rhubarb sliced without peeling. Cook together until very tender, put through a sieve, then through a jelly bag. Measure the juice, and to a pint allow a pound of sugar. Heat the sugar in the oven, add to the hot juice and cook five minutes longer. Turn into heated glasses and cover when cold with paraffin.

Rhubarb and Orange

Cut the rhubarb in short lengths and cover with sugar for an hour before cooking. Then cook in a double boiler, with the juice of one orange squeezed over it, and no water. When tender, cool and serve.

With Bacon

To many American housewives there seems to be but one way of cooking and serving bacon—that is, cooked in a frying pan for breakfast, either with or without fried eggs. Yes—and there's liver and bacon—served more often for a lunch or dinner dish now that we don't have such hearty breakfasts. But that is about the extent of many housewives' bacon repertoire.

Sweet Custard

Make the same as the above, mixing 1½ teaspoons sugar with the egg and of course omitting the beef extract.

Marion county sheep raisers are planning to breed for extra early lambs.

An acre of raspberries on the Fordson farms in Pike county produced 700 gallons of berries.

At least 50 per cent of the wheat growers in Oldham county are planning to wheat to livestock.

Better Results If Democrats Organize House, Says Holmes

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co Recorder

With President Hoover relaxing and recuperating down on the Rapidan, with Secretaries Mellon and Stimson in Europe, with Mount in a state of temporary quiescence with John Raskob just off the boat from Halifax with his three charming daughters declining to say a word about the presidential situation, with Jouett Shouse back on the firing line with no more formidable weapon than a popgun, with Bishop Jas. Cannon, Jr., too far away from us to be heard even over a short-wave circuit, with the Farm Board reneging on its proposition of ploughing up each third row of cotton, with that unidentified bogey called the Power Trust Trust reported as being split in two with politicians in California discrediting reports that Senator Hiram Johnson will enter the Republican primaries next year as a candidate for the presidential nomination, with the Roosevelt-Tammany handicap still anybody's game, but mute congressmen spread all over the seven seas, and with Norris, Nye, Brookhart and even Pinchot refusing to act as life-guards for drowning correspondents, one would think that Washington was naturally in a state of somnolence.

Perish the thought! We are organizing the next House — both Houses, as a matter of fact. OOf course, we are doing this in a perfectly non-partisan spirit. Looking at it purely from the standpoint of effective government and without any flavor of partisanship, it certainly seems likely that better results will be obtained if the Democrats rather than the Republicans organize the next House.

What inspires this conclusion is the fact that a Democratic Speaker is very much more apt to have behind him a functioning majority than a Republican Speaker. Any analysis of the vote will show that. If the balance between the parties is maintained after the elections to fill vacancies, it is true that the Republicans will have a paper majority of two. They will have 218 votes to the Democrats 216. However, included in the 218 are who will not support a Republican Speaker after his selection or follow a regular Republican leader. Their disposition will be to form a coalition with the Democrats to frustrate every Republican proposal and render futile all Administration legislative attempts.

At the same time, if the Democrats organize the House, the question whether the rule by which committee chairmanships go by seniority will become acute. By a curious freak, seven Texans will be chairmen of House committees if the Democrats control, not to mention another Texan, John N. Garner as Speaker of the House. And among the seven committees are four that are among the most important in the House. Jos. W. Byrns, of Tennessee, is the ranking Democrat on the Appropriations Committee, but Mr. Byrns will undoubtedly be floor leader if Mr. Garner is elected Speaker. Next in line is James P. Buchanan, of Texas. He will be chairman of this most important committee if the seniority custom is followed.

On Interstate and Foreign Commerce, another important committee, Sam Rayburn, of Texas, is the ranking member. On Judiciary, Hatton W. Summers and on Agriculture, Marvin Jones, both of Texas, are the ranking members. In addition, Guinn Williams, of Texas, will become chairman of the Committee on Insular Affairs, F. G. Lanham, of Texas, will be chairman of the Committee on Patents or of that on Public Buildings and Grounds, and Joseph J. Mansfield, of Texas, will be chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. The only two very important committee chairmanships that will not go to Texas are Ways and Means and Rules.

Due to the fact that most of the Democrats of long service are Southern, other States south of the Mason & Dixon Line will do very well in chairmanships. Alabama will have four, although none of them is a committee of the first rank. Mississippi and North Carolina, with three each, will outrank Alabama in the importance of their committee chairmanships. Collier, of Mississippi, will be chairman of the important Ways and Means Committee while Quinn, of the same State, will head Military Affairs. Pou, of North Carolina, will be chief of the very powerful Rules Committee.

There has been but one case in recent years in which the House of Representatives has ignored the claims of seniority in selecting the chairmen of standing committees. That was in 1921, when the late James W. Good resigned from Congress to practice law, leaving vacant the chairmanship of the Committee on Appropriations, perhaps ordinarily the most important committee in the House. The ranking Republican on the committee was C. R. Davis, of Minnesota. It was not thought that Davis measured up to the mark. The ablest Republican on the committee, Martin B. Madden, of Illinois, rated just below him. The Republicans were in a majority. They passed over Mr. Davis and made Mr. Madden chairman. So the trick is not impossible.

Should either Mr. Snell or Mr. Tilson be elected Speaker, the condition of the House would be chaotic from the start. The Speaker would have to line up and keep lined up every one of the Progressive Republicans in order to get thru so much as a motion to adjourn. It simply couldn't be done. He would not know from one day to the next whether or not he was going to be Speaker. Just one soured Progressive could unseat him at any time. Even an approach to stability in the House organization would be lacking. The situation would be full of absurd possibilities, with unprecedented opportunities for the trouble-makers, the demagogues and the spellbinders to tie the House into a daily knot and present a grotesque exhibition of our form of government.

The problems of ignoring the claims of seniority, if the Democrats organize the House this time, will be much more complicated. It will not be a case of passing over one or two Democrats at the top of the list in important committees in order to obtain better men. It will be one of abandoning the seniority system to obtain a better distribution of chairmanships. If seniority prevails, the South will have practically all the chairmanships and the majority leadership will go to Bryns, of Tennessee. There is a great deal of criticism of this custom on the ground that it results in the selection of chairmen without regard to their ability and solely on the ground of length of service. However, to do away with it would strengthen the power of the House machine. In such circumstances the little group that the House would have all the important chairmanships at its disposal. The stand-patters would have a monopoly on the good jubs.

On the whole, no matter which side organizes, the coming House session is certain to be futile and absurd, with Congress passing a mass of half-baked bills and the President returning them with a chain of vetoes which in number will probably break all records. It will be an edifying spectacle, although it is possible that one good thing may come out of it. It may sicken the American people of coalition majorities and in 1932 bring about the election of a sufficient number of regulars to restore party control in Congress for one side or the other. The last six years have demonstrated that our system functions badly when there no party control.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years
"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.
"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years, I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Mrs. Myrtle May Ashcraft, aged 48 years, wife of Wootson Ashcraft, died Friday morning at her home 632 Bellinger Ave., Elsmere, following a short illness.

She was well known in Northern Kentucky for her activities in missionary work and was a faithful member of the Elsmere Baptist church, as well as being President of the Woman's Missionary Society. She was also prominent in her lodge, being district deputy of the daughters of America.

Funeral services were conducted ot the Elsmere Baptist church on Monday at 10 o'clock, by the Rev. J. A. Miller, pastor, after which the remains were taken to Williamstown, Ky., for interment.

Beside her husband Mrs. Ashcraft is survived by a son and four daughters, in addition to a host of other relatives and friends.

END CAME AFTER LONG ILLNESS; FUNERAL ON SUNDAY

(From Florida Advocate)

Mrs. Elizabeth Ellen Arrowood, beloved wife of G. H. Arrowood, died Saturday about noon at her home at Wauchula Hills, after a long illness.

Death came as a distinct shock to her many friends and acquaintances, who grieved to learn of the passing of this popular lady.

The funeral obsequies were held Sunday morning, August 16th, at Wauchula cemetery and were conducted by Rev. Ryan Wood, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The short services at the grave were attended by a large crowd of sorrowing friends and acquaintances. There were numerous floral offerings, mute testimony of the esteem with which she was held in the community where she had lived for eight years.

Coker's Funeral Home had charge of the impressive funeral, which was perfectly executed. Pallbearers were W. T. Gunter, O. F. Wells O. T. Wadsworth, Hosea Albritton, Sam Bostick, Louis Bostick, Chas. and Turner Himrod, and Max Hardee. Flower girls were Mesdames Hosea Albritton, Turner Himrod, J. M. Stevens and O. T. Wadsworth.

Mrs. Arrowood was born in Union, Boone county, Kentucky, Dec. 21, 1882, being 48 years old at the time of her demise. She came here with her husband and only son John Winfrey Arrowood, survive, with one sister, Mrs. S. P. Johnson, and the following brothers: W. R. Sidney, Richard, Harvey and Jack Rouse.

LULA ANN SURFACE

Lula Ann Surface, daughter of Martin and Mary Surface, was born March 28th, 1895, departed this life August 15th, 1931. She united with the Petersburg Christian church at the age of 13 years, being a faithful member until illness prevented. She was united in marriage to Forest Brady March 11th, 1916. To this union God blessed them with one daughter, Melvin, two step sons Hubert and Harold, who with their father greatly feel the loss of this loved one. She also leaves to mourn her loss, her mother and father Mary and Martin Surface, and one brother Luther Surface, besides a host of relatives and friends.

We often sit and think of her when we are alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Live ivy on the withered oak when all other things decay,
Our love for her will still keep green and never fade away.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all who were so kind to us during the illness and death of our beloved one Mrs. Lula Brady, the neighbors who were so good, Mr. Williams for his kind attention, donors of the beautiful flowers, the ones who were so good to sing and the music. Especially Mr. R. H. Carter for his most comforting words. May the Lord bless all who in any way helped at this time of need.

The Family

From Our Early Files

FIFTY YEARS AGO

An exchange says that Freiburg and Workum are talking of building a narrow guage railroad from Cincinnati to their distillery in Petersburg. The citizens of Petersburg will unanimously second the motion, but how heavy financially we are not able to say.

Next week the fair commences, and although the season has not been at all favorable, the display of farm produce will be one of which the farmers need not be ashamed. We trust that it can be said again at the close of the present exhibition that the Boone Fair has but few equals in the State. Everything about the grounds has been inspected and put in good order for the week.

Corn was selling for one dollar a bushel in Covington last week.

Miss Harriet Neal killed a snake the other day in which were found 37 little snakes that the reptile had swallowed.

Mr. Griffith, of Belleview, lost a six year old child with consumption the other day.

We noticed Joe Reed on the hurricane deck of another mule the other day—but he had a little boy on behind him to show him the way.

Richard Utz killed last Saturday the mad dog that made a tour of the Belleview neighborhood. He did not know that it was a rabid dog when he shot it.

The building belonging to R. C. Green and in which Davis Brothers have their store is being fitted up for a hotel. The work commenced last Friday under the directions of Arthur Blythe and J. W. Kirkpatrick. The store will put up its shutters by or before the first of October next, much to the regret of all the people of the town.

Florence

Old father Shotts, after a painful illness of six months with cancer, passed away into what have been to him a longed for sleep on Wednesday the 10th, in his 64th year. Funeral was preached by Rev. W. S. Keene at the Christian church.

Hebron

Miss Emma Thomas, highly accomplished and entertaining young lady from Jeffersonville, Indiana, is visiting Robt. Bradford's.

It is evident that there are several "moonshiners" in this locality whose annoyances are becoming a little too frequent to be tolerated. Not long since Mrs. Lucinda Clore had nearly all of her meat stolen; last Sunday week while Lystra Aylor and family were absent from home when their house was plundered and six dollars stolen after the scoundrels had satiated their voracious appetites after devouring all the eatables they could get their hands on. Editor's Note—what did he mean—"moonshiners?" They don't have to steal nowadays.

Walton

Mrs. Jennie Coffman started on a two week's visit last week with relatives in Felicity, Ohio.

Miss Hattie Petitt who has been visiting her sister Mrs. L. S. Edwards, left on Sunday evening for her home in Pittsburg, Penn., much to the regret of that genial old bachelor, Orrin Percival.

McCORD-CAMP NUPTIALS

(Contributed)

The beautiful home of Mrs. Byrde McCord, near Petersburg, was the scene of one of the most beautiful weddings this writer ever has witnessed, Wednesday evening, August 19th, at 6 o'clock, when Miss Emelyn, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. McCord was united in holy wedlock with Mr. Frank Camp, of Hopkinsville.

At the appointed hour Mrs. E. W. Keim at the piano played the accompaniment for Rev. Herbert D. Woodruff, who very beautifully rendered "At Dawning" and "O Perfect Love." Then Mrs. William Bailey (nee Marjorie Wentzel) began the soft strains of Lohengrins wedding march. All eyes then turned to the door thru which the bridal party were to enter.

The groom and his brother, Jas. Camp, entered from a side door and awaited at the beautifully candle lit altar. Miss Katherine McCord came down the improvised aisle of huge baskets of garden flowers linked together with pink ribbon, followed by the lovely bride in her snowy gown of satin, carrying an armful of brides roses, and on the arm of the beloved minister, R. H. Carter, who, with the ever touching ring ceremony, joined these two young lives to be as one.

After congratulations all were invited to the artistically decorated dining room, where delicious refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. Camp, Miss Nancy Camp, of Hopkinsville, Jas. Camp, of Nashville, Tennessee, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McCord and Miss Katherine McCord of Milton, Mrs. Jas. Elam, of Bowling Green, Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Woodruff, of May's Lick, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Palmer, of Ft. Wayne, Indiana, J. L. McCord, father of the bride, of Louisville, Rev. and Mrs. Carter, of Butler, Mrs. Sue Williams, of Warsaw, Mrs. Emma Wentzel, of Delhi, Mrs. Hally Grosbeck, of Cincinnati, Mrs. William Bailey, of Indianapolis, Miss Ida Lillard, of Owenton, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Berkshire, Norris Berkshire, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Berkshire, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Keim, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Conner Carver, Miss Nell Stephens, John Lloyd and Miss Elizabeth Walton, Edward Helm, Mrs. H. C. Matthews and Miss Laura Mae Matthews.

The happy young couple left amid a shower of rice for a motor trip, after which they will go to their new home at Hodgenville where Mr. Camp will be principal of the high school and athletic instructor.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Rouse entertained a number of young folks at their attractive home on the Belleview pike last Sunday evening. Those who enjoyed their hospitality were Misses Wilma Cotton, Martha Blythe and Dorothy Nell Furnish and Messrs. Bailey Greenup, William Greenup and Wilton Stephens.

LITTLE JULIUS SNEEZER — BY BAKER

Not an Old Custom

Was Gift of Ordinary Man

Speaking can now be broadcast to millions of people but millions of men have been unable to do a thing to improve the speeches. Napoleon, given time, found they can be improving the species. How rare is the genius of true oratory; rarer far than that of poet, sculptor or painter, F. H. Collier comments, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. America has never had but one Daniel Webster. It has produced a score to vocalist us in music with their voices, others to read the lines of drama with telling effect, but the orator who escape his audience along with himself in enthusiasm is one in ten millions.

Most of the people who say something stirring, do it with the pen. Thought flows easily from the fingers but apparently not from the tongue. Many are expert and convincing in their speech making—dealing mainly in facts and coreet arguments; but that is not oratory in its highest sense; the oratory of Mark Antony, of Demosthenes, of Burke, of Henry Ward Beecher, of Robert Ingersoll, of Phillips Brooks.

In some instances, eloquence has become grandiloquence; whereas effective elocution, moving the emotions and remaining permanently as a fine structure of rhetorical value is always restrained; such as Lincoln's address at Gettysburg; and Webster's debate with Hayne.

Poor Food Set Before Early French Monarchs

The science of cookery did not always flourish in France. It languished in a very inferior state under the early monarchs. "Gregory of Tours has preserved the account of a repast of French warriors, at the unrelieved rudeness of which we are astounded," writes Anthony Clyne in the Boston Transcript. Charlemagne lived poorly and ate but little. Philippe le Bel was hardly half an hour at the table, and Francis I thought more of amorous dalliance than of eating and drinking. Nevertheless, it was under this last king that the science of cookery took its rise in France. Few have heard the name of Gonthier d'Andernach. What Bacon was to philosophy, Dante or Petrarch to poetry, Copernicus or Galileo to astronomy, Gonthier was in France to gastronomy. Before him, their culinary code was a collection of scraps picked up here and there, the names of dishes were as barbarous and uncouth as the dishes themselves.

Gonthier is the father of cookery, as Descartes of French philosophy. It is said that he invented, in less than ten years, nine ragouts, thirty-one sauces and twenty-one soups.

Tempting Dog's Appetite

Nursing a sick dog, especially when it is in the convalescent stage, is not an easy task, as any dog owner who has been through it knows. One owner was having great difficulty in getting his dog to eat. He mentioned the matter to another dog owner, an old-timer who has been through much of it. Said he: "I got this from an old lady when I was a kid and I'm no spring chicken. You might think it's an old-fashioned notion, but I've tried it and never knew it to fail. Try the dog on a little smoked herring, just enough to get him started. It's great as an appetizer."

The owner followed the suggestion, and sure enough the dog ate the smoked herring, with relish, and then turned to a few other things. After a few days, with an occasional taste of smoked herring, the dog's appetite came back. Old-fashioned or not, the treatment was successful.—Brockton Enterprise.

Robert Burns' Marriage

Burns legally married Jean Armour in 1788, about two years after he had contracted a secret and irregular marriage with her, which was acknowledged in writing. Her father was indignant at the secret marriage, compelled his daughter to give up Burns and also forced her to destroy the document which vouched the marriage. In April 1788 the poet privately acknowledged her as his wife. On August 3 of that year a legal ceremony was performed at Gavin Hamilton's house, and two days later they acknowledged their marriage in the Mauchline church.

Beautiful Flanders

The enticements of the Middle ages linger on everywhere in Bruges and Ghent where some of the finest examples of the Flemish builders' art are found and whose deep but sweet-toned bells have rung out alarms of war and paens of victory in the past and remain to delight the modern visitor with their music. Carillon concerts are held in both cities during the summer and also in Malines, Tournai and other places. The belfries of Bruges and Ghent are world shrines and the flower and bulb fields of the latter are equaled only in Holland.

Childish Simplicity

Four-year-old Billie had spent a happy afternoon with a little neighborhood visitor. When his mother asked the child's name, he replied he did not know.

"Will you please tell me how you could play together so long without knowing each other's names?" insisted his mother.

"O, that was easy," said the resourceful Billie, "I just called her 'Hey' and she called me 'Say.'"

Crocodiles Victims of Their Own Bad Temper

Crocodiles have been endowed by some other creatures with the gift of humor and are believed to find it a healthful asset. While the world has stood gaping at the spectacle of an hysterical reptile, the crocodile has gazed to greater purpose. Now, however, he is to lose the advantage of surprise and his tears will be a ruse no longer, says the London Times. Imperial scientific research has found out something about crocodiles which it would be very decidedly worth their own while to know.

Researches carried on in Uganda have shown that crocodiles have a secret grief. They are very human in some ways and are inclined to sleep with their mouths open. There is nothing wrong so far, and if crocodiles pass most of their lives in a useless nobody will complain. But it appears that the tsetse fly is addicted to walking around the open mouths of sleeping crocodiles and to biting the softer parts.

Crocodiles let this irritation master them and pay a terrible price for their bad temper. They snap their jaws and swallow the flies and with them the germ of the sleeping sickness. It is the old story of the lion and the mouse—that kindness, or at least forbearance, from the bigger beast pays in the long run.

One Mushroom Variety Expert Had Overlooked

One of the most nourishing viands to be found in the fields is the mushroom, and while they are rather liberally consumed, there are many persons who will not risk eating them for fear of mistaking the poisonous toadstool for the edible mushroom.

But it is rare that one hears of a man dying through experimenting with foods. Yet it happened a short time ago. A famous expert on mushrooms, M. Cottin, died of mushroom poisoning.

This Frenchman was probably the greatest living expert on mushrooms, and wrote a book on his pet subject. He was also careful to illustrate the book with pictures showing mushrooms that could be eaten with safety and those that were dangerous. Apparently M. Cottin discovered a mushroom that he had not listed. He ate it to make sure and died.

English Like Pantomimes

Englishmen in exile seem to cling to pantomime as rabidly as to plum pudding, writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. When the Resolute wintered in the ice at Melville island in 1852 Christmas was celebrated by the production of a pantomime, which had the novelty of being played entirely for the fun of the performers. There was no audience, for every member of the crew took part, with the commander, Sir George Nares, starring as Columbine.

In 1875, when organizing a polar expedition in the Alert, Nares "reopened the Royal Arctic theater" after it had been closed for 28 years, and pantomime was again the favorite pastime of all concerned.

"As You Like It"

Various commentators have advanced different theories as to why Shakespeare's play was given the name "As You Like It." Braithwait, however, in his "Barnaby's Journal," speaks of "As You Like It" as a proverbial motto, and this seems more likely to imply the true explanation of the title of Shakespeare's play. The title of the comedy may on this supposition be exactly parallel with that of "Much Ado About Nothing." The proverbial title of the play implies the freedom of thought and indifference to censure which characterizes the sayings and doings of most of the actors in this comedy of human nature in a forest.

Shows Good Census

"How many are there in your family, madam?"

"Just my husband and I."

"No."

"Any dogs or cats?"

"No."

"Do you have a radio?"

"No."

"Now, have you any saxophones, pianolas, ukuleles or other musical instruments?"

"Indeed not. And why all these questions?"

"Madam, I'm just the man who intends to rent the house next door."—London Opinion.

Head or Heart?

"Late," informs a Tablet subscriber, "I am impoturned, day and night, to subscribe to this and to that. Considering the times, wouldn't it be better to give a bit to each and ask no questions, than to be considered hard-hearted?" "That," replies the editor, "we can best answer by quoting Theodore Roosevelt, the beloved. He said: 'Hardness of heart, is a doubtful quality, but it is doubtful whether it works more damage than softness of head.'"—Exchange.

Spinach Cook

Ruth Ellen and her mother were taking their first dinner with friends. After the four-year-old was served she surveyed her food with a critical eye and said:

"My Aunt Rose has a cook that can cook doughnuts but ours is just like yours, a spinach cook."

Napoleon Made Careful Study of Art of War

Napoleon's own words and the light thrown from his genius is well known, but there was far more to his campaigns than mere flashes of brilliant improvisation. It was the result—the result of genius to eye-tormenting data—of long and painful study not merely of the technicalities of his profession, but of its "divine parts," of which he found details in the theoretical work of his predecessors and in the campaigns of those who alone are his rivals. There was, as Professor Wilkinson shows, nothing miraculous about that first campaign. Napoleon's own special gifts amounted to genius, especially his comprehension of men and his swiftness of decision, but his peculiar grasp of the art of war was the result of long study and meditation. Before he was in command in Italy he had written the memorandum that forms the basis of his campaign, a memorandum which laid down the conditions of success and was derived from a study of earlier campaigns, of political history, of the map and of manuals like Bourcet's. His own special scheme of a frontal attack combined with a turning movement was deduced completely before it was applied. His campaigns are applied doctrine, and nearly all the doctrine he had worked out in his head before he attained supreme command in the field.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Production of Pottery Throughout the Ages

Varnished or lustrous pottery was produced in Greece from about the Fifth to the Third century B. C. Instead of being covered with a true glaze it possessed a lustrous surface, the exact nature of which is not definitely known. Glazed pottery was produced in Egypt, Babylonia, Persia and the countries bordering the Mediterranean sea. Various methods were employed in producing the surface. In Spain the art of glazing with glass was practiced to some extent as early as the Fifteenth century, having probably been introduced from Persia. Lead-glazed pottery is produced in practically every country of the civilized world. It has been used in the Orient, the Near East, and throughout Europe and the United States. Green pottery was made in China during the Han dynasty, 202 B. C.-200 A. D., which was the earliest lead-glazed ware of which we have knowledge.

Electric Light and Phone

The first homes in which the electric light bulb shed its rays were the houses in Menlo Park, N. J., where Mr. Edison's laboratory was situated then. The invention of the incandescent lamp itself took place on October 21, 1879, and the lighting system was invented before the end of that year.

But two years before the residents of Menlo Park bathed in the glow of the first electric lights, Charles Williams, Jr., of Somerville, Mass., talked over a telephone installed in his home. This was the first home in the world equipped with a phone, and a similar installation was made at the same time in Mr. William's office at Boston, so he could have some place to call up.

Endowed Church Bells

The bells of the hoary Twelfth century church of St. Mary's, Melton Mowbray, in Leicestershire, England, perform a double duty each evening. They toll the curfew, and also the day of the month. Hence the townsfolk do not need calendars because from time immemorial this practice has been followed without a break. Tradition has it that 300 years ago a wealthy follower of one of the Leicestershire hunts became lost in a maze of woodland for more than a day after the rest of the party had returned home. Eventually the wind-borne chimes of the church bells set him in the right path and in thankfulness he created an endowment fund to ensure the ringing of the bells in perpetuity.

Speedometer

Quail which hunters have always described as "shooting up like bullets," do not fly as fast as their startling whirr of wings would indicate, an investigator has discovered after trying days of racing the game birds in his automobile. Donald D. McLean, of the California fish and game department, has informed the American Game association that the greatest burst of speed he was able to time with his speedometer was 58 miles an hour. The average "cruising" time was around 40 miles an hour, he stated.

Happily Forgotten

One day Norman Hapgood met Mark Twain strolling along Fifth avenue, New York.

"How is Mrs. Clemens now?" asked Hapgood.

"Much better," he drawled. "In fact, the whole Clemens family has been so surprisingly well of late that I have begun to think that Providence has . . . forgotten us."—Kansas City Times.

No Wonder It's Hard

One reason a foreigner has a hard time learning our language is because we ourselves ball it all up. We say we drink up a pint of milk when we drink it down. We also say we drink a glass full of soda when we drink it empty.—Florida Times-Union.

Humphry Ingoldsby That "Am Pulled by Chivalry

Among the good stories told by Miss Jane Harrison, the famous lecturer in classical archaeology at Newnham college, Cambridge, England, in her autobiography, "Reminiscences of a Student's Life," is this one:

Miss Harrison was for a time a magistrate, and on one occasion there appeared before the bench a certain prisoner who, it seems, had used peculiarly foul language. Instead of repeating it the clerk had had a typed copy made, which was circulated on the bench, Miss Harrison says:

"The unknown to me has always had an irresistible lure, and all my life I have had a curiosity to know what really bad language consisted of. In the stables at home I had heard an occasional 'd—n' from the lips of a groom, but that was not very informating.

"Now was the chance of my life. The paper reached the old gentleman next me. I had all but stretched out an eager hand. He bent over me in a fatherly way and said:

"'I am sure you will not want to see this.'

"I was pining to read it, but sixty years of sex subservience had done their work. I summoned my last blush, cast down my eyes, and said:

"'Oh, no! No. Thank you so much.'

"Elate with chivalry, he bowed and pocketed the script."—Kansas City Times.

Early English Dramas Acted Only on Sunday

Though legislators in 1780 frowned on Sunday amusements, some of their predecessors regarded them with a more tolerant eye. In the Sixteenth century Sunday was almost the playgoer's only chance of entertainment. It was not until 1579 that plays were acted on week days, and until a considerable later date Sunday was still regarded as the occasion for the production of new pieces. Queen Elizabeth patronized Sunday plays, as did also James I, and even the higher clergy took no exception to the practice. Indeed, we read of the then bishop of London producing "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at his town house on a Sunday evening as late as 1631. The practice, however, was not without many opponents, and there can be no doubt that Sunday performances had not a little to do with the Puritan dislike of playgoing of every description.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Covered Wagon Days

In the days of the pioneer treks across the plains courage was required to face the 2,000 miles stretching bleakly in front of them. A typical train consisted of one wagon, "two yoke of four-year-old steers and one yoke of cows." In front of them were rivers, mountains, thirst, hunger, privation and the pestilence that overtook migrating hordes. Soon they were in a column of wagons said to be 500 miles long—all moving toward the west, their occupants without proper food, dependent upon unhealthful streams for water, enveloped in an intolerable dust. In calm weather the dust would rise so thick at times that the lead team of oxen could not be seen from the wagon. Then, again, the steady flow of wind would hurl the dust and sand like fine hail, with force enough to sting the face and hands.

Steel Plow in America

In this country, about 1797, John Newbold demonstrated a cast-iron plow. It was similar to cast-iron plows which had been demonstrated shortly before in England. Records indicate that farmers feared detrimental effects from so much iron in contact with the soil, and evidently this first American cast-iron plow was never repaired after its moldboard became broken. The obstinate quality of the soil in the Mississippi valley led to the use of steel instead of iron strips on the moldboards of plows. John Deere, 1837, and William Parlin, 1842, were pioneers in the steel plow business of the Middle West. Much credit is due also to James Oliver, who, beginning his experiments in 1853, greatly advanced the process for chilling cast-iron plow points.

Dumb

A seven-year-old Cleveland boy believes that Santa Claus has a very poor memory. Just before Christmas the lad's mother tok him downtown to see Santa Claus, and the boy told what presents he wanted in his stocking.

A few days later another whiskered Santa Claus stopped the lad and inquired:

"What would you like for Christmas, sonny?" Whereupon the chap registered keen disappointment and answered:

"Of all the chumps! I knew that you'd forget what I told you."

Early Road Builder

Swedish heroes of a former day are recalled by the story of the deeds of Jarlabanke, one of the earliest of the Viking road builders, which are revealed on one of the Rune stones recently found at Taeby. More than 1,000 Rune stones, dating from the Ninth to the Eleventh centuries, are now registered. One stone glorifies Jarlabanke for building a road across the swamp in Taeby. The road is still in use, and even to this day, carries the name "Jarlabanke's bridge."

Odd Organization for Preservation of Trees

Mr. of the Trees is the head of an organization of African scouts founded by Richard B. St. Barbe Baker, formerly assistant conservator of forests in the Kenya colony. The natives, the Kikuyu tribe, are Bantu in origin and many of the old tribal customs are retained. Certain trees are held sacred and sacrifices are made to them. Mr. Baker, on his arrival in the colony, found that large areas of forest had been destroyed by fire and to make way for cultivation. He assembled the chiefs and explained to them the value of forests to man and proposed that instead of being forest destroyers they become forest planters. Many of the natives immediately responded and the Watu wa Miti, or Men of the Trees, was organized. The badge is a small brass disk bearing the design of a tree; the colors are green and white. Later on a simple ritual and initiation ceremony were evolved. Like the Boy Scouts, the members are expected to do a good deed each day. The entire organization is known as the Forest, which is divided into districts, each named after the dominant species of tree growing in it. The districts are divided into branches, each ruled by a forest guide. An important part of the work is the planting of a forest nursery, where more than 80,000 young trees have been raised.

Interesting Picture of Birth of Solar System

Tracing time and its changes back to the very beginning of things, Sir James Jeans of Cambridge gives, in a recently published work, a wonderful picture of the birth of our solar system as the result of a collision some 2,000,000,000 years ago.

"A second star, wandering blindly through space, happened to come within hailing distance of the sun. Just as the sun and moon raise tides on the earth, so this second star must have raised tides on the surface of the sun . . . a huge tidal wave must have traveled over the surface of the sun, ultimately forming a mountain of prodigious height, which would rise even higher and higher as the cause of the disturbance came nearer and nearer. And, before the second star began to recede, its tidal pull had become so powerful that this mountain was torn to pieces and threw off small fragments of itself, much as the crest of a wave throws off spray. These small fragments have been circulating around their parent sun ever since. They are the planets, great and small, of which our earth is one."

South Africa's "Tablecloth"

The "Tablecloth" is a cloud that occasionally covers the flat top of Table mountain in South Africa. Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the United States weather bureau, in his book "The Realm of the Air," says it is probably the most famous individual cloud in the world, and in describing it adds: "It consists of a dense cloud sheet, formed when warm moisture-bearing winds are forced up the steep slope of the mountain, especially in summer. The cloud often pours over the brow of the mountain, like a mighty cataract, and is dissolved as the wind is warmed by compression in descending to a lower level. The effects produced by this rolling mass of vapor are sometimes indescribably grand, and the phenomenon is all the more striking because a perfectly clear sky generally prevails over the surrounding country while the "Tablecloth" overspreads the mountain."

Canning Factory in Arctic

Within a few hundred miles of the North pole a fish-canning factory has been established, worked entirely by Eskimos. The plant, financed by the Danish government, is in Holstenberg, Greenland, a town beyond the Arctic circle.

Modern in every detail, the factory makes use of electric power derived from the swift-running rivers, and employs up-to-date dynamos and oil engines for emergencies. It is operated mainly by Eskimo women. The whole population of the district, numbering approximately 250, is devoted to the new industry. A fleet of modern motor fishing boats, recently shipped from Denmark, keeps the establishment supplied.

Famous Old Roman Road

The Appian way is a famous road built by the Romans between the cities of Rome and Brandisi. It received its name from Appius Claudius, who was censor when the first part of the road was begun about 312 B. C. The section between Capua and Rome is about 140 miles long and is as straight as a taut string. The width of the road ranges from 14 to 18 feet. No expense was spared in making the pavement and part of the original road bed is still used without much alteration.

Divisions of Ship's Crew

The crew of a ship is divided into three departments. The first is the deck department. The captain, first, second, third and fourth mates, the boatswain, able seamen, ordinary seamen and radio operators belong to this department. In the engineering department there are the chief engineer, second, third, fourth and junior engineers, firemen, greasers, water tenders and coal passers. Those belonging to the steward's department are the chief steward, second steward, cook, second cook, mess steward and mess boy.

Lizards Feast Royally on Eggs of Crocodile

I have sometimes watched monitors, or African water lizards, at their work of robbing crocodile nests of their eggs, C. R. S. Pitman writes, in Asia Magazine. The antics of these prehistoric looking creatures, which are usually about four feet long, are most entertaining.

On more than one occasion when I have been lying in concealment, observing the behavior of the guardian females on the breeding grounds, I have seen a monitor deliberately provoke a crocodile until it rushes off in pursuit into the water. In the meantime the monitor's mate arrives on the scene, excavates the nest with great haste and begins gobbling up the eggs.

Soon it is joined by No. 1, which had only taken to the water as a ruse. They usually succeed in disposing of the greater portion of the eggs before the return of the rightful owner. Even when forced to withdraw, they will decamp each with an egg in its mouth.

Medieval Clocks

Into the making of clocks and their cases has gone much of man's inventive and decorative abilities. Comic and performing clocks had a great vogue during the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries. In the museum at Basle, Switzerland, may still be seen a specimen in which the vibration of the pendulum gradually caused a long tongue to protrude. Other clocks were made to show a whole series of scenes, such as processions of the apostles and other characters. Great interest was also excited by clocks representing the positions of the heavenly bodies and the days of the week and month. Repeating clocks which sounded the hours when a string was pulled were prized in the days when the only method of striking a light at night was with flint and steel.

Professors Crawl, Growl

Called the strangest club in the world, the "Red Lion club" recently held its annual dinner at Bristol, England. Its members are professors, and the "King Lion," who presided, was ceremoniously addressed as "Your Majesty" by the other "lions" and "cubs." At supper they sedately quaffed strong old English ale, and the marrow bone. The red lions of the club are the senior scientists, and the cubs are new members, who were made on admission to "wag their tails," and go through a ritual of initiation. There were also two jackals, and when the king lion gave an order they had to growl ominously. Professors even went down on all fours on the carpet in their conscientious effort to look lionlike.

Giralda

In Seville of Andalusia, Giralda dwells. It is one of the most beautiful Moorish monuments of Spain, a Twelfth century minaret stretched against the blue sky, and bow the shrine of two dozen anointed bells. Giralda is the mother and sweetheart of Seville; without Giralda the city would feel compelled to hide and change its name. The Moors wished to destroy it before surrendering to San Fernando, but he replied that a Moorish head would be cut off for every stone removed. The heads changed their minds. To an American, Giralda marks holy ground, for in the cathedral stands the sarcophagus of Christopher Columbus.

"Witch" Elm Claims Victim

How the "witch" elm tree claimed another victim recently was told at the coroner's inquest at Port Talbot, Wales. Thomas J. Richards, thirty-six, had been engaged by the Penybont council to trim the branches. A branch on which he was standing snapped, and he fell 40 feet to the road and was killed. A lineman previously had been killed while cutting away the branches of the same tree under similar circumstances. The tree, nearly 50 feet high, is known among woodmen as "a traitor tree."

1200 at 4-H CLUB CAMPS IN KENTUCKY

Eighteen hundred farm boys and girls attended the 12 district 4-H Club camps in Kentucky this summer. In addition, 200 local volunteer club leaders attended, while visitors at all camps numbered between 5,000 and 10,000.

Each camp lasted four days. Short courses were given in the fundamentals of agriculture and home economics, nature study, health and other subjects, with singing, dramatics, stunts, swimming and other recreational features.

The camps were held under the direction of the Junior 4-H Club department of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, assisted by the State Y. M. C. A. agents and local volunteer club leaders. The Y. M. C. A. furnished a recreational director for each camp.

Camps were so distributed as to be available to all 4-H Club members in the State. Their names and locations follow: Purchase region camp, held at Fulton; Central Bluegrass, Lexington; Green River, Spottsville; Eden, Eminence; North, Camp Ernst in Boone county; Blue Licks, Park Hill; Big Sandy, Carter Caves; Quicksand, Quicksand; Cumberland River, London; Pennyrile, Elkton; Lincoln, Elizabethtown, and Waverly, Danville.

PLAN ENTERTAINMENT FOR 4-H CLUB FAIR

An abundance of wholesome fun and entertainment is being provided for the 4-H Club District Fair to be held at Lexington August 24-25. A dozen events are listed for each of the two days. These include a polo game to be played on Shetland ponies, stock calling contests for all kinds of livestock, milking contests, milk drinking, wrestling, pie eating young fiddlers, circus, cracker eating, harmonica playing, button sewing, etc.

The fair, which is one of the first attempted in the U. S., is attracting wide attention. A large number of livestock has been entered by farm boys and girls in the central counties of the state. More than $2,000 in cash prizes will be distributed, including $600 provided by the State Legislature.

RECOMMEND GRINDING WHEAT FOR LIVESTOCK

Information received at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, indicates that considerable wheat will be fed to livestock in Kentucky this year.

In order to secure the best results in feeding wheat to hogs, it is suggested that it be coarsely ground. This means just enough to crack all grains. A supplement such as tankage or milk, should be fed with wheat, but in no event should the supplement and wheat be mixed.

Soaking is a poor substitute for grinding. Ground wheat is about 20 per cent more efficient than whole wheat, experiments show. 5 per cent better than whole dry while soaked wheat is only about wheat.

In some instances farmers have mixed wheat and corn, the theory being that the mixture is superior to wheat alone. Such is not the case. It is true, however, that hogs do not relish wheat so well as they do some other grains.

If both wheat and corn are available to feed, it is considered better to feed the entire amount of one at a time, before beginning to feed the other.

FIVE DAIRY CATTLE SHOWS FOR 4-H CLUBS

The Kentucky State Board of Agriculture announces the dates of five district dairy cattle shows for 4-H Club members. They are Lexington August 24-25; Mayfield, on September 3-4; Bowling Green on September 4-5; Madisonville, on September 11-12 and Eminence on September 12.

Six hundred dollars appropriated by the State Legislature will be divided by the State Board of Agriculture in cash prizes at each show. T. R. Webber of Shelbyville, will judge the Lexington and Eminence shows; Prof. Fordyce of the College of Agriculture the shoys at Mayfield and Bowling Green, and Herbert Farrell of Tennessee the Madisonville show.

Dairy cattle will be exhibited in the 4-H Club show at the Kentucky State Fair will be selected largely from the cattle shown at the district shows. Kentucky 4-H Club boys and girls own 2,000 registered dairy cattle.

FARMERS USE FIRE TO COMBAT DODDER

Many farmers are resorting to burning as one way of combating such noxious weeds as dodder, observes Erle C. Vaughn, a field agt. of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. In regions where crude oil is cheap in price, farmers sprinkle it on edges of plants and then apply a match. Some farmers have made a blowtorch type of burner which they have found effective. Others place straw on each dodder plant and then burn it.

Pulling and destroying dodder, if repeated every week for four or five weeks, will usually clean up a field, says Mr. Vaughn. Close grazing of lespedeza from early spring until mid-summer also has been found effective.

FOURTH REUNION

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Congleton, on the Belleview pike, was the scene of the fourth family reunion of the Congleton family, members of which assembled from this community and the Ohio-Dixie counties.

The occasion usually is observed on Mr. I. A. Congleton's birthday, this being his sixtieth. The senior Mr. Congleton, who is the father of Lamar, is a native of Kentucky, having been born in Estill county, and now a typical tobacco growing farmer of Fayette county. Tobacco growing, in which he takes a great pride, always has been his specialty and to say that he is a master of that art is putting it mildly.

The day last Sunday was one of the most enjoyable ever spent on this occasion and one that long will be remembered.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Cassity, of Jessamine county; Mr. and Mrs. Hargis Congleton and family, Mr. and Mrs. Dillard Lunsford, of Fayette county; Mr. and Mrs. Lacey Greenup and three sons, Miss Mary Congleton, Cecil Congleton, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Congleton and daughter, of Scott-co.; Miss Birdie Congleton, of Franklin county; and Miss Gladys Graves, of Woodford county, also Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kirkpatrick and two sons, of Burlington.

The editor of the Recorder received a communication from Geo. C. Dunlap, of Chicago, last week in which he enclosed a copy of a cartoon entitled "Strange As It Seems" by John Hix. One feature of the cartoon told of a calf born on the farm of Wm. J. Afterkirk, Union, Ky., covered with a hard shell. Mr. Dunlap inquired as to the authenticity of the cartoon and we take this means of assuring him that such an animal actually was born on Mr. Afterkirk's farm, as many readers of this newspaper will recall. We are unable to give him the exact date, however.

Final Game Of County Championship Series To Be At Burlington

WALTON AND PETERSBURG TO PLAY OFF SENSATIONALL FOUR-GAME TIE TO SETTLE BOONE COUNTY SUPREMACY —CHANGE IN UMPIRES AND DIVISION OF RECEIPTS

The battling hordes from the towns of Walton and Petersburg resume negotiations Business Manager H. A. Rogers and playing Manager Charles Ruth, of Petersburg, went to the Dixie Highway city Monday night and made an agreement with Manager Clyde Laws and his cohorts to decide the series with one game at Burlington next Saturday afternoon, October 3rd.

According to authentic reports the meeting was a very peaceable and friendly one and the agreement was reached very rapidly. The only changes from the original plans involve the umpires and the division of the receipts. The receipts, according to the original agreement, called for the winning team to take all of the gate receipts at the final game, but this was altered so that they will be divided on a 60-40 basis.

The umpires will be Shearer, of Walton, Hubert Brady, of Burlington, on the bases, and a third umpire from Cincinnati behind the plate to act as umpire in chief.

The Burlington park, which boasts the most spacious outfield in the League, will be put in the best possible shape for the great battle. It is expected with favorable weather, that one of the largest crowds ever to witness a game in Boone county will be on hand for this game.

These two teams have played the hottest, the best and most evenly contested series of games ever before seen in these parts and it is to be hoped that this, the deciding event, will be no exception and may the best team win.

It is with the keenest possible regret that the editor states that he will be forced to miss the final championship contest due to the delay of one week and to the fact that he will leave this afternoon (Wednesday) for St. Louis and Philadelphia to see the World series between the Cardinals and Athletics and to assist the veteran Jack Ryder, of the Cincinnati Enquirer in reporting these games.

CUT-OUT

OF 1932 BUURLEY CROP IS ADVOCATED BY GROWERS AT MEETING HERE SATURDAY AFTERNOON—POOLING OF '31 CROP ALSO VOTED

Last Saturday afternoon an enthusiastic body of tobacco growers gathered at the court house in Burlington to discuss the question of a pool for 1931 and a cut out for 1932.

After a careful consideration of the matter those present decided to lend their influence toward the pooling of this year's crop and to do the same toward a cut out for next year.

Hubert White, of Burlington, J. C. Layne, of Walton, and B. W. Franks, of Walton, were chosen as delegates to attend a state wide meeting to be held at Lexington on October 17th.

BOX SCORE CORRECTION

In the Recorder's publication of hte box score of the last series game at Walton a base hit was unintentionally omitted from the column of John Walton, of Petersburg, and from that of Shearer, Walton catcher. The total hits should have been five for Walton and ten for Petersburg.

Mrs. Lillian Presser returned to Burlington Monday after spending several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Louden, near Waterloo.

F. A. Hall is adorning his home on North Jefferson street with a new metal roof. J. J. Kirkpatrick is doing the work.

THAT WILL ATTEMPT TO SURPASS WINCHESTER TO BE STAGED AT BOWLING GREEN —JUDGE LAFOON TO BE PRINCIPAL SPEAKER

The city of Bowling Green will attempt to surpass Winchester, in entertaining the hosts of Democracy on Saturday, October 3, when a giant rally will be held in the Warren county capital.

The rally will be held in Reservoir Park, Bowling Green. The park is located on a high wooded hill overlooking the town and is one of the most beautiful spots in Kentucky.

Mutton will be barbecued in pits and burgoo also will be served to the crowd, which is expected to exceed 10,000.

The citizens of Bowling Green are famous hosts and merchants of the city, the Board of Trade and all other civic agencies are co-operating to make the affair typical of the town's noted hospitality. Counties in the Third district will send large delegations and Democrats throughout the State will go to Bowling Green by train and motor.

Judge Ruby Laffoon will make the principal address of the day. Speaking will begin about 1:30 and Judge Laffoon will start his speech at 2 o'clock. It is probable that Judge Laffoon's speech will be broadcast. The speakers stand will be erected at a high point in the woodland and amplifiers will be installed to carry the voices of speakers to all portions of the crowd.

Bowling Green is one of the most beautiful cities in Kentucky and aside from the interest in the rally, those who attend the barbecue on October 3 will find the trip well worth while.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL TEAM

Once again we hear the cracking of the base ball bats on the Burlington High School grounds, which means that the High School boys are busy rounding into shape for their third game with the Petersburg High School team Friday October 2nd.

These two teams have played two games, winning one each. The first game was played at Burlington and was won by the Burlington team by a score of 4 to 3. Friday, Sept., 25th the Burlington boys went to Petersburg and lost by a score of 6 to 4. In Friday's game coach Kelly, who has charge of the base ball team, will probably start as his battery Ogden and Williamson, with one of the best line-ups back of them that has ever been seen in a Burlington High School uniform. With the right instruction and the material B. H. S. has for athletic events there is no reason why they should not go to the top. All they need is a little encouragement, so be on hand next Friday, October 2nd, and help your team win.

The Girl Reserves and The H. Y. Boys again have been organized at B. H. S. The leaders for the Girl Reserves are Londa Lee Jarrell, president; Zena Garrison, Secretary; Elaine Dickerson, Treasurer; Lucille Ryle program chairman, Marjorie Hensley Reporter. Miss Anderson advisor; Ethelyn Ryle vice-president.

For the H. Y. Boys the officers have been chosen but no arrangements have been made to select their advisors. On Monday night the Girl Reserves entertained the H. Y. Boys with a "Hot Dog" Roast on the Petersburg pike. All enjoyed themselves very much and thank the Girl Reserves for their kindness.

Arrangements have been made for the first chapel program to be given Friday October 9th by the entire High School.

All friends and patrons are invited to attend our chapel programs.

Don't forget the base ball game next Friday October 2nd.

TO ORGANIZE P. T. A.

All interested patrons of the New Haven Consolidated School District are asked to meet at the old Union school building Friday evening October 2nd, to organize a Parent Teachers Association and to make plans for the Dedication of the new school.

SPRAGUE

HAS BETTER OF BOEHLER IN PITCHERS BATTLE IN BELLEVIEW—PETERSBURG GAME—MUTT ROGERS IS HITTING STAR

In one of the prettiest pitchers battles of the year "Lefty" Sprague got the better of George Boehler at Belleview last Saturday afternoon.

Sprague, just home from a successful season with the Davenport, Iowa, club, of the Mississippi Valley League, was on the mound for Belleview, while Boehler was tossing them up for Petersburg.

The game was a hard fought ten innng affair and was decided when Boehler let one slide into Less Ryle's groove and they picked up the ball in the outskirts of McVille, while Mutt Rogers pranced across with the winning run.

While the score of 4-3 is proof enough that the game was close, yet the records of the two hurlers might not indicate as much. Sprague yielded only five hits, while Belleview gathered twelve off Boehler, the big pitcher, according to his usual custom, bearing down in the pinches. In strike outs the proportion was exactly the same Sprague fanning an even dozen, Boehler whiffing only five.

blood, scoring one run in the third

Belleview was the first to draw when Paul Cook doubled to right after two were out and came home when Mutt Rogers sent a long double in the opposite direction. Petersburg forged ahead in the seventh when poor support was fatal to Sprague. Bradburn was first up and was safe on Miller's fumble at second. Boehler followed with a single, Bradburn pulling up at second. Pete Klopp intended to sacrifice and laid down a beautiful bunt along the third base line, and Sprague fielded the ball rapidly.

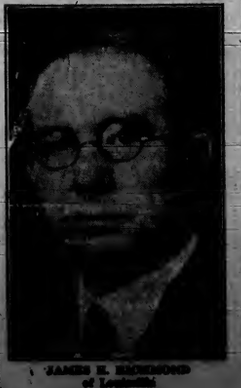
When Lefty turned to throw to was no one to take the throw. Sprague being forced to reverse himself in an effort to nip Klopp at first. In making the quick turn he over-threw first base and Bradburn crossed over. Matthews was safe on his infield grounder when Boehler was thrown out at the plate and Jarrell fanned, but Cox was safe and Klopp scored on Ryle's error at short, the second run of the inning.



With the score against them Belleview immediately took the lead in their half of the same inning. Stephens led off with a single and Bucky Rogers followed suit, Stephens stopping at second. Both runners moved up on Cook's infield out and both scored when Mutt Rogers hit his second double of the game to deep left.

Bill Lowe unleashed his big war club and emitted a long home run to center to tie the score in Petersburg's half of the eighth and it remained so until the home half of the tenth, of which already we have written.

Mutt Rogers was the big thorn in Boehler's side as it was his two doubles that drove in Belleview's first three runs and it was his single that put him in position to score on Ryle's drive in the tenth.

These two teams will renew their series on Saturday, October 10th, at Petersburg, as the Boone County Championship series between Walton and Petersburg will be decided at Burlington next Saturday.

Eight-Year-Old Boy Victim Of Accident At Florence Tuesday

GRANDSON OF SAM HAMBRICK, FLORENCE TOWN MARSHALL, MEETS DEATH ALMOST INSTANTLY WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

The happy and peaceful life of the inhabitants of the little town of Florence was interrupted by the intrusion of tragedy Monday at noon when an auto struck and almost instantly killed little Robert Adams, eight years old, of that city.

The lad was returning to school about noon and suddenly darted from behind a parked truck at the curb. An car, driven by Clarence Marksberry, of Erlanger, was going north on the highway at what witnesses say was a very moderate rate of speed and struck the child before he had time to stop the machine.

The boy was immediately taken to a Covington hospital but had been dead several minutes on arrival. He was taken to the hospital by H. R. Leidy and Marshall Sam Hambrick, the child's grandfather.

The little fellow was a son of Mrs. Rebecca Adams, of Dorothy Ave., Florente, and who has the undivided sympathy of a sorrowing community.

IS CHARGE PLACED AGAINST THREE MEN WHO WERE LODGED IN JAIL HERE TUESDAY EVENING — SHOELESS VICTIM IS PUSHED FROM CAR AT FLORENCE, IT IS ALLEGED

Three men who gave their names as Raymond Lemons, 19, James Grayson, 18, and Elmer Windorf, 35, all of Covington, were lodged in jail here Tuesday night charged with robbery.

A warrant was sworn to by H. R. Henry, also of Covington, charging that the men had forced him into their car and had driven him to Florence, where they robbed him of thirty dollars and a pair of shoes and pushed him out of the auto. The three men vigorously denied the accusation.

They were placed under arrest by John Drees and Al Seiter, Covington detectives, and turned over to Sheriff Herbert Snyder, who brought them to Burlington.

An examining trial had not been set as we go to press.

CANDIDATE

FOR STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION SPEAKS AT DEDICATION OF FLORENCE SCHOOL — MAKES IMPRESSION UPON ALL HEARERS

The dedicatory address at the Florence school last Saturday was delivered by Prof. James H. Richmond, of Louisville, and a candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Wherever Mr. Richmond has spoken, his audiences have been enthusiastic over his masterly exposition of the issues of the campaign.

Mr. Richmond is vigorous and aggressive, an orator of unusual ability and does not mince matters when he discusses the shortcomings of the Harrison administration. Mr. Richmond has been a citizen of Louisville for many years and has definite knowledge of conditions which exist under the Harrison administration in Louisville that are a stench in the nostrils of the decent people of that city.

Mr. Richmond's discussion of educational matters is able and expresses the viewpoint of an educator well trained and thoroughly capable.

The community is which Mr. Richmond is billed to speak is sure to hear one of the most able speeches of the campaign. Every citizen, irrespective of political allegiance, should hear him.

PAY YOUR BILLS NOW

The most practical and simple means of starting money into circulation and so stimulating the return of prosperity was put forward the other day by Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car Company. Mr. Macauley pointed out that if everybody who owes money would begin at once to pay his bills, to the extent of his ability to do so, the wheels of commerce would be instantly speeded up.

We believe that is true. We know many people, and we have heard of many more, who are not paying their bills because they are afraid to reduce their cash resources. Business men tell us that collections are slower than they have ever known them. Customers whose credit is perfectly good, and who have cash reserves in the savings banks and elsewhere, are holding off payment of accounts long past due, apparently for no other reason than timidity. It is easy in these days for a debtor to get a long extension of credit. Many who are not entitled to it are taking advantage of this situation to postpone payment of their just debts.

Nobody of course, has any statistics on the subject, but we think it is a fair guess that if, on a given day or during a given week, everybody in America who owes anybody else would pay all that he owes, or all that he is actually able to pay on account, money would begin circulating so fast that there would be an end almost immediately to all of the talk of depression. If the tailor, for example, who is not paying his bills because he hasn't got enough business in sight, would pay what he owes the butcher, and then the butcher would pay the grocer, the grocer would be able to order a new suit of clothes from the tailor, which he does not feel justified in doing now.

Money lying idle in the bank does nobody any good. It is only the revolving dollar that has any value. We would like to see everybody in this country make a start toward the application of Mr. Macauley's sound advice.

VEGETABLE STORAGE THE "COOL" CROPS

(By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture)

A few weeks ago, the methods for taking care of the "warm" vegetables were outlined, not because frost was imminent at that time, but because of their being so easily injured by even mild frosts, arrangements for their prompt salvaging should be completed in ample time.

This precaution is just as sensible in the case of the "cool" crops, for although they can survive frosts to which the "warm" vegetables succumb, it is unwise to delay too long.

The cool vegetables are the root crops such as carrots, beets, and turnips, the leaf vegetables cabbage and Chinese cabbage, and, perhaps most important, the white potatoes. The leaf crops, spinach, kale and turnip greens, though not subject to storage in the strict sense of the term, may be harvested into quite severe weather by covering them with straw or with leaves. So protected, they will live through the winter and make early spring greens the following year.

The best storage place for the "cool" crops is a house cellar, in a room apart from the furnace, with, preferably, an earth floor. Such a floor automatically provides the degree of humidity best suited to keep the stored product plump and fresh. Proper flow of air, to assure ventillation and controlled temperature may be provided for as described in these columns several weeks ago, and need not be repeated now.

Next to a cellar, or a special storage structure, burying the vegetables in a pit or mound is best. In fact, burying has an advantage that few cellars have, of keeping vegetables without loss thru shrinkage. Its objection is the inconvenience and often the impossibility of removing the stored product when it is desirable to remove it.

It will be recalled that a most important essential in successful storing is protection against low temperatures. These crops keep best at 40 degrees. Although they will endure even freezing for intervals of short duration, their keeping ability and their quality may easily be affected. Potatoes, particularly, are prone to turn sweet if the temperature falls much below degrees for protracted times. Altho the sweet flavor disappears to some extent after the temperature has again risen, the cooking quality of the potatoes is permanently impaired.

The insulating material for a pit is the earth cover. For Kentucky winters in general, 10 inches is enough. In order to provide the necessary amount of earth, generally an excavation is made. The size of the excavation should be large enough to accommodate the vegetables piled as tall as possible. The location of the pit should be such that surface moisture will not collect in it; to make sure, ditching should be done.

The floor of the pit may be covered with straw or leaves, although this is not essential. The pile of vegetables may be covered before the earth is applied, for convenience in removing the store. The earth cover should not xtend all the way to the tip, when the pit is first made, to allow some opening through which the moisture that all stored crops give off during the first few weeks may escape, but a watershed of wood or tin should be arranged to keep rains out. At about Thanksgiving, the watershed should be removed and the earth covering completed. The pit is now ready for the winter. It may be opened at any time that the outside temperature is not dangerously below freezing, and reclosed, without harm to the contents, if care is taken to replace the original 10 inches of earth cover.

INSPECT EQUIPMENT FLOCK AND WORK AT POULTRY FIELD DAY

Persons who attend the annual poultry field day meeting at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky at Lexington October 7 will see the best flock of pullets ever raised at the Experiment Station. The birds are already housed and laying 50 per cent or better.

Reports will be made of results obtained so far in some of the experiments being made at the Station. These will include breeding for longevity or high life-time production; studies of the value of the sun's rays in increasing the vitamin content of eggs as well as the effect of the sun on egg production and hatchability; hopper versus litter feeding of laying hens, and the use of an all-mash ration for layers.

Outstanding results have been secured in out-crossing some of the Experiment Station's strains of White Leghorns with unrelated strains from the Pacific Coast, and also with Australian bloodlines. Birds involved in these matings will be available for inspection at the field meeting.

The time from 10 o'clock until noon will be spent at the poultry plant on the Experiment Station farm, where the flocks, houses and general equipment will be open for inspection. Lunch will be had at the livestock pavilion, followed at 1:30 o'clock by an address by Prof. James E. Rice, head of the poultry department at Cornell University in New York. His subject will be, "let Your Poultry Flock Help You Whip the Depression."

One hundred Calloway county farmers made a tour of the farms of six men who had entered the two-acre tobacco production contest.

Joe Bray, Trimble county's master farmer, sold most of his peach crop locally, receiving $1 a bushel for quality fruit.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" — UNUSUAL

DISCUSS USE OF BIG APPLE CROP

Because of the large apple crop this fall, it is advisable to utilize them in every possible way. Some varieties may be successfully stored for winter use while others must be conserved by other methods such as canning, etc. In selecting apples for canning, they should be of the firm, sound, tart varieties. Wash, pare and core if they must stand for any length of time, cover with water salted in proportion of one tablespoon salt to one quart of water to prevent discoloration. Boil 5 minutes in this syrup (2 cups of water and 1 cup of sugar) to prevent shrinkage in jars. Pack in jars boiling hot, cover with syrup in which they were cooked, and completely seal. Process 5 minutes in boiling water.

Apples baked and seasoned may be packed hot into jars, covered with syrup and processed for all sized containers 5 minutes in boiling wter.

Apple sauce may be made from windfalls or green apples. Pack boiling hot, completely seal and process containers of all sizes in boiling water 5 minutes.

The College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, offers the following recipes for utilizing the apple supply:

Butterscotch Apples—Use 5 apples, 2-3 of a cup of brown sugar, ¾ cup of milk, ½ tablespoon of cornstarch, 1-8 teaspoon of salt, ½ to 1 tablespoon of butter, and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Wash apples, remove core, place in dish, sprinkle with sugar, add water to cook, cover, bake in moderate oven until tender. Serve with sauce made as follows: Mix cornstarch and sugar together and cook in hot milk, adding a little of the apple syrup. Boil for a few minutes, add salt, butter and vanilla, stirring together. Pour this sauce over the apples. These may be served hot or cold.

Quick Apple Pudding—Use three sour apples, ¼ lemon, 1 tablespoon of butter, 2 eggs 1-3 of a cup of sugar, spice. Peel and grate the apples. Add the juice, grated rind of lemon, the well-beaten egg yolks and butter creamed with the sugar. Season with a little cinnamon or nutmeg, fold in stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Pour into buttered dish. Cook in moderate oven 25 to 30 minutes. Serve cold with cream.

Apple Tapioca—Use 6 tablespoons of pearl tapioca, 1¼ cup of cold water, 1 cup of boiling water, five sour apples, ½ of a cup of sugar, and ⅛ of a teaspoon of salt. Soak the tapioca in cold water an hour or more, and drain and add boiling water and salt. Core and pare the apples and place them in buttered dish. Spread with sugar; then tapioca. Bake in moderate oven 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with cream or custard sauce.

Apple Whip—To 1 cup of apple pulp add 4 tablespoons of sugar and 1 teaspoon of lemon juice. Fold into this mixture the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs. Chill and serve with custard sauce or bake in moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes until firm.

Aples may be peeled, sliced and served with cereal for breakfast or merely with sugar and cream. Apples either baked with very little sugar or as apple sauce make a very pleasing accompaniment for pork or lamb roast.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

PADLOCKED MINDS

We were discussing Russia at the dinner table of a banker. None of us knew anything about the subject, but that did not prevent a long and animated conversation.

The general opinion, forcibly expressed, was that Stalin and his associates represent the great menace to the present-day world. It was then urged that all the capitalistic powers ought to combine to overthrow the Bolshevik regime.

Finally I made a timid suggestion.

I said that it seemed to me probable that the Russian experiment will have to be very much modified or it will fail. It appears to run contrary to too many deep-seated human instincts.

Man is moved by the ambition to acquire opportunity and security for his children. The Bolsheviks deny him the right of acquisition. Man is "incurably religious;" the Bolsheviks have attempted to abolish God. Sooner or later, man has always revolted against unbridled autocracy under whatever guise or name.

"But," I cantinued, waxing a little bolder, "any one who looks over the capitalistic countries today must admit that our economic organization leaves a lot to be desired. Think of the tragedy of wheat selling below the cost of production at a time when thousands are standing in bread-line. What a frightful thing it is for factories to be shut down for lack of orders while a large percentage of the human race still lacks adequate clothing and shelter.

"Instead of condemning the Russians out of hand, wouldn't it be more sensible to see whether they discover anything, no matter how small, that we could apply to make our own decrepit economic machine a little better?"

Recently I read an article by Prof. Harold J. Laski in which he pointed out how every new idea, that ever came into the world has been opposed by the "experts."

"Not even so great a surgeon as Simpson could see merit in Lister's discovery of antiseptic treatment. The opposition to Pasteur was so vehement that he declared regretfully that he did not know he had so many enemies."

Napoleon scoffed at the steamship. Wellington was never persuaded that the breech-loading rifle was any good. Vanderbilt refused to entertain the crazy notion that Westinghouse could stop his trains by "jamming air against the wheels."

If we keep our minds open to new ideas we are bound to be misled often, and sometimes to be ridiculous.

But the surest way of all to be wrong is to assume that God has completed His process of revelation and that the world tomorrow will be exactly like the world today.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

WITH MY READERS

I had quite a few letters from different states, referring to my former article, "Mistaken Folks." You will recall, it dealt with those who have sciatic neuritis and mistake it for "rheumatism." And, remedies and measures for rheumatism did not relieve at all.

One man had sciatic neuritis, a very obstinate case, and told me had "bladder trouble" for years—and also has a fissure, a rectal lesion, for years more. Either of these complaints might be causing neuritis, and should certainly be attended to before attempting to cure the sciatic. And none of his ailments are of the rheumatism variety—not at all. No use to take out tonsils or teeth in the hope of removing rheumatism germs. It is well known that a pronounced lesion of the bladder, prostate gland or rectum may cause sciatic neuritis, a disabling disease.

One with disease in the bladder or rectum may get a sudden attack of sciatic neuritis by lifting, bruising, or otherwise disturbing this great nerve-trunk of the human being.

REST is by far the greatest factor in the treatment of sciatic neuritis—rest, and attention to other organs in the vicinity of the nerve How many women with uterine prolapse complain of "lumbago" and "sciatica?" Neither of them rheumatism! Removing all the tonsils and teeth in the world will not relieve a backache that is caused by a sagging uterus!

Then they inquire about "cleaning out and keeping clean." Those who are more or less ponderous about the abdomen, I imagine. To clean out is simple. The keeping clean is the trouble; I'll try to devote the next chapter to that subject.

Stimulating local consumption through newspaper advertising and a local road sign to sell 350 bushels of peaches, for which he received more than $400.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

Acts 16:6-15; Romans 15:18-21

Rev. Samuel D. Price, B. D.

The lesson is larger than the study hour and offers much opportunity for special research. After the Council in Jerusalem, Paul, Barnabas and others reported back to the Church in Antioch. Soon the urge for further work afield caused Paul to lay plans for what we know as the second missionary journey. Barnabas was ready but insisted that John Mark, who left them at Perga, be taken along. Paul refused. These fellow-servants of the Master showed common sense in agreeing to disagree, but each went forward with the work of the Kingdom. Barnabas took Mark and went to Cyprus. Paul effected a working agreement with Silas and proceeded into Asia Minor. At Lystra a handy man was found in Timothy and he became an efficient substitute for John Mark.

It was at Troas, famous in the writings of Homer, that the future itinerary was clearly indicated. Here we find the word "we" used, which indicates that Dr. Luke, the author of Acts, joined the Paul party. Search out and determine just where Luke was with Paul during the rest of his ministry.

It may be that Luke told of the great need for ministry in Philippi. It was in a vision that Paul beheld the messenger who pleaded "Come over into Macedonia and help us." Look up the numerous visions that came to Paul both for direction and encouragement. Obediently the four workers set out for the first Christian impact on the continent of Europe as they came to Philippi. That journey meant much to all of us in the western world. Since there were too few Jews there to have a synagogue, a place of prayer was sought out at the riverside and gospelizing began in earnest. Lydia was the first convert and made her confession of faith in the rite of baptism.

Hints for the Home by Nancy Hart

Blueberry Pie

A good deep-dish blueberry pie is this: butter a deep baking dish and fill with huckleberries which have been looked over and washed. Sprinkle with a half cup of sugar, a tablespoon of flour and three-quarters of a cup of sugar—or more—to a quart of berries. Cover with a top crust, gash it two or three times, and bake.

Vegetable Omelet

Spread an omelet, ready to turn, with hot cooked vegetables. Cooked peas, diced carrots, finely cut string beans, and corn cut from the cob make a good combination.

Omelets can be much improved in appearance, and somewhat improved in taste by garnishing. Watercress or parsley may be used. A sweet omelet may be garnished with preserved strawberries. A vegetable omelet may be garnished with pickled beets or diced vegetables.

The dish the omelet is served on should be warm. And if the cook can persuade those who are to eat it to be at table promptly when the omelet appears, so much the better.

Twenty-two carloads of fruit jars and 47 carloads of sugar were received in Paducah in June, July and August, says County Agent W. C. Johnstone, in reporting on the local consumption and preservation of fruit and vegetables. Five hundred women attended canning demonstrations conducted by the McCracken County Homemakers' Association. One hundred and five carloads of peaches were shipped from Paducah, and as many more trucked out, according to Mr. Johnstone.

Lime and sweet clover made it possible to get a stand of blue grass on thin land on the farm of Webb Offutt in Scott county, after years of effort. The limestone was applied in the fall of 1929 as the ground was being prepared for rye. Blue grass was sowed in the rye in the fall and sweet clover the following spring. They made little progress during the drouth of 1930, but both grew rapidly this year. The growth of blue grass was "almost miraculous" where the sweet clover survived, according to County Agent C. M. Wade, and looks like a four or five year old sod.

CAUSTIC COMMENT

With all the dirt on the stage a play called "Sweepings" ought to go over big.

Formerly, an actor who photographed fairly well could get a part in the movies, but now they insist on a speaking likeness.

A young woman sued for breach of promise and showed that he carried her picture in his watch. Which wasn't much of a case!

The young husband who sued his wife for divorce because she spent $25 on a summer outfit must think that all a woman needs to wear is a coat of tan.

Most of us have a better opinion of our money than we have of ourselves, for when we send it out to work we expect it to earn more than we do.

Emily Post says that Americans have the bad habit of changing their forks from left to right hand before lifting their food. Oh, well, they're accustomed to forking over!

A newspaper advertising a new feature: "Socially Damned Before She Opened Her Mouth. Do you know why?" If she had opened her mouth we would have guessed halitosis.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Ha! Ha! Ha! Hello Mike

The most famous vaudeville team in the history of the American theatre, Weber and Fields, as seen by Armando, internationally famous caricaturist. Known and loved by theatre goers since the days of the gay nineties, Weber and Fields are now making a nation laugh with their "marvelous adventures of Mike and Meyer", which have become the newest and most popular feature of the three weekly broadcasts of B. A. Rolfe and his Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra."

In the face of wage cuts by the big steel companies and other bellwethers in the employment field, President Hoover authorized the announcement that his "anxiety to maintain standards of living in this country has been consistent and unaltered." Since the brief statement made no mention of wage reduction or their possible effect on the standard of living, it was regarded as designed primarily to refute reports that the President finally had relaxed his stand against lowered pay levels for laboring classes.

In a formal statement, which was threatened with a note of bitterness and disappointment, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking to that organization, denounced the wage cuts of the United States Steel Corporation, and other big corporations as morally wrong and economically unsound. Mr. Green construes the action of these corporations as a blow to the efforts to bring back prosperity. In the course of his statement, Mr. Green said the corporations that had cut wages "had subjected themselves to the charge" of having broken a solemn pledge to President Hoover to maintain wages, "and by their action have contributed to the development of social unrest and industrial discontent."

Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, who began life as an iron puddler and naturally asserts to know something about the steel business, ascribed the wage-cut announcement of the steel industry to a "dog eat dog" policy of reckless price slashing. The Senator expressed "great disappointment" over the announcement "because the outstanding leaders of the industry assured President Hoover that no wage reduction would be made during the present economic depression."

The most recent analysis by the Department of Labor shows the cost of living in the United States has decreased since 1929 by 11.7 per cent. The index is built of the items food, clothing, rent fuel and light, household furnishing goods and miscellaneous. The most substantial decline has taken place in foodstuffs. These show a drop of 23.5 per cent.

Rigid enforcement of the policy of restricting immigration, as announced by President Hoover in September, 1910, is responsible for the non-admission to the U. S. of about 146,000 aliens who normally could have entered, Secretary Stimson told the President in a letter given out at the White House. The President's policy was promulgated because of widespread unemployment in the United States. The substantial decrease in the alien flow, was accomplished largely through the strict application of that provision of the law which excludes from the country persons likely to become public charges.

The United States exerted its influence on behalf of peace in Manchuria when Secretary Stimson appealed to Japan and China to cease hostilities and withdraw from the present situation of danger. At the same time he notified the League of Nations that he would dispatch notes to the two Oriental powers like those sent by the League in behalf of an amicable adjustment.

The State Department has published the text of the American proposal made at Geneva by Hugh R. Wilson, American Minister to Switzerland, by which the United States accepts a general holiday on land, air and sea arms construction, shows that the State and Navy departments have agreed to suspend no construction already started and, in fact, insists upon going ahead with the $10,000,000 destroyer program passed at the last session of Congress.

The United States was represented today as in a receptive mood toward any invitation Great Britain might extend for an international conference in the next few months on the world's currencies. If, as already hinted by Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, such a move develops, this country probably will agree to participate in the conference. This was the reaction in official circles, although the administration has not yet formally defined its policy [illegible] prompt that it would not countenance an international conference to deal with all economic and financial questions. The feeling here is that it would be better to segregate the subjects rather than lump gold, silver, debts, reparations and economic conditions generally into one conference.

Organized dry forces have gone into action to combat the concerted drive of the wets for modification of the prohibition law to permit the manufacture and sale of beer. Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, chairman of the board of strategy of the national conference of organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, announced that the "most comprehensive and far-reaching of all programs ever before undertaken in a united effort by temperance organizations would be carried on during the next thirteen months."

Nomination of Governor Roosevelt for President on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention next June was predicted by United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana before he sailed as American delegate to the Inter-Parliamentary Union conference, opening at Bucharest. Senator Wheeler based his prediction on observations made by him in several representative Western States. These States included Arizona, California, Washington, Nevada, Oregon, North Dakota and Montana. "The sentiment for Governor Roosevelt everywhere is so strong," Senator Wheeler observed, "that I have no hesitancy in predicting that he will be nominated on the first ballot. He has been gaining right along during the past six months all over the country, particularly in the Middle West and the Northwest. Wherever you go you hear them talking about Roosevelt. Hardly any other candidate is mentioned."

Indicating that airships twice the size of the Akron, now the largest craft of its type, may eventually be constructed in the U. S. the Navy Department has opened bids for the construction of the great dirigible hanger at Sunnyvale, California. "The hangar will house one airship of 11,000,000 cubic feet" read an official statement. The capacity of the Akron is 6,500,000 cubic feet.

Milk Pasteurization

Experimental evidence indicates that pasteurization does not injure the chemical or nutritive value of milk to an appreciable degree. It is possible that vitamin C, which protects against scurvy, is injured or destroyed by pasteurization, but that is of little importance, except in the feeding of infants.

Currying Favor

The expression "giving a sop to Cerberus" carries the idea of giving a bribe or gift to quiet a troublesome customer. Cerberus, in Greek mythology, was the three-headed dog that guarded the entrance to the infernal regions. Everglades' Formation

Federal soil experts say the Florida Everglades were formed over a period of 8,000 years through decay of vegetation. In dry weather the soil cracks open and fire starts easily to a great depth. Burned areas are rendered useless. Land destroyed in a fire some years ago today shows no sign of vegetation except dwarfed ragweeds.

Old Legend Concerning Dog Days

A World-Famous Publication Explains "Madness of the Chiefs," Says a Noted Party Got Lectured When the Confession of a Lawyer's Wife.

"There have been many explanations regarding the printing of Shakespeare's 'Madness of the Chiefs,' the actor said, 'but the one that seems most fitting to us follows:

"An old hermit, widely known and loved for his charity and Christian service, lived in a hut in the valley. Near his humble home stood a giant oak tree, which he called his friend. This friend became to grow his shade and sheltered him from the storm. There by lived a wine dresser's daughter, known to everybody for her kindness to the old hermit, who called her his friend that talked.

"One day a terrible storm arose, which was followed by a disastrous flood. The hermit sought shelter in the branches of the tree and was rescued by the vine dresser's daughter, who took him to her home. The hermit was very happy and prayed that his two good friends might be glorified together. Long afterward the hermit, Bernardo, died, and the oak tree was cut down and made into wine casks. By this time the beautiful girl had married and was the mother of two fine sons.

"One day the young mother sat at the door of her cottage with her two sons at her side. Raphael passed by and noticing the beautiful picture made by the mother and her sons quickly took his crayon and sketched it on the head of a wine cask. From this sketch the artist is said to have painted the popular picture of the 'Madonna of the Chair,' and the wish of the old hermit was realized."

First White Woman in West Arrived in 1806

The first white woman in the West of whom there is any record, came out from the Orkney Islands in 1806 in a Hudson's Bay company's ship, disguised as a young man. She arrived to join her sweetheart. In the journal of Alexander Henry, it is recorded without mention of her name, that on December 29, 1807, she gave birth to a child at his trading post at the mouth of the Pembina river. Of the life of the child born that day, the first child born in the West of white parents, nothing is known but that his mother took him with her when she returned to Scotland the summer after his birth. Marie Lagtmodiere, who became the grandmother of Louis Riel, was the second white woman to come to the West of whom there is any record. She arrived in 1807. It was 1812 before there were any other white women in the West. In that year, the second party of Selkirk settlers arrived at York Factory. They included 18 women.—Montreal Herald.

Invocation on Prescription

The science of medicine had its origin in the very depths of ignorance and superstition, and even today it has not entirely shaken off all the hereditary beliefs and symbols which have adhered to it down through the ages. For example, the capital R with the line across its foot, to be found on every prescription, is thought by most physicians to be an abbreviation of the Latin word "Recipe," but Dr. Howard W. Haggard, associate professor of applied physiology at Yale university, has traced it back to an invocation to the god Jupiter, a prayer for his aid to make the treatment effective. In many old medical manuscripts all of the R's occurring in the text are crossed.

Find Ancient Grave

Students of the seminary of the University of Marburg have excavated in Hunfield, in the Rhon, a grave dating from the Fifth century B. C. It contained the remains of 25 men, women and children. On one woman's skeleton were found four dozen amber beads, a ring, bronze ornaments and a bronze bracelet.

The grave held also the skeleton of a woman who had been buried 1,000 years before the others. Two earrings, a necklace, large bracelets, a broad metal girdle and an anklet were found on it, all excellently preserved. The finds have been placed in the provincial museum in Kassel.—German Travel Bureau.

Too Risky

On his appointment the new manager of a certain bank was given much publicity, and photographs of him were reproduced in newspapers. All were not printed attractively.

A depositor wandered in, walked up to the manager, produced one of his photographic reproductions, and asked, "Is this your picture?"

The manager assured him that it was.

"And are you the manager of this bank?"

The other admitted that he was.

"Well, give me my money!" ordered the depositor.

Decided

Harold, aged four, was lonely only child, and begged his father to buy him a dog. But father put him off, and asked if a little brother or sister wouldn't be a nicer playmate.

Harold agreed to wait. A few days later his father took him upstairs to see the new brother who had just arrived. Long and earnestly the child gazed at the red, wrinkled, flannel-wrapped mite. Then he lifted sorrowful eyes to his father and said, "Daddy, buy me the dog."

Ancestral Worry Over the Rising Generation

Owner of some valuable old books, books whose intrinsic value is enhanced to him because they belonged to his great-grandfather or his great-great-grandfather, is Ashton G. Stevenson, says a Chicago dispatch.

That the generations change little is proved, he believes, by quotations from some of the old almanacs he owns. Back in 1824 the younger generation, it seems, was worrying the older generation and the golden age was in the past.

In 1824 the Western Almanack was sorrowful because "40 years ago literature meant learning and was supported by common sense; the ladies of the first respectability learned music, but it was the humming of the wheel and learned the necessary dance steps in following it; their piano forte was a loom and their novels the Bible; some respect was paid to old age, to pious ministers of the gospel and to Sunday."

Mythological

In Greek mythology, Daedalus was an artist, sculptor and architect of Crete who lived three generations before the Trojan war. He built the famous labyrinth on that island and to him are attributed the inventions of the ax, the saw, the auger, etc. Being imprisoned with his son Icarus, he invented wings for flying to Sicily. These were fastened on with wax, and according to the legend Icarus flew so high that the sun's heat melted the wax and he fell into the sea. Daedalus himself reached Sicily. Philologists suppose that Daedalus is not really a proper name but is the common appellation of all the first architects, metallurgists and sculptors in Grecian antiquity, being derived from the Greek word meaning "to work with skill."

Altitudinous Birds

When it comes to high flyers some birds really go up in the air. T. H. Harrison of Pembroke college, Cambridge, reports in Nature, the British Journal of Science, a flock of wild geese flying at an altitude of approximately 25,000 feet—nearly five miles up. These high flyers were accidentally "shot" in a photograph of the sun. Mt. Everett climbers. Professor Harrison says, have reported lammergeiers, curlews and choughs (Old world genus of the crow family) flying higher than 20,000 feet. The highest airplanes have encountered birds, however, is 15,000 feet up, while the average migratory birds do their traveling flights below the 3,000-foot level.

Different

Undoubtedly the story about dividing the apple will be with us as long as the mother-in-law gags, but of course, little Elmer Blane of San Bernardino doesn't know this and, being only six, must be exonerated of plagiarism.

But this time the story is bigger and better, for there were two apples instead of one—a big one and a little one.

"And tell me, Elmer," cooed aunty, "if I asked you to give an apple to your brother, which one would you give him?"

"Do you mean to my big brother or my little one," asked Elmer anxiously.

Discovery

Billy had a new suit which he wanted to wear on Sunday for the first time. He begged to go to church instead of staying with the other small children.

Although with misgivings, mother said he could, but that he would have to be very quiet. For a time, all went well, but during the prayer, every one was startled to hear an excited voice: "Oh, mother, here's another pocket!"

Equipment

A great philosopher once said that he could move even the earth, provided he had certain tools. And he spoke the truth. Virtually nothing should be called impossible. No job is too big for anyone, if the proper equipment is at hand.—Grit.

Northcliffe's Idea of Newspaper Shop Window

Speaking of sermons, or anything: The late Lord Northcliffe, it is related, one day rang up the editor of one of his weekly papers who was new to the editorial chair, and said to him: "Mr. Jones, will you please go round at once to Mr. Isaacs, the fruiterer, in Convent Garden, and ask him what he does with his best apples?"

The editor thought it wise to obey his eccentric chief. When he returned, Lord Northcliffe again rang him up: "What did Mr. Isaacs tell you about where he puts his best apples?"

"He told me," answered the editor, "that he puts them in his shop window."

"Yes, my boy," said Northcliffe, "that's what you have to do. You put your best apples in your shop window—put your best news in your shop window: and your shop window is your front page."—Christian Century.

Domestic Fowl's Ancestor

All domestic fowl are supposed to be descended from the red jungle fowl (Gallus Bankiva) which very much resemble the Black Breasted Red Game Bantam. This fowl is found in the jungles of India, Burmah, Philippine islands and Malay peninsula. Besides the red jungle fowl, there are three other species: the gray jungle fowl of India, the Ceylon jungle fowl and the green or fork-tailed jungle fowl of the island of Java. The latter is said to rival the Vulturine Guinea fowl in the beauty of its plumage. The crow of the jungle cock is short and broken but the cackling and clucking of the jungle hen is very similar to that of domestic poultry. The jungle hen will lay from four to eleven eggs before incubating, a far cry to the 300-egger produced under the hand of man.

Mariner's Compass

The mariner's compass, which the Chinese call "the south pointing chariot," is of great antiquity. The idea, it is said, was born during the reign of Chong Wang, that is to say, a little before 1079 B. C. But in a few centuries the discovery of the principle was forgotten. A philosopher named Chang Hong revived it. He died in 139 B. C. and during the succeeding troublous times his model was neglected. It was in the Third century A. D. that the Chinese interest in the south pointing chariot was revived. Old writings were eagerly studied, trial after trial was perseveringly made, and in writings of the Eleventh century we read of the compass being used by mariners. Before that time it seems to have been used for guidance in traveling by land.

French Company Failed

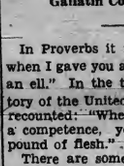
The Company of the Hundred Associates was a trading corporation given a charter by France under which it was to settle 4,000 colonists in America in 15 years. But in the 35 years of its existence it sent out less than a thousand. When the company's charter was annulled in 1633 the European population in New France was scarcely two thousand. All the company did was to send out a few vessels each year to trade with the Indians for furs, and thus ended one of the many unsuccessful colonization efforts to populate French or British Canada.

Lights Out

At church little Jane listened to a sermon on "Let your light shine."

The only part she remembered was the text but she didn't understand what it meant until her mother said: "It means being good, obedient, and cheerful."

In the afternoon there was trouble in the nursery and Jane excused herself for being naughty by saying: "I've blowed myself out."



Washington Writer Becomes Acrimonious In Criticism

Editors's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Correspondent for the Gallatin County News

In Proverbs it is written: "For when I gave you an inch, you tooke an ell." In the to-be-written history of the United States, it will be recounted: "When we gave you a competence, you demanded a pound of flesh."

There are some things hard to understand and among these the persistent request by the ex-service man of more and more for less and less or no reason at all. A patriotic service has been rendered at "less than cost" but must it forever be sold, bartered, exchanged and used as a big club with which to threaten, intimidate, force, cajole, heckle and otherwise terrify our representatives for what have you?" Dam this sort of patriotism, loyalty, fidelity. It is high time veterans begin as a group to recognize that loyalty to the government need not be bought and must not be sold!

It might seem more in keeping with useful procedure if former service men assisted through objective voluntary effort to reduce the present distress. Instead, pressure is being brought to force various kinds of discriminatory legislation. It seems Mr. Service Man has put his patriotic service under the hammer. The office seeker and holder is forced to pay a high price for these goods. Mr. Politician knows he must pay or they will skin him alive politically; at least, the service man's growl sounds deep and ominous.

Apparently Service men do not understand the real nature of the Adjusted Service Certificate. A certain amount was to be paid to the holder at the end of twenty years. About half of the time 'till payment has passed and now Mr. Service Man has repudiated his acceptance of the original conditional offer. He has, in a manner, threatened the political life of everybody from President Hoover to the Mayor. So the Government was forced to grind out a new payment heedless of upon whom the penalty may fall.

On May 19, 1924, Congress passed the Adjusted Compensation Act. This Act awarded to 3,498,000 veterans approximately $1,365,000,000 further compensation for War service. To this sum was added 25 per cent, said to be consideration for deferring the payment until about 1945; the whole bearing interest at 5 per cent compounded annually.

The Certificate had an increasing loan value but the burden of an immediate payment of the above amount was never contemplated. It was upon this distinct and explicit understanding of the Congress that the adjustment was in every respect satisfactory and that all matters relating to a Bonus were closed.

The above contract has been entered into between the Veterans and the United States. This contract was violated by veterans seeking further discriminatory legislation. Our last Congress was forced to pass a law increasing the loans on bonus certificates to 50 per cent of their "face" value. The excuse used then for reopening of the Bonus Act was based on the fact "that great distress prevailed among the veterans by reason of drought and general business depression."

There is no argument to offset known facts. Veterans are in despair, but so are a greater number of human beings in the U. S. including women and children. Thruout the world there is distress due to post war depression. The condition being international—not local, why shi uld war veterans in a disturbed p ea seek class distinction at the peril of millions? What type of patriotism is this—that will take food an i shelter away from women and children?

Is our valor given in time of need to be sold, bartered or exchanged to the highest political bidder? What is the gain that a limited class of men may be "violently willing" to dispose of their valor through such an obvious rupture of fundamental principle?

There has never existed any opposition to the veteran who is ill, disabled and needy receiving compensation and treatment suitable to his case. The Government has further extended these principles to include hospitalization for those who served, and may be suffering from illness or disability NOT INCURRED in service. Today the hospitals designed originally to care for disabled veterans are filled with men among whom are those who incurred illness not only not connected with service, but worse, due to their own misconduct.

Effective relief for the veteran can only become "effective" when the nation as a whole prospers. Relief as expressed by a limited—tain amount was to be paid to the hence false stimulation is not beneficial but actually reacts unfavorably. Seek employment—it is the most certain aid to a normal return of prosperity. When the wheels of industry turn we are on the road to prosperity. Recovery cannot be anticipated when funds are inaccessable to the purpose of industry by reason of their diversion into improper channels thru the unjust and selfish taxation.

It is time the veteran poured his soothing syrup into the sink and began to face reality. It must be a wonderful feeling when self elation and glory can so charm an individual as to make him forget that millions of other humans including women and children face even greater peril. The government has not offered them hospitalization free of charge.

The payment of the Bonus or any other forms of discriminatory relief legislation would retard the return of prosperity by reason of its direct contribution to inactivity. Such a contribution would in fact be a "Dole" to a chosen few. The bonus effect might be most favorably compared to that of an addict —who sunk in the pits of despair takes another "shot" and awakens later to a realization that its reaction completely submerged the temporary benefit by the stimulation. Temporary relief serves to alleviate but fails miserably to soften blows.

Without respect to party, or consequence, President Hoover has taken a stand. It is an opportune moment for sanity and reason to prevail in the so-called non-political organizations attempting to force an issue of treasury plundering upon the taxpayers. If they represented the will of all veterans that would be a subject for consideration; however such an impression seems prevalent.

The patriotism of a few may be for sale—but many more voice an opinion to the contrary—incuding our President.

Polishes Instantly

Needles very often become sticky after sewing with them for a while. If the needle is run through the hair it becomes smooth and easy to sew with in a second. Rust can be taken off by putting the needle on the floor and rubbing it backwards and forwards with the sole of the shoe.

The Changing Times

Things have changed. Women are more important than they were 30 years ago. There was then the classic story of the man who gave his wife a birthday present of half a dozen bars of laundry soap and a wringer. Recently a woman gave her husband, who is an indolent author, one thousand sheets of copy paper and a new typewriter ribbon.—New York Herald Tribune.

Shows Weather Fluctuations

Both tree and varves are mute witnesses to weather fluctuations. Very old trees show thick and thin rings. Layers of clay, called varves, found in the former beds of ancient lakes fed by melting ice sheets, form another record. These layers are due to the annual deposit of sediment. Thick layers were deposited in warm summers when melting was rapid, and thin layers in cool summers.

Bird's-Eye Maple

The forest service is experimenting in an effort to determine what causes the formation known as bird's-eye maple. The formation consists of an indentation which is regular and which goes from the outer part of the tree to the core. There is one theory that the tree is suppressed in growth, heavily shaded or grown under some other abnormal condition. It is not believed to be due to an insect injury or to a bark injury or to any pathological condition.

Famous Clockmaker

Seth Thomas was born at Wolcott, Conn., in 1785. He received a meager education and was apprenticed to a carpenter and joiner in New Haven. He learned clockmaking from Eli Terry, whose business he acquired in 1810. In 1813 Thomas purchased a factory in the western part of Plymouth, Mass., which was known as the "thriving village of Thomaston." His clocks, manufactured between 1813 and 1835, were largely shelf clocks, a few small mantel clocks and regulators. Thomas died in 1859. In 1872 the company began to make tower clocks.

The early history of coffee as a beverage is obscure, but it is believed that the coffee tree was originally found by Arab travelers in the Abyssinian province of Kaffa about 1,000 years ago. Gospel Translated Translation of the Gospel of St. John in Yiash, the most primitive language of [illegible] Indians in Guatemala, Mexico's most accessible language of the Indians, and it is the eleventh of the principal Indian languages spoken in Central America into which any part of the Bible has been translated. To accomplish the almost impossible task of translating the guttural, explosive dialect, the translators, Rev. and Mrs. H. Dudley Pace of the Guatemala mission of the Presbyterian church, had to rely upon human dictionaries and grammars—Indians selected for their general intelligence, linguistic ability and knowledge of Spanish. One of these, Aniceto Velasquez, had three years at the Bible school, during which he walked 940 miles per year, to and from school. In Mam, John 3:16, appears thus: "Kma tctsunju ttiatjtanmi Dios quij xjal, tzu tzunju tzajtgkon ocxcajun Tkual, tuntsun jinlju intxcotanmi U), miai cubxit), tuntsun titen angkbil jamajx." Which being translated into English reads that well loved verse: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." A translation of the entire 27 books of the New Testament is under way.

Wonders of Universe Revealed by Stars

Sir James Jeans, the famous astronomer, has told us that if Adam had been a wireless operator and had dispatched an SOS message to the nearest globular cluster of stars, it would still have a long way to travel before it reached them. When you consider that light moves at the speed of 186,000 miles a second, you may realize to some extent what this means.

Even the sun, on whom we rely for heat and light, is so far away that we see him not as he is but as he was rather more than eight minutes ago.

Look up into the sky and you cannot see a single fixed star more recently than four and a half years ago. And there are very few whose light reaches us as quickly as this. For all we know some of the stars we see may have ceased to exist thousands of years ago. There may have been in the dim ages of the past collisions which our remote great-great-grandchildren will live to see.—Washington Star.

Locksmith's Art Old

The history of the locksmith's art is probably as old as civilization, and references to it are found in the early literature of every nation. Wood was undoubtedly the first material used in the construction of locks, but the Egyptians at an early date employed brass and iron. The Hebrews and Greeks used crooked keys with ivory or wooden handles. The similarity of primitive locks made access to the house easy and led to the improvement of methods, resulting in the so-called Lacedaemonian lock. Among the ancient nations lockmaking made little progress in advance of what had been done by the Egyptians. Even the Romans used very simple locks. The tumblers lock was probably first invented and used by the Chinese.

Natural Currents

The Gulf stream and other ocean currents are not freaks of nature, but result from natural causes. Wind blowing steadily for a considerable time from the same direction is able to start surface currents. This is demonstrated in the currents of the Great lakes, where there are no differences of temperature or saltiness, and also by the currents of the Indian ocean north of the equator, where the currents reverse their direction after changes in the monsoon winds. It has been calculated that the force of the trade winds is sufficient in 100,000 years to set water in motion to the depth of 12,000 feet.

Work of Old Sculptors

A marble column bearing the head of Hermes, similar to the columns used to mark the entrances to Athenian streets in ancient times, was discovered by a group of American archeologists excavating in ruins at Athens. At the head of the column was the hand of a woman holding an infant whose head is missing. The body of the woman also missing. The group represents Peace holding the hands of the infant Ploutos, god of riches. Excavations by the British school in Athens near Loutraki revealed remains of the ancient temple of Juno and vases of the proto-Corinthian epoch.

Father Not to Blame

The baby was being displayed to admiring callers.

Must Have Attended Good Bishop's Audiences

One of the leading brethren of [illegible] said in an interview in Gryste, [illegible]:

"Nearly everybody nowadays before Sabbath or after we finish talking into a microphone. The usual form is to say, 'Well, your speech is over. There, I hope they heard me all right,' and those last words, of course, go out to the other along with your prepared speech.

"I remember the case of a dear old bishop. He wound up a radio sermon, 'And if we obey these blessed precepts we will all meet, dearly beloved, in heaven—I don't think.'"

Flowers Prominent in Every Age of Mankind

The love of flowers seems to be an innate thing, a mysterious power that has always had a part in the affairs of men. The Greeks were fond of flowers, especially those having a pleasant perfume. They used them in all kinds of decorations and in their religious ceremonies. The Greeks and Romans both loved roses and used them extensively, and Cleopatra was most extravagant in her use of roses, spending huge sums of money for them. Of all peoples it is said the Hindu has the most sincere love for flowers, having as well a mystic understanding of flower life. He visits his garden with reverence, talks to the flowers, and weaves fanciful stories around them.

Long, long before the Christian era poets sung the praises of flowers, the rose always occupying a prominent place in the ceremony. Dedication to the gods was one of the many honors heaped upon this popular queen of the garden.

Ingersoll's Eloquence

The following is the excerpt from Ingersoll's famous speech in which he characterized James G. Blaine as a plumed knight:

"Our country, crowned with the vast and marvelous achievements of its first century, asks for a man worthy of the past and prophetic of her future; asks for a man who has the audacity of genius; asks for a man who is the grandest combination of heart, conscience and brain beneath her flag—such a man is James G. Blaine. . . . Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen foreheads of the defamers of his country and the maligners of his honor."

Birth of Great Industry

The first salt to be obtained from spring water in New York state was crudely manufactured by the French Father Simon Le Moyne in 1653, according to a recent publication of the New York state museum. While on a visit to the Onondago Indians during that year a fountain was shown to him from which he was to obtain "salt as natural as that from the sea." Up to that time the only salt made in the state was got from the comparatively weak brines of the ocean. From such small beginnings has the state's present large salt industry grown.

Origin of "Yankee"

There are several theories about the origin of the word "Yankee." Dr. William Gordon said it was a cant word in use at Cambridge, Mass., as early as 1713, denoting excellence. He supposed it was originally a by-word in college. Thierry says it is a corruption of Jankin, a diminutive of John. Anbury says it is derived from a Cherokee word "eankke," which signified "coward," "slave." Another theory is that the Indians, in endeavoring to pronounce the words English and Englais, made it into Yengees, which the English changed to Yankee.

"Transitional Writing"

According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, six different peoples in various parts of the world developed a system of writing usually known as transitional, that is to say, including ideographs or pictures and phonetic symbols or letters. These include the Sumerians and Babylonians, the Egyptians, the Hittites, the Chinese, and the Mayas and Aztecs in America. Our present letters of the alphabet are derived from the Phoenicians, who probably improved on the ideas of the Egyptians and Babylonians.

Hawaiian Volcanoes

Doctor Jagger of the geological survey says that volcanic activity in the Hawaii national park, in either Kilauea or Mauna Loa, is due to occur within the near future. The Hawaiian volcanoes are known as the most continuously, variously and harmlessly active volcanoes on earth. Eruptions are welcomed by the Hawaiians, since visitors from many places are attracted to the spectacular outbursts. It is said that these are probably the only volcanoes that can be visited with reasonable safety.

Needle Spoke Sailed by Uses of "Hog Latin"

Perhaps the strangest language in the world is that spoken by natives of Johore, on the Malay peninsula, and used by them only when they are in search of camphor.

The camphor tree grows abundantly in certain parts of the peninsula, but not all of these contain camphor crystals and the product of these trees is of much better quality than that obtained from the camphor laurel of Formosa and Japan. The latter produces the more common commercial camphor.

There is a belief among the Malayans that each species of the tree has a spirit or divinity which presides over it, known as Bhaan, which means literally, "a woman," and this spirit is supposed to jealously guard the tree from those in search of it. They also believe that Bhaan understands the language of both Malay and Jakun, so in order to deceive her they have formulated a sort of "hog Latin," a mixture of reversed native words, and with this jargon, so they think, they are able to completely confuse the spirit.

Incidentally, the Jakuns who hunt camphor are one of the wildest peoples, but are entirely inoffensive. They live together with monkeys, dogs, cats, and innumerable fowl, in perfect harmony. Their only unusual accomplishment is the establishment of the camphor language.—Pathfinder Magazine.

"7" Not Sacred Number Among the Babylonians

The number seven has been especially sacred, mystical and symbolical since the dawn of history. It is interesting, therefore, to find at least one ancient civilization which may not so have regarded it.

Recent archeological finds in Babylonia include dice which, it is estimated, must have been made and used 5,000 years ago. This establishes dice as one of the oldest and least changed of all ordinary things in human history in common use today. These ancient dice, however, differ from their modern descendants in that the sum of the spots on two opposite sides varies instead of being always seven. This probably means that the cult of seven as a sacred number did not prevail among the Babylonians. The cult has flourished in succeeding civilizations. Among the Greeks seven was sacred and in the Bible occur many groups of seven, as seven stars, seven trumpets, seven spirits and the seven horns and seven eyes of the Lamb.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Visit to Holger Danske

Most foreign tourists are attracted to Elsinore in Denmark, because of its literary, if not historic, associations with Hamlet and Ophelia, Kronberg castle having been used as the scene by Shakespeare, of that old tragedy. A better claim for renown, however, should be the huge sitting statue of Holger Danske in the deep, dark Kasematter of that gloomy fortress. You will be given lighted tapers that you may the better view the features of the sleeping giant, whose long beard has grown to the table at which he sits. He is the tutelary genius of Denmark, and when that country is menaced, Holger Danske, so says the legend, will walk forth to protect the little kingdom of the Danes.

Test for the Lungs

A good test that is believed to indicate the efficiency of the respiratory system, including the lungs, the nerves which control them and the blood circulation maintained by the heart is to hold the breath for 60 seconds. If the individual has a poor respiratory system or if his heart is not able to circulate the blood properly or if the blood is insufficient, says Dr. E. E. Free, the person thus handicapped will not be able to hold his breath as long as 60 seconds. This test is frequently given in selecting airplane pilots because it is believed to indicate the stability of the nervous system under flying conditions at high altitudes.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Beautiful Old Cathedral

The cathedral at Rouen, France, which is of the Thirteenth century period, is one of the most impressive in existence. It once possessed the heart of Richard Coeur de Lion, which is now in a museum. It is 447 feet long, the nave is 92 feet high, and a tower, built to replace an old one struck by lightning, is of iron, 500 feet high. The front varies from Romanesque to the Flamboyant. The fine rose windows and the sculpture about the rich gabled portals are noteworthy.

Species of Salamander

"Water-dog" is a common name for hellbenders, large, ugly but harmless salamanders, which are found in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and the Southeast. They feed on crayfish, fish and other water animals, and readily take the bait from fishermen's hooks. They exude much slime, are difficult to handle, and can live for hours out of water. The spawn resembles that of frogs, but is lighter in color. They reach a length of about twenty inches.

Bridge of Steps

Neu Rossen, Germany, has a "bridge of steps." The structure is entirely of concrete, and the floor consists of a series of steps, gradually flattening at the top of the steep arch, in order to make the climb and descent easier for the pedestrians. A high steel railing at each side also helps the climbers.

4-H Club Exhibits Prominent at Fair

Junior Agricultural 4-H Club members took a prominent part in the Kentucky State Fair, where they exhibited livestock, canned and baked foods and clothing, and judged fat stock, dairy cattle and poultry.

Six hundred jars of fruit, vegetables, jams and jellies, 800 garments made by club girls, and a large amount of bread, cakes and other baked foods were exhibited by club members in the College of Agriculture's exhibit in the grandstand building.

Club members also showed 100 head of dairy cattle, 500 chickens, and a large number of pigs and sheep. Graves county had the best 4-H Club exhibit of Jerseys, Shelby county the best Holstein exhibit and Jefferson county the champion Guernsey exhibit.

Fifty-eight county teams judged fat stock, dairy cattle and poultry. Grant county was best in judging fat stock, Simpson county in judging dairy cattle, and Pike county in judging poultry.

SIMPLE TREATMENT INCREASES YIELDS

Extensive tests made during the 18 years that the Experiment Station has maintained test fields over the state point to the profitableness of using phosphate and limestone on most soils in Kentucky.

Wheat yields have been doubled, on an average; corn yields increased by an average of 17 bushels to the acre; clover hay returns almost trebled, and increases secured in tobacco and other crops.

In general, says a report of the Experiment Station, the results indicate that for the soils outside the central bluegrass region the outstanding needs for larger yields of farm crops are phosphorus, lime and nitrogen. Nitrogen has become deficient because of the lack of legumes in the cropping system and because of the removal of crops without the return of manure and crop residue. Lime is necessary for the growing of good clover, as well as many other legumes. The use of a phosphate fertilizer in addition to lime is required for good yields on most of these soils.

Proper fertilizing of tobacco increased yields as much as 100 per cent in Monroe county.

The Grayson Chamber of Commerce, county board of education and the county agricultural agent are cooperating in arrangements for the Carter County Fair.

The third cutting of alfalfa in Garrard county averaged over a ton to the acre.

The late August rains helped to produce a record crop of burley tobacco in Warren county.

Extensive vaccination checked an outbreak of blackleg among cattle in Rockcastle county.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OCTOBER 4th to 10th

Thoughtful people throughout the United States will again observe Fire Prevention Week, as suggested by the President in his annual proclamation.

This year October 4th ushers it in. Commercial, civic, social and other organizations will hold appropriate meetings. Millions of school children will take part.

You can make a definite contribution to Fire Prevention Week by increasing your efforts to safeguard your own home and business.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

has always been an active factor in Fire Prevention Week—through the National Board of Fire Underwriters and other organizations, and through its local agents in all states.

The purpose of Fire Prevention Week is not only to reduce the fire waste, but to save human lives. In doing that, further reductions in the average cost of insurance will be justified—a cost that has consistently declined for many years.

CONFERENCE CHURCH

There will be services at Gunpowder Baptist church on next Sunday afternoon at 2 p. m. Rev. J. A. Miller, of Elsmere, will do the preaching.

SILOS BEING FILLED

Practically every silo in Boone county will be filled inside the next two weeks. This will be due to one of the best corn crops in many years and to increased appreciation as to the value of a succulent feed for the winter feeding of cattle, sheep and other classes of livestock. This succulence on the average farm is not secured in any other form.

The question asked many times recently, "What is the difference in value of silage with ears shucked off and with the ears left on?"

Henry and Morrison (feed authorities) answer the question with the following results of experimental work." Silage with the ears shucked off is worth 61 per cent per ton of what it would have been worth with the ears left on. There is no advantage of shucking the ears off and feeding them separately."

SHEEP DRENCHING DEMONSTRATIONS

Two sheep drenching demonstrations in the control of stomach worms in sheep were given by the County Agent Tuesday morning. The first demonstration was given on the farm of Walter Ferguson of near Union at 8:00 a. m., the second on the farm of Robert Woods of near Big Bone at 10:30 a. m.

The control of intestinal parasites in sheep, hogs, poultry and other classes of livestock has come to be one of the most important livestock problems. Prevention thru use of clean pastures and ground brought about by regular changes at set intervals is probably one of the best methods of control. This is not always possible. The next step is the ridding of the parasites thru some recommended method of treatment. Not all treatments on the market have been found effective.

POULTRY FIELD DAY

Poultry Field Day will be held on the Experiment Station farm, Lexington, Wednesday, October 7th. Many Boone county poultrymen are interested each year in this annual event.

County Agent H. R. Forkner has made arrangements for several poultrymen to go to the meeting in cars so as to cut down the cost of transportation. He will be glad to get in touch with all who are interested in attending.

KOREAN LESPEDEZA CUT FOR HAY

Korean lespedeza was being cut for hay on the farm of Mr. Joel Gray of near Burlington the first part of the week. Mr. Gray has fifteen acres of the above crop. The first seven acres cut averaged close to two big wagon loads per acre which was estimated at one and one-half tons per acre.

Mr. J. B. Respess of near Florence, cut about two weeks ago one of the two fields grown on his farm. Mr. Hamilton, his farm manager reported that the hay was of excellent quality.

A number of growers are waiting until the seed are more mature before cutting, others report that sufficient growth has not been secured. Korean is a new crop in Boone county and is being studied this year under a wide variety of conditions.

CLASS TO START

Miss Willanna Hampton Smith, who furnished the music at the dedicatory exercises at the Florence school last Saturday will start her class in music Friday October 2nd. She is taking pupils for private lessons in voice violin and piano. Miss Smith was highly complimented for her musical numbers last Saturday. Small Boys Wonder Scotland Yard is now considering a plan for training women as detectives. Many a small boy thought his maternal parent a pretty good detective without need for training.

The following letter was received from J. B. Holcomb, of Chicago, in regard to the recent arrangement by which the Gallatin County News will be published at Burlington.

Mr. Holcomb is a former publisher of the old Warsaw Independent and now hais a fine postion with The H. J. Heinz Company.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 22, 1931

Mr. R. E. Berkshire,
Burlington, Ky.

Dear. Mr. Berkshire:

That you are to publish the "Gallatin County News" and the fine old county of Gallatin is assured a first-class newspaper comes as an interesting bit of news, and we take this occasion to wish you every success in this venture.

The writer recalls a very interesting interview with you about seven years ago when such an arrangement was discussed. Now that you have a paved highway connecting the two counties, we feel sure that the arrangement will be practical as well as profitable to both yourself and the readers of the News.

With the inception of the widely diversified campaign now being conducted by county agents as well as county health departments, a country newspaper is becoming a more vital factor in the development of the rural community, and I am sure that the idea of central publishing plants for a number of counties will result in economies that will enable such mediums to make great progress in the future.

We believe that your arrangement will enable you to give both the readers of the "News" and "Recorder" a better paper, and at the same time give your advertisers a more efficient service.

We know that you will encounter a number of difficulties that go with a change of this kind. However, the pleasure that you will derive from this fascinating work will more than compensate you for such grief.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely Yours,
J. B. HOLCOMB

The pigs made an average daily gain of 1.39 pounds, and added 17 pounds is weight for each 56 pounds of grain consumed. G. M. Haycraft, another Grayson county farmer, is making extensive use of ground wheat and wheat bran in his dairy herd ration.

A total of 1,920 sticks of ripe tobacco were cut from an acre and a half in Powell county, acording to County Agent W. L. Browning. The land, which was thin, was treated with 375 pounds of superphosphate and 400 pounds of 9-18-18 fertilizer before the plants were set, and 100 pounds of nitrate of soda were used as a sid dressing.

TAKES THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF BOONE COUNTY LEAGUE IN GAME WITH WALTON

Petersburg annexed the title in the Boone County League when they defeated Walton in a play-off game at Burlington, Saturday. The Petersburg nine won by a score of 5 to 1.

One of the largest crowds that ever attended a ball game in Burlington was present to see the most interesting contest of the season. Petersburg connected with 11 hits while Walton clicked out six safeties.

Boehler, Petersburg's crack pitcher struck out fourteen men which was one of the biggest reasons for Walton's defeat.

Norman who pitched for Walton accounted for seven of the Petersburg batters. Boehler's control was almost perfect and only one Walton man reached first base by the walk route. Norman was almost equal to his opponent when it came to control allowing only two walks. Matthews of Petersburg got to Norman for three hits while Bradford accounted for two and Boehler accounted for two more bingles. Lowe of Petersburg hit one for three stations.

Umpires were Lape, Cincinnati, Shearer first base and Pap Brady at the other station.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of our beloved brother John McMurray, who departed this life October 3, 1930.

Dearest John, how we miss you,
Tears in silence often flow;
Memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died one year ago.

When the evening shades are falling,
And when we are sitting all alone,
In our hearts there comes a longing,
If you, dear, only would come home.

Surrounded by friends we are lonesome,
In the midst of our joys we are blue
With a smile on our face we've a heartache
Longing, dear John, for you.

Sadly missed by Sisters Mabel and Stella.

TWO INJURED

AUTOMOBILE WRECK ON DIXIE HIGHWAY, SUNDAY RESULTS IN BOONE COUNTY RESIDENTS SUFFERING INJURIES

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Clarkson, of Dixie Highway near Florence, were injured Sunday night when they were struck by an automobile driven by a man who it was said is employed in the erection of the new Florence school. Sheriff Herbert Snyder when informed of the wreck learned that the driver of the other car was a Mr. Schumaker.

Mrs. Clarkson suffered a broken leg. It was believed at first that her husband had suffered a broken shoulder but it later was learned that it was sprained.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson had been visiting Mrs. Susie Stephens, a daughter of Mrs. Clarkson. Walter Hall took them to their home and as they were crossing the highway Schumaker's car is said to have struck them.

BOONE COUNTY FARMER PRODUCES NEW MIXTURE

Mr. John Binder, of Big Bone, tried a new wrinkle in planning for an annual pasture this year. He seeded a mixture of 30 pounds of rape, 45 pounds of sweet clover and five bushels of oats on five acres. He started pasturing the above crop when the oats were six inches high. Thirty shoats were kept on the pasture continuously but did not keep the growth down. Ten cows were also pastured at night for a month and one half during the summer and there is still some rape and a good crop of sweet clover left.

Those farmers who are interested in better annual pastures might do well to talk over the above mixture with Mr. Binder.

Many farmers the past few weeks have been making inquiries about seeding vetch with their wheat, rye and barley. Mr. Ben Paddack, of Hebron, the past year seeded 1½ bushels of rye and 15 pounds of vetch to the acre and got splendid results. The rye and vetch were cut for hay early and a crop of soy beans raised during the summer.

Mr. Otto Souther, of near Idlewild, Mr. Sterling Rouse, of near Limaburg, and Mr. Everett Ryle of near Rabbit Hash, are Boone county farmers who have had experience with this crop during recent years. The variety used is hairy winter vetch, the seed of which should be innoculated when sown on the ground for the first time. The earlier seeding is preferred.

SECRETARY'S BOOK WINS STATE PRIZE

The secretary's book of the Corncracker 4-H Club was received from the State Fair the past week with a third premium tie in the contest for the best community 4-H Club secretary's book kept during 1931.

The ribbon also carries a seven dollar premium award.

The corncracker club secretary's book was kept by Madge Reeves. Her efficient service in keeping an accurate records of all her club's activities has been a big help to the Corncracker boys and girls. It might be said that project work is only a part of the 4-H program, an important part of which is the self responsibility of each member in the carrying on of the self government, community organization and educational activities of his club.

CANDIDATE

ADDRESSES FIVE HUNDRED BOONE COUNTY DEMOCRATS AT COURT HOUSE

State Senator A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor was the principal speaker at a rally held at the Boone county court house, Burlington, Friday afternoon. A crowd of more than five hundred persons turned out to greet him.

Chandler was introduced to his audience by L. T. Utz who was chairman of the meeting. Chandler has a record as a good roads man and as one who has stood up for the rights of citizens of small counties during his service in the state legislature.

The Republican tariff measure which Chandler said was largely responsible for the difficult times that have troubled the United States, formed the principal part of his address. He asserted that the tariff through its unreasonable restrictions has been largely the cause of the big drop in farm prices.

Chandler criticised the Sampson administration and the former bipartisan highway commission and averred that the present commission had built better roads at a much lesser cost to the taxpayers.

Chandlers speech was well received by the voters who applauded him at very opportunity.

ENDS LIFE

ELSMERE DAIRYMAN WAS TO HAVE APPEARED IN DIVORCE ACTION IN KENTON CIRCUIT COURT

John Lusher, 47, dairyman, Elsmere, Ky., ended his life last Saturday just a few hours before he was to have appeared in Kenton Circuit Court for a hearing of his wifes suit for divorce against him. Lusher killed himself wth a shot gun on the rear porch of his home.

When he ended his life, Lusher was not aware that his wife intended to bring about a reconciliation and withdraw her petition for divorce. She had charged that her husband drank to excess.

Mrs. Lusher filed the divorce suit on September 14. She charged that because of her husband's drinking habits he had been neglecting his dairy.

Although a divorce suit had been filed Mr. and Mrs. Lusher lived on the same farm. Shortly before daylight Lusher's four children and their mother heard a shot. They rushed downstairs and found Lusher dead. He had propped himself against a porch pillar and discharged the shot gun with his toe.

The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of Philip Tallaferro in Erlanger.

PROPHETS

We cannot think of anything quite so foolish as trying to predict what will happen next. There has arisen an unusually large crop of prophets in the past two years, some predicting a speedy return of prosperity, others telling us that we are in for many years more of hard times.

We have our own opinions as to what is going to happen, but we try to keep them to ourselves. When it comes to predicting facts, we are sure only of a very few things.

We predict, for example, that there will be a lot more cold weather than warm weather between now and Spring. We feel reasonably safe on that point. We predict that there will be either a Democrat or a Republican elected to the Presidency next year, and we don't believe anybody can hit it any closer than that, as politics look now. We won't take a chance on predicting whether Henry Ford is going to bring out a new car for 1932 or not, but we feel safe in prophesying that if he does he'll sell a lot of them. We wish we knew whether the price of wheat and cotton were going up or down. We don't but we predict that, which ever way farm prces go, the political farmers will still be asking Uncle Sam to help them out. There are a few other things still in the future of which we are certain. Water will continue to run down hill, the sun will rise daily in the East as usual, and there will be just as many fools on wheels breaking their own necks and others next year as there were this year. We can't tell whether women are going to wear their hair and their skirts long or short, but we feel certain that whatever any man says they are going to do they'll do the opposite.

Outside of a few certainities like that, because upon the unchangeable laws of nature, human and otherwise, we don't set up to be any kind of prophet. But we do predict that almost everything will be different next year and succeeding years from what they are today.

It would be a pretty dull world, seems to us, if anybody could tell what is going to happen next. What makes life interesting is the variety there is in it.

The Family Garden

WINTER CARE OF THE GARDEN
(By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture)

Although winter is several months away, the time is at hand to arrange for putting the garden into the condition best to pass through the cold winter weather sure to come.

The least that may happen to a garden not properly prepared for this winter is a tremendous loss of nitrogen, the most important, and at the same tme, the most expensive plant-food a gardener uses. Too, the behavior of a garden during the dry weather of the summer depends on what steps have been taken to conserve the winter rains.

The way to offset the loss of fertility is to have the ground occupied with a growing crop; this same crop, turned under, adds humus so necesary to make soil capable of holding moisture.

The best humus crop is rye, for it is sufficiently hardy to survive even quite severe winter weather, thus conserving plant food that would otherwise be lost. It is capable, too, of making considerable growth because it takes advantage of every growing day that may occur even in mid-winter. Rye does not add new plant-food as the clovers, do, but, turned under in a succulent condition, it rots quickly, and in doing so, sets free for the use of vegetables, plant-food they could scarcely absorb without this assistance. Objection to the use of rye is the difficulty when it is turned under, horse-plowing being the only practicable means. This bars the use of rye from hand-spaded gardens.

The next best crop is kale. It survives any but the most severe weather, and although it fuhnishes much less humus than does rye, the quality of that humus, and the peculiarly good effect of the root system of kale, leaves the soil in a condition that few crops do. Those gardeners who have been sowing plots and orws as the vegetables vacate them are fortunate.

Next best, would have been a crop that made ts growth in the early fall, whose frost-killed tops would serve to prevent winter soil washing and furnish some humus, albeit little plant food. Such a crop is oats, but they should have been sown some time ago, to insure considerable growth before frost.

If no humus crop has been provided for, and if the garden lies so that there will be no danger of soil washing, the best treatment a garden may receive after frost is to break it, leaving the furrow slices on edge. Fall-breaking does several things. The vegetable tops and the weeds are turned under to break down into humus; the insects harboring in them are buried so deeply that may do not emerge, and those that have gone down into the soil for the winter are turned up to freeze. Lastly, a rough broken soil surface is best enabled to catch and store the winter rains and snows; too, the alternate freezing and thawing that go on all winter have the beneficial effect of pulverizing the soil and making it easily workable.

Perhaps the best general suggestion to be given at this time is embodied in what might well be the slogan of good gardeners; "PLOW YOUR GARDEN IN THE FALL," if the garden is level. Rolling gardens in which soil-washing occur, had best be left as they are, as being the best choice left.

And, with this, may the writer close the series for 1931, with the hope that the gardens for 1932 will be "bigger and better?"

GOOD POULTRY MAKE MONEY FOR WOMAN

Wayne county farmers recently attended a metting at the farm of Mrs. T. S. Roberts near Mills Springs to see her flock and to hear discussions of her poultry raising methods. She is cooperating with County Agent H. J. Hayes and the College of Agriculture in demonstrating the value of sanitation in raising chickens.

Records kept by Mrs. Roberts indicated that she raised 300 of the 304 chicks hatched by a local hatchery from eggs furnished from her flock. She showed the visitors 129 choice pullets and 19 cockerels 16 weeks old which she had raised at a cost of $34.722 plus her labor. She had sold 152 cockerels and cull pullets for $83.85.

Mrs. Roberts followed the clean chick program, which consists of starting with healthy chicks from B. W. D. tested stock; clean and adeuate euipment; feeding balanced rations in hoppers that keep the feed clean, and growing the young stock on clean ground away from old birds.

FARMERS MAY QUIT KEEPING OLD HOGS

Keeping hogs until they are several years old will soon be a thing of the past in Eastern Kentucky, thinks R. T. Faulkner, agricultural agent in Johnson county, who reports the production of several ton litters this year. M. B. Fairchilds, of Johnson county, fed a litter of eight pigs to a weight of 2,158 pounds when 1622 days old. Harry Davis, another Johnson-co., farmer made nine pigs weigh 2,372 pounds when 165 days old, and Powell Collins owned a litter of pigs of nine that weighed 1,837 pounds at 165 days. All these farmers reported good profits.

Spencer county farmers have purchased several hundred western ewes and a number of purebred native Hampshire and Southdown rams.

Mrs Lena Swattman, of Butler couty, have harvested 620 bushels of seed from 30 acres of orchard grass.

PAID DIVIDENDS GOOD YEAR FOR EASTERN KENTUCKY

Exhibits at the recent annual Harvest Festival and Agricultural Fair, at the Robinson Experiment Subsation at Quicksand reflected a good growing season in Eastern Kentucky this year. An unusually large number of fine displays were made of all kinds of crops, fruits, and vegetables. The exhibits numbered more than 2,000, making it a large and attractive fair.

Products showed included corn, field crops, hogs, poultry, eggs, apples, potatoes, garden products, flowers bread, cakes, pies and other culinary products, canned fruits and vegetables, preserves and jams, textiles, house furnishings, sewing, school displays and homemade articles.

There was a separate division for 4-H Club members. Educational exhibits were made by the E. Stuart Robinson and Hindman Settlement schools, Berea College and the Wooten Community Center, and the Frontier Nursing Service.

The Kentucky State Horticultural Society sponsored a commercial apple show which attracted displays of exceptionally fine fruit from Knox, Powell and Johnson counties. One hundred plates of apples were exhibited in the home orchard department. A very large amount of fine fruit of all kinds was on display.

Unusual exhibits were made of garden products of all kinds, canned fruits and vegetables, preserves, jams and jellies, indicating that a large amount of food is being preserved this year.

The farm crops department included a great variety of grains, an dhay and pasture grasses and legumes, including alfalfa, lespedeza, and red and sweet clover.

The fair and festival is an annual event made possble through the generosty of E. O. Robinson, of Ft. Thomas, Ky., who gave the University the 15,000 acres of land upon which the Experiment Substation is located. Cash prizes distributed totaled $1,200.

Music was furnished by the University of Kentucky band. C. W. Manning, of Lexington, delivered the principal address.

The Way of Life by Bruce Barton

WORDS

An officer of an insurance company invited me to the formal opening of some model tenements which the company has erected.

"Why should I come to see model tenements?" I asked.

For answer he pulled out of his pocket a crumpled sheet of paper saying, "Here's an editorial that you wrote nearly fifteen years ago. You pointed out that the insurance companies collect millions of dollars in annual premiums from the poor. You asked why some of those millions should not be used in tearing down old tenements and erecting decent homes in their place.

"We read that editorial in our directors' meeting. It started the thinking which has resulted in these homes for folks of modern means."

Words are mysterious and awe-inspiring. We shoot them into the air either by tongue or pen, and most of them perish. But now and then some stray sentence drops into a mind that remembers it, and is influenced by it for many years.

Many books, many sermons, and many speeches have run in and out of my brain leaving little trace. Yet here are three uite casual remarks that I remember:

1. Said the late Talcott Williams in a talk which I had with him immediately after my graduation from college:

"Never forget the old saying of the Jesuits, 'A great deal of good can be done in the world if one is not too careful who gets the credit.'

2. Said a prominent business man when I was blue and discouraged because the first concern for which I worked had gone busted:

"You are very fortunate to have had a severe disappointment while you are still young. The men to be pitied are those whose disappointments come in middle life, when it is too late for them to start over again. A disappointment in youth is merely part of the hardening process that is necessary to make you capable of carrying through."

3. Said my friend Robert Updegraff:

"Never grumble about your problems. They are responsible for the greater part of your income."

Of the three bits of wisdom this last has done me the most good. Whenever I think I am having a tough time I remember that jobs with no worries carry small pay. It's because I have larger troubles that I draw a larger income.

None of these three probably gave his remark a second thought. But I have never forgotten them, and I now pass them on n this editorial. Ninety-nine out of every hundred readers will pay no attention. But some day, fifteen years from now, somebody may say: "I read something of yours a long time ago, and it gave me a fresh idea."

That's the marvelous thing about working with words.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

GENUINE HEART DISEASE

If ever a fellow needs skilled medical advice, t is when the heart becomes really diseased. My object in this talk is to try to make the layman undrstand his heart better, so he may seek competent counsel at once, if he suspects trouble with this vital organ.

Remember, it is not the blood in the big caverns of the heart that sustains the heart-muscle itself. The heart-muscle has its separate arteries and veins, just the same as your leg has. The coronary arteries of the heart-muscl supply it with blood, and these are, probably, the most responsible vessels within the human being.

If a coronary artery becomes plugged up, the heart-wall beyond the obstruction begins to weaken, because it is deprived of food. It may be "plugged" by bacterial processes—the infected heart. This may occur in a rheumatic subject, or in cases of influenza, or a chronic infected throat—hence the rush to remove tonsils, teeth, etc.

Probably obstruction in the coronayr arteries is next to valvular disease in freuency; but diseased valves make loud heart murmurs—easily diagnosed. I have had many patients who knew they had a "leaky heart." But there is not much, if any, noise about a plugged artery in the heart, and there is much more danger—much more.

The principal symptom, WEAKNESS AND SHORTNESS OF BREATH. One fails markedly in coronary disease, and, it takes a physician to diagnose and treat it. Don't depend on home treatment until it becomes forever too late; and don't depend on physical exercises or manipulaton treatments. I'm advising you right.

PAUL IN PURGATORY
Acts 16:24-34; Philippians 4:4ff
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Trouble seemed as natural for Paul as did preaching the gospel. A syndicate owned a slave girl who seemed to have the power of divination. The evil spirits in this maid showed their knowledge by declaring that "These men are servants of the most high God." But they kept calling out to the annoyance of Paul and the hindrance of his work. One result was that the men who merchandised on humanity found that their chattel was worthless for soothsaying and started an uproar against these men who had part in freeing a life from slavery to an evil spirit. Racial and religious prejudice was stirred up to get back at Paul and Silas with the result that these good men were imprisoned.

But no dungeon could cut off their approach to the Throne. Tho bleeding from the unjust beating and with feet fastened cruelly in the stocks, the spirits of these men reached unto God. They began with prayer because of the way in which God had permitted them to glorify Him in life and testimony. Soon they involuntarily broke forth into song and heir fellow prisoners heard them. This was amazing enough but a still greater event followed in the earthquake which so shook the prison that all became free men.

When hte keeper of the prison sensed the situation he was about to kill himself, thinking that all the prisoners had run away. Paul advises him that all can answer the roll call. The presence of God was recognized and the outcry made "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" The answer is the truth for today: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." The Saviour was accepted forthwith and testimony was given in the rite of baptism. The new life was further expressed in the activity of penitence as the jailer tenderly washed the stripes of Paul and Silas and furnished them creature comforts.

Hints for the Home by Nancy Hart

Beef With Onions

One and one-half pounds of beef, a cheap piece, one quart onions, three cups boiled rice, two tablespoons drippings, two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon white pepper, dash paprika, two tablespoons chopped parsley or one table spoon chopped celery tops.

Wipe the meat with damp cloth, put on to boil with three cups boiling water, add one teaspoon salt, boil two and one-half hours, or until tender. Cover platter with boiled rice, lay on the meat, which has been cut into thin slices in the centre, and the steamed onions are placed around the edge. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Sardines

Sardines and cheese are easily prepared in this way: Drain the sardines and roll each of them in finely grated Parmesan cheese. Place each on a thin piece of buttered toast, cut a little larger than the sardine. Warm in the oven and serve.

Ginger Sherbet

Three-quarters cup preserved ginger, two egg whites, one-quarter cup sugar, four cups water, three tablespoons lemon juce.

Boil the water and sugar for about ten minutes until a syrup is formed. When cool, add the ginger and lemon juice and freeze partly. Add the beaten egg whites and complete the freezing.

Al. Smith Will Announce His Final Decision, Says Holmes

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co Recorder

When he gets good and ready and considers the moment opportune, Alfred Emanuel Smith of New York will announce his final decision not to become a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and his support of Franklin D. Roosevelt. In all probability the former four-term Governor will make the nominating speech on the floor of the forthcoming Democratic convention.

This prediction is based upon rumors, pure and simple; rumors without confirmation and untraceable to any authoritative source, but rumors which permeate certain Democratic circles in New York City and certain political circles in Washington—rumors which not only will not down but are gaining in credence.

Another thing: It is whispered here that except for the pressure which would be brought upon him by Republican leaders, except for his party loyalty and his obligations to his party, Herbert Hoover would decline to become a candidate to succeed himself.

Mr. Hoover has everything to lose and nothing campaign for the presidency. He is a rich man and can well afford to retire on his laurels. He was swept swept into office by the largest electoral vote ever accorded a candidate. Since his inauguration he has fought an obstreperous Congress continuously. If reelected, this fight promises not only to be continued but to be more intensive and nerve-racking. If defeated, the prestige and glory of his inspiring selection in 1928 can but be dimmed. And there is a pretty well-defined impression among unprejudiced and thoughtful observers that only the occurrence of miracles in business and industry during the next year or utter damfoolishness on part of the Democratic politicians can assure his reelection.

It did not require an article in the Saturday Evening Post by ex-President Coolidge to convince the public that Mr. Coolidge would not "choose to run" against Mr. Hoover next year nor that the latter would be nominated with practical unanimity if he wanted the nomination. But the cold, hard facts are—as every unbiased observer knows—that Mr. Hoover would face the fight of his life on or before the first Tuesday following the first Monday in November. And it is no reflection upon the executive ability, the personality or the popularity of ex-Governor Smith to recount that in the more conservative Democratic circles grave doubts are expressed as to the outcome of a restaging of the Smith vs. Hoover combat. A previous winner is invariably an odds-on favorite. Nothing succeeds like success.

In spite of the unprecedented popular vote for the Happy Warrior in 1928, and in spite of continuing depression and unrest, doubt was expressed in many quarters that Smith could beat Hoover next year. The South might not repeat itself at the polls, but it would accept Smith as a candidate with reluctance — not to say dangerous apathy. Furthermore, Smith's wetness is just a little bit too pronounced for the dry Westerners as well as for the ultra-dry Southerners. And it is questioned if anything could forestall or prevent the re-injection of religion into the campaign.

And then again, looking at the same old cold, hard facts, entirely apart from partisanship, it is evident that the Democratic party has a plurality of available candidates. With the seemingly final elimination of Mr. Coolidge—self-elimination, if you like—the Republican party has but one. True, the party has strong men and big men and worthy men. There are Borah, Morrow, Johnson, Bingham, McMses—all men of statesmanship calibre whether or not you concur with some of their pet theories. But none of them can be looked upon as available or promising presidential timber.

On the other hand, the Democrats, in addition to the outstanding Roosevelt, can point to Smith, to Ritchie, to Baker, to Young, to Bull, to Robinson, to Red of Missouri, and possibly to others as available and by no means hopeless candidates. If Smith and Roosevelt deadlock, as until recently was considered more than a possibility, the Democratic party could send to the mat any one of those mentioned and feel that in the circumstances it had a little better than a chance in the match.

Unquestionably, no one has studied the situation more closely and carefully than Alfred Smith and his personal friend and adviser, John Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Smith is now a successful business man in private life. Will he swap the certainties of his present avocation for the uncertainties of a quest for political emoluments? It is thought not. But he is and will remain for some time a power in his party, and when he concludes to exercise that power—unless the unexpected happens—you may rest assured that so far as the nomination of Roosevelt is concerned it's all over but the shouting.

"I think it was Jerkyll who used to say that the further he went west, the more convinced he felt that the wise men came from the east."

MONEY COOKIES SWEETEN THE SCHOOL LUNCH BOX

One of these days the editors of the busy little bee are going to be appointed for what they are really worth, and when that day comes we'll all of us be selling more honey than we do at present. Honey is a natural sugar, pure, wholesome, and nourishing. It can safely be given to even young children and is an ideal way of sweetening much of their food.

For the children's lunch box or for ordinary table service, try making them honey cookies. They satisfy their natural craving for a bit of something sweet after the rest of the meal, and add a considerable amount of nourishment. The recipe calls also for brown sugar, which gives a richer flavor; butter, a good source of the vitamine A, chopped nuts and raisins, supplying energy and nourishment, and the honey. Another important factor from the health standpoint is the self-rising flour. Self-rising flour is flour with the baking powder and salt added. This baking powder is made of monocalcium-phosphate and soda. Bones and teeth are largely composed of calcium (or lime) and phosphorus, so you can see how important it is for the growing child to have a sufficient amount of those minerals. Both of these minerals are supplied in a good form in self-rising flour.

Self-rising flour is economical because it requires no additional baking powder. It is also a great time saver. There's the time saving in measuring and sifting (you sift self-rising flour only once), and time saving in stirring. Cookies made with self-rising soft wheat flour should be put together gently, quickly, and with a light touch. Too much stirring and beating will make any soft wheat product heavy. From start to finish you can make these self-rising cookies in eight minutes, which would ordinarily require fifteen to put together. Every mother who has ever snatched time out of the air in order to make a batch of cookies knows that this is a saving worth while.

The recipe is as follows:

Honey Cookies.

½ cup brown sugar
½ cup strained honey
1 egg
7 tbsps. butter
2¾ cups self-rising flour
½ cup seeded raisins cut fine
½ cup finely chopped nuts
1 teaspoonful mace or nutmeg

Mix the sugar, egg and shortening together. Beat until thoroughly blended. Add other ingredients in order given, roll and cut. Bake in moderate (350 degrees F.) oven for about 20 minutes. You will find these will cut much better if you allow them to chill thoroughly or stand over night before cutting.

If you have to buy shelled nuts for the cookies, get the broken pieces. They are just as fresh and good, and the saving is considerable.

SOUR CREAM WAFFLES

1 cup sour cream
2 eggs
1 cup self-rising flour
4 tbsp. melted shortening
2 to 4 tbsp. water or milk

Beat the egg yolks, add sour cream, then sifted flour; combine well, add shortening, and lastly, beaten egg whites. If the dough is not thin enough to pour add cold water or milk as needed to give the desired consistency. This amount makes three large waffles. The amount of fat called for is necessary when the iron is not greased. With a greased iron the amount should be cut in half.

SOUR CREAM NUT BREAD

4 cups flour
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups thin, sour cream
¾ cup of milk or enough to make moist dough
½ cup of chopped nuts

Sift the flour. Beat the eggs, combine with milk and add to flour to form a moist and fairly stiff dough. Add nuts and more milk if needed. Turn into two well-greased loaf pans, set the pans in a cold oven, heat gradually to a temperature of 300 to 325 degrees, and bake about 50 minutes or until the bread is light-brown and firm to the touch. The bread should be allowed to cool partially, then wrapped in a towel or several thicknesses of paraffin paper and kept in a bread-box 24 hours before cutting. The crust will be soft and need not be removed when making sandwiches.

Freed From Pains After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine until it seemed nature refused any assistance.

"At times went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Old residents of Lawrence county report the best corn crop in 50 years. Soy beans and other hay crops and cane also are good.

(Southern Agriculturist)

It is reported that one farmer made twelve hundred dollars in one year selling fishing worms on the highway that passed his farm. This is an illustration of the new order. Old things have pased away. Many old opportunities are gone. But more new opportunities have come to the farmer to take their place, hence a radical readjustment is demanded. It is well for the farmer to realize that it is stupid to put new wine in the old skin bottles. This many farmers persist in doing, and they can't understand why things go wrong.

Birds of a feather will flock together. Scrub cows, scrub hogs, scrub horses, scrub chickens and scrub farmers are all in congenial company.

CHEAP SEED FOR WINTER COVER CROPS

(Southern Agriculturist)

Probably never in modern times has the seed used for winter cover crops been so cheap as now. All of the small grains, oats, rye, barley and wheat are exceptionally cheap. crimson clover is correspondingly cheap and other winter legumes are moderate in price generally. This should be an added incentive to sow a crop that will protect the soil during the winter period and at the same time add to the fertility of the land or furnish a pasture hay or grain crop. More acres of corn, cotton, tobacco and peanut land should be sown down this fall than ever before. It is a good way to prepare to lower cost on keeping the livestock that the farm already has or for addtional livestock. It is a good method of getting away from all-cotton.

The oats or other small grain that is seeded on crop land can be allowed to mature for grain to be threshed (if oats) fed in the sheaf. In the spring lespedeza can be sown in the small grain and left through the summer for soil improvement purpose. In this case a grain and forage crop is produced n the small grain and a soil improving crop in the lespedeza. The feed bill is reduced as is the fertilizer account. At the same time the cotton acreage is cut. Now is the best time to start diversification. Where the cash crop was well fertilized the small grain or other cover crop probably will not need extra fertilization. Where the soil is too thin to grow the winter crop successfully some phosphate and potash fertilizer can be used at seeding time along with a small amount of a nitrogen fertilizer, and another application of an available nitrogen fertilizer can be made when growth starts in February or early March.

TRADE AT HOME

In these times of depression, it is well that in so far as may be possible those who have purchases to make should give their local merchants the first consideration. Money spent at home circulates about the community, and stands a far better chance of returning to the original spender than if taken to the distant large city and spent there.

Then, too, the spending of money in home stores, by giving a greater volume of business to the home merchant, will enable him to carry larger stocks of goods and so better able to supply the needs of the customers.

Then again the larger business of the home merchant means greater bank deposits and greater bank deposits will afford larger funds available for safe and sound business expanson.

And so through an endless circle of local nterest, we can help ohrselves in the long run by spending our money where we earn it—at home.

HOW LONG, O, LORD! HOW LONG

He pays no taxes in Kentucky, but he returns to the state upon the occasion of each political campaign to tell the voters of Kentucky what they should do. His cousin, Mrs. South, is able to see to it that her husband is politically well-berthed. She, too, spends little time in Kentucky, except when she joins Mr. Morrow in advising the people of Kentucky that the Republican party is the sole guardian of prosperity; that the election of Flem D. Sampson would mean the coming of a better day for Kentucky; and now, that Kentuckians must save themselves from the "blight" of a Highway Commission that is actually building roads and saving the taxpayers money.

How long, one wonders, will Kentuckians give ear to this perennial show staged by Mrs. South and Ed. Morrow, neither of whom live in the state, or seem to have any desire to remain in Kentucky except during political campaigns.

FIGHTING HOG CHOLERA

Outbreaks of hog cholera in the state have alarmed farmers who rais e porkers and will result in the treatment of the herds to prevent losses. Hog cholera may be controlled if the vaccination is done in time. It may be prevented entirely by keeping the herds im- Those who have hogs are advised by specialists to have the treatment done early enough to check the disease. In localities where it is prevalent it should be done immediately in other localities the farmers should be on the lookout at all times and if it gets in the neighborhood a competent veterinarian should be called to do the work.

Kentucky raises about a million hogs a year and outbreaks of cholera may take away thousands of hogs, many of which have been brought nearly to the marketing age. It is cheaper to fight the disease than to take chances on its striking some other farm.

REMEMBER JOSEPH AND THE SURPLUS

(Southern Agriculturist)

Ever since Joseph prophesied the seven lean years and the seven fat years, economic conditions have been moving in cycles. We still have our good times and our bad times. The chief point of Joseph's prophesy, however, was admonishing the people to create a surplus during the good years and keeping it for themselves during the bad years, and Paraoh ordered the people to do as Joseph advised. Joseph was talking common horse sense to the Egyptians in the olden days, and and his advice should be heeded by Southern farmers these days. As far as production is concerned, we are having a good year. Perhaps the largest feed crop in our history will be made. Cotton looks more promising than in many years. More grain has been produced than in any year. Pasture looks better than it has for a long time. Production conditions are much better than in the past three years.

We have no Pharaoh to order us to do things now, but let us heed the advice of Joseph. Let's not empty our granaries and sell everything at low prices. Let's put aside some. Let's have some in reserve when lean years come again. Let's solve this surplus problem by keeping some of it for ourselves. A surplus will be worth more to you than letting the other fellow have it to use in beating down the price he pays you. It will be worth many prices to you in lean years when they come again—as they always do, everywhere.

AND HERE COMES "HOWDY ED"

(Joe T. Lovett, in the Murray Ledger and Times)

The political circus perennially staged by the Republican party in every state and national campaign will soon assume its normal color with the appearance on the hippodrome of the G. O. P.'s master clown, none other than "Howdy Ed" Morrow, chiefly known to fame as the hero of the Seelbach Hotel pajama fire.

Mayor Harrison, the dapper young man from Louisville, has folded his arms on his "holler than thou" pedestal and announced that he will "indulge in no mud-slinging." Well, why should he prance when the Republican party has Ed. Morrow, than whom no greater or funnier prancer ever pranced?

Ed. Morrow s a great entertaine-, he can talk more, tell funnier stories, get longer and heartier laughs —and say less than anybody who ever lived.

Just four years ago, Mr. Morrow galloped up and down the state with his wonderful and interesting allegory of the "Four Horsemen," preaching to Kentuckians the land of milk and honey that awaited them when they elected Flem Sampson their governor. They did and what did they get? The milk soured and the honey turned to vinegar.

God help the Republican party in Kentucky when Ed. Morrow passes on—as mortals must. Who will tell the fables, who will fabricate the catch phrases, who will coin the catchy nothings into Ed. 94 of the flaming pajamas? Why, we'll have to depend on such drab funnymen as Will Rogers and Eddie Cantor.

Mr. Morrhow will not stoop to the old-time style of campaign oratory he says. Why should he? Why should he? Why should the ragweed ape the orchid or the little candle pit its feeble flicker against the shining glory of the equatorial sun?

And just a year after he had helped bring the plague of Flem Sampson down on our hapless heads, "Howdy Ed" again emerged from the luxury of his Washington apartment and came back to Kentucky to plead, with tears in his eyes and tremors in his voice, for the election of Herbert Hoover and the continuation of prosperity. The prosperity of four-cent tobacco?

Mr. Morrow is fond of telling how he yearns for old Kentucky up in Washington. But we notice that he never comes back to his native heath except to get some Republican elected to something.

But this time he has a dual mission. He sees two birds that can possibly be brought down with one blast of his bludgeon. He gets his expenses paid and he gets himself advertised afresh for his intended race for United States Senator.

Beware of the Pied Piper of Somerset. His words are sweet as honey but the people of Kentucky will not be drawn nto the Republican spider web through the unctuous words of "Howdy Ed."

Why, how can he free the people when he couldn't even free the dogs?

JUDGE RUBY LAFOON ADDRESSES LARGE AUDIENCE

(Richmond Register)

The large audience which heard a discussion of the issues in the state campaign by Judge Ruby Laffoon here Friday afternoon was impressed with the sincerity and earnestness of the man. He impressed them as a man of independence of mind and thought who, after careful analysis of conditions which have been aggravated by the ineffective Sampson administration has appraised the needs of the state, outlined a comprehensive program through which improved government may be realized.

The possibility of better government, more prudent expenditure of public money, increased efficiency in administration, reduction of the state debt, are far more probable if the Democratic ticket be elected. The state legislature is certain to be Democratic. The number of holdover Democratic senators, together with those unopposed and running in districts largely Democratic assures a Democratic senate.

A Democratic majority in the house of representatives may be produced with certainty. With the legislative branch of state government Democratic, it is obvious that a Democratic governor with initiative and vision will be able to accomplish far more toward fulfillment of his program than would a governor of the opposite party.

Judge Laffoon is impressing the citizenship of Kentucky with his capacity for leadership, his earnestness of purpose, his understanding of the needs of the state. We anticipate that there will be registered at the polls general approval of the program he has outlined, that to him will be delegated the responsibility of executive leadership. Supported by the capable Kentuckians who compose the remainder of the ticket, with a sympathetic legislature confident of his judgment, willing to follow his leadership, Judge Laffoon will as governor be enabled to make a notable contribution to better government in Kentucky.

Giant Apple Pie

Large enough to supply 8,000 portions, the world's greatest apple pie, recently made at Birmingham, England, was 12 feet long, 10 feet wide, 2 feet deep and contained 450 pounds of apples, 150 pounds of flour, 50 pounds of lard and 28 pounds of sugar.

Name Given Coffee

Mandheling and Ankola, grown in the Dutch East Indies, on the island of Sumatra, were formerly known as Old Government Javas, because the coffee was picked from the different plantations, cured and, at regular periods, collected by the government and shipped to Amsterdam, where it was sold at auction.

Merely Superstition

It is an old superstition that the sun always shines on Wednesday, but there is no truth in it. There are relatively as many cloudy or rainy Wednesdays in the average year as any of the other days of the week, and over a long period of years, there would be no difference in the relative amount of sunshine on Wednesday and other days.

Opportunity in Fixing for Week-End Fathers

Absence needs more week-end fathers who when the week's work is over, become companions with their children and in this way strengthen the bond of sympathy between parent and children, writes Henry R. Lent, in the Parents' Magazine. "I am a week-end father," says he. "From Monday to Friday I drive feverishly three miles to catch the 8:10 train and feel grateful if I am lucky enough to get the 5:35 or the 6:10 train back again in the evening. And that leaves me just week-ends to do the most important job I have—being a father to my boy."

"Without carrying it to the point of absurdity I try to be a real pal to my boy," continues Mr. Lent, in the Parents' Magazine. "I never force his relationship, yet as far as I think it wise, I gear my own interests to his level. One of the keenest joys of being a father is the privilege of sharing with your youngster the contagious amusement that accompanies his first insight into interesting, perhaps commonplace, activities of your world. Some of the things for which I go considerably out of my way to do with my son on week-ends would be unbearably tiresome to many people. For me it is fun."

Heads Red and White in Matrimonial Mixup

It seems that a Mrs. Paul Whitehead, after twelve years of wedded bliss, decided, in the course of events, that her wedded life was not so blissful, and sued for divorce. The decree was granted, and she was given custody of her eleven-year-old son, Paul, Jr.

After the passing of a few years Mrs. Whitehead remarried. And with all the men in the wide, wide world to choose from, whom should it be but a Mr. William Redhed. (At that, Mrs. Whitehead-Redhed may have been giving in to a delicately Quixotic sense of humor.) No more than her former husband was white-haired, was her present one red-haired, but his name was William Redhed, nevertheless. As far as little Paul's name was concerned he was still called Paul Whitehead.

Some time later, Bill, Jr., was born, which, to give him his full due, made him William Redhed, Jr. In the entire galaxy of exactly four persons, their names were Mr. and Mrs. Redhed (Mrs. being formerly 'Whitehead'), Paul Whitehead, Jr., and Bill Redhed, Jr., brand-new.

To those with a pedagogical turn of mind, can be easily imagined the ancient school-marm calling the roll. At Bill Redhed's name she will stop and say, "Bill Redhed, now isn't that funny? Years ago I had a pupil whose name was John Whitehead. Odd if there were some kind of relationship!"—New York Sun.

Some Trees Young at 50

Leaves of some trees turn red in autumn, as those of many maples and sumachs; the leaves of other trees, as the ash and tulip tree, turn yellow. Some trees have leaves so large that you could wrap one about you like a robe, says "Forest Facts for Schools." Others have leaves hardly larger than your little finger nail. Some trees have wood so soft you can tear it apart in your hands and so light that it floats like cork; others have wood so hard no nail can pierce it and so heavy it sinks in water like a stone. In age, too, trees differ tremendously. Some, like the aspens, are old trees when they have reached forty or fifty years, while others at that age are youngsters just getting a start.

Child's Play Gives Rhythm

Play is of as much or more value in teaching a child co-ordination than work, according to the children's bureau of the Department of Labor.

One of the most important results of play, the bureau points out, is the training of the child's senses and muscles. For instance, when a little girl is jumping rope to the sound of her own singing, or that of her playmates, she is learning to co-ordinate eyes, ears, and muscles. The perfect rhythm involved is itself the result of earlier muscle and sense training and the child who has played with vigor and freedom attains it without conscious effort.

Two Men Carlyle Honored

Two men I honor, and no third. First, the toil-worn craftsman that with earth-made implement laboriously conquers the earth and makes her man's. Venerable to me is the hard hand, crooked, coarse. . . .

A second man I honor, and still more highly: Him who is seen toiling for the spiritually indispensable; not daily bread, but the bread of life. These two in all degrees I honor; all else is chaff and dust, which let the wind blow whither it listeth.—Thomas Carlyle in "Sartor Resartus."

Legend of Arcas

According to a Greek legend concerning Arcturus; Arcas, son of the king of Arcadia, while hunting, pursued his mother, who had been transformed into a bear by Zeus. The bear mother took refuge in the temple of Zeus and the god, in order to prevent matricide, transported both the mother and son into the heavens.

To locate Arcturus, follow the handle of the big dipper in a curved line a distance that of the dipper itself. Arcturus is the brightest star in the constellation

Many Puzzled Theories Concerning the Pearl

The history of the pearl industry is a colorful and romantic story. The ancients obtained their pearls chiefly from India and the Persian gulf, but for a long time nothing was known scientifically of the pearl's formation. Early peoples thought it had formed from a dewdrop or rain, but inquisitive scientists of the fifteenth century set themselves to discover how the rain or dewdrop got into the shell in the first place. There followed a period when it was believed pearls were formed from the eggs of the oyster. Then it was noticed that pearls were made of the same substance as the inner lining of the shell. With keener observation the truth was finally discovered. It became known that a foreign body, attacking the inner shell, caused the oyster to deposit matter at the point of invasion, and this hardened substance made up the "pearl" known to the jewel industry.

Imperfectly formed pearls, attached to the inner shell, are known as "blister" pearls. Hollow, warty pearls are known to the trade as "coq de perle," while irregularly shaped pearls are "perles baroques." Pearls of the first water are of delicate texture, free from speck or flaw, and a clear, almost translucent white in color, with a subdued sheen. They are perfectly round or pear-shaped.—Exchange.

Great Ox Among Others of Vanished Animals

Caesar wrote of an animal which he called "urus." In size, he said, it was "a little less than elephants; in appearance and color and form they are bulls. Great is their strength and great their swiftness; they spare neither man nor beast whom they have perceived. These (the Germans) take pains to catch in pits and kill." Caesar, the scientists assume, probably was writing of the great ox whose skull and other bones are found in so many drained marshes, clay pits and caves across the length and breadth of Europe. And if the animal still lived in Caesar's day, how much longer did it continue? Various "proofs" of its persistence have been forthcoming; none is wholly satisfactory. Perhaps the most likely is the report of Baron Herbenstein, who, returning from Muscovy in 1550, wrote of a race of animals obviously greater than the bison which then lived in the Polish forests; but some scientists suspect that he merely saw a race of cattle gone wild.

Dives With Her Babies

The grebe is a tiny bird endowed with a wonderful amount of cunning. She hides her nest in a manner that makes it impossible for any human to discover, but it is when the five tiny young appear that the parents bring out their cunning. You will seldom see them, although the babies are able to swim and dive short distances a few hours after they leave their shells. If there is the slightest sign of danger, the mother gives the alarm cry, and instantly the diminutive birds scuttle acros the water to her. She lifts both wings, and all five scramble underneath. Then she brings her wings to her side, with her family safely hidden underneath, dives with them, and carries them under water to a place of safety.

Catch Fish by Whistling

Natives of some sections of India have several unusual methods of catching fish, including luring them by whistling, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In Assam, fishermen crouch on the banks of shallow lakes and emit a shrill whistle which attracts a species of mountain fish. Lured by the sound, this fish darts into the open palms of the whistler and is caught. In other places the direct rays of the sun force mountain fish to seek shelter beneath or beside rocks along the banks of streams. The cunning hillman crawls to a boulder behind which a fish is hiding, strikes the rock a heavy blow with his steel-shod club, and catches the fish, stunned by the sound vibrations.

"Hobo" and "Yegg"

The word "hobo," meaning a shiftless worker or itinerant laborer, a tramp (as distinguished from "yegg") originated in the United States. "The tramp's name for himself and his fellows is hobo, plural hoboes," says J. Flynt in the Contemporary Review for August, 1891. "Yegg" or "yeggman" is a tramp who makes a business of robbing rather than of begging; a traveling burglar and safe-blower. "When a particularly clever thief," says the Philadelphia Press of May 27, 1900, "is found among a gipsy tribe he is selected as the yegg or chief thief. Then came the name of John Yegg and finally the word yeggman."

Investment Planning

An investment trust is an organization which, with its capital, buys a variety of stocks and bonds. The dividends received on these are pooled and constitute the earning of the trust. If a corporation, dividends are paid on the stock in accordance with the amounts earned on the securities held. The purpose is to spread investments over a wide field so that if one investment goes bad it will be balanced by another which will pay. The owner of stock in the investment trust thus gets the benefit of the wide spread over a great many risks.—Washington Star.

Shells Were Puzzle to Early Race of Indians

Before the arrival of the white man in the West Indies, the inhabitants of the islands enjoyed almost continuity of two branches of the Amerind Indian race, the Arawaks and the Caribs. These had come their way from the South American mainland, through the whole chain of the Antilles as far as the Bahamas. The Caribs had come later and had ousted the Arawaks from all of the Lesser Antilles and from some of the larger islands. The Caribs were warlike and aggressive, while the Arawaks were more peaceful agriculturists, with well-developed arts. The people of the Bahamas called themselves Tocayos and the chief tribe of Cuba was the Ciboneys, these also being branches of the American Indian race.

Old records declare that Haiti had over a million inhabitants. The forced labor demanded by the Spanish conquerors, together with the actual massacres and war losses, practically wiped out the native population of Haiti, Cuba and other islands in less than a century. The importation of negro slaves began as early as 1505, at first for the mines and later for the plantations, and Haiti became predominantly negro. Part of the island had become a French colony during the Seventeenth century, and the outbreak of the French revolution led to the proclamation of universal freedom in 1793. A few years later the Haitians, former negro slaves, declared their independence of France and successfully maintained it against the French forces.

Nothing Modern About Workings of Vitamins

"Knowledge of the vitamins is not modern," Dr. Ruth F. Wadsworth writes in Collier's. "It is as old as prisons and sailing vessels; older than Columbus, and probably contemporary with Noah. It is only the name which is new.

"We owe the rather boring systematization of the vitamins—their classification and naming as Vitamin A, B, C, D, E, and soon F and G—to the experimental method which has crept upon medicine in the last 40 years.

"How the Elizabethans arrived at the knowledge that lemons would prevent scurvy I don't know. I think it is probable that they stumbled onto that fact because lemons were easy to carry and to keep and could be given in the form of juice to the sailors, without a lot of fuss. Our present-day knowledge tells us that scurvy is caused by a lack of vitamin C, which is found in oranges and lemons and tomatoes and apples and bananas."

Languages of the World

Whitaker's almanac estimates that among European languages, English is the mother tongue of the largest number, 180,000,000; Russian second with 140,000,000; then German, 80,000,000; French, 70,000,000; Spanish and Italian, each 50,000,000; Portuguese, 25,000,000. Among all the languages of the world, Chinese is spoken by the largest number, about 400,000,000 if the various dialects are included. Doctor Vizetelly's figures, as given in the World almanac, are rather different. He gives English as spoken by 160,000,000 and understood and used by 60,000,000 more who do not consider it their native speech; German spoken by 90,000,000 and understood by 20,000,000 more; Russian, 90,000,000; French spoken by 45,000,000 but understood and spoken by at least 75,000,000 more; Spanish, 55,000,000; Italian, 45,000,000; Portuguese, 30,000,000.

Coal Age "Reproduced"

A restoration of the Coal age with its luxuriant carboniferous forests and strange primeval animal life of over 250,000,000 years ago is on exhibition at the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago.

The exhibit represents a landscape of the so-called Pennsylvania period when the land flora of the paleozoic era was reaching its culmination in vast swamps that covered much of the territory then raised above the sea in the northern hemisphere.

In Europe and in northern Asia, as well as in North America, these forests gave rise in the course of time to the enormous accumulations of plant materials that now constitute the world's principal coal beds.

Denominational Ravens

Are ravens religious? Apparently the army thinks that they are. There are four ravens at the tower of London which are regarded as "on the strength" of the Guards battalion on duty there. And as Tommy Atkins' religion is recorded, so is that of the ravens. One is reckoned as Church of England, one as Roman Catholic, the third as Free Church, and the fourth as "General." Whether they turn out for church parade—and never make a mistake and parade with the wrong denomination—is not quite certain.—Montreal Herald.

Logical Youngster

My little son, Arthur, ages five, found a wishbone on his plate, and asked me to wish with him.

Arthur won and said that he had wished for a motorcycle.

"You must not tell me your wish," I said.

"Well, if you don't know what I wished for, how will I ever get it?" was the reply.—Chicago Tribune.

Are Measure by WCM

Efforts are conquering in a state of ... Ohio is the work of A. Ehrer Ferguson, chemistry of the College of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio, who has made a life study of insects.

"Insects are annihilating such a stronghold that one day man will wake up to find that he has met his master," Mr. Hogarth said. "The trouble is that men in their ignorance have no well organized steps to fight the insect menace, and they don't realize that insects have brains. Before the war mosquitoes were unknown in England. Today every fourth or fifth person has been bitten by one.

"I am not a scaremonger. That eminent scientist, Sir Oliver Lodge, for example, has said that the end of the world will not be caused by such a calamity as an earthquake or flood, but by the ascendancy of the insect world over man.

"Some simple-minded local authorities imagine that they are destroying mosquitoes when they solemnly spray ponds with paraffin. In their ignorance they leave alone large tracts of ground where mosquitos breed in shoals. As for cockroaches there are cases where you could not get them out of a building without pulling it down.

"Why are insects defeating man? Because all of their brains are devoted to the main things of life, to satisfying hunger and the welfare of the species, while man's brain is dissipated in various other interests."

Million "Plunks" Makes One's Serenity Secure

A million dollars spread over seventy years of a man's life accomplishes one great good at least. It spares him from an immense amount of anxiety. It is ammunition in his arsenal against care. Serenity, some philosophers think, is the greatest good. They have secured it, but at the sacrifice of everything else. They have usually been lonely and impecunious hermits.

One cannot imagine much serenity or even personal comfort without money. Now, take a million dollars, and if you don't court trouble by trying to increase it, it drives away most mental distress and brightens every hour of the day. We do not adore wealth, but we understand its importance. It is worth while not to be bothered by the vicissitudes of life, and most of them can be eluded with a million dollars.

There are more "Hallelujahs" and fewer "Oh, hades!" with it. One may be freer and less circumlocutory in the expression of opinion; and certainly there isn't any excuse for a repentant attitude toward the mighty. With a million, you are somewhat mighty yourself.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Mourner's Bench"

In the United States (only), at revival meetings in churches, tents, and elsewhere, a bench, or row of camp-chairs, is placed directly beneath the platform or pulpit and reserved for those who wish to come forward, at the close of the preacher's exhortations, to declare their sins and seek forgiveness of the Lord. The bench, or row of chairs, as the case may be, is called the mourners' bench. The mourners' bench was very much in evidence a few years ago at the revival gatherings addressed by the late Dwight L. Moody, American evangelist, who said: "The devil howls in rage when he sees repentant sinners crowding the mourners' bench."—Literary Digest.

Captain Kidd "Framed"?

Recent biographers of Captain Kidd state that he was not a pirate and that the ships he took were lawful prizes captured in his legal capacity as a privateer. The charge of seizing two ships of the great mogul could have been met at his trial by the production of two documents which Kidd had taken from these ships and which he claimed proved that they were sailing under commissions issued by the French East India company, which made them lawful prizes. These documents Kidd had handed to his patron Lord Bellomont and they were not discovered until some 200 years later in the public records office.

"Seven Ages" in Glass

The window depicting the "Seven Ages of Man" was placed in the Holy Trinity church in Shakespeare's birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon, by Americans. There are eight panels in the window, but as the two top center panels refer to only one age, the seven ages are thus represented. The Biblical characters representing the Seven Ages are as follows: The Infant, Moses; the Schoolboy, Samuel; the Lover, Jacob; the Soldier, Joshua; the Justice, Solomon; the Slippered Pantaloon, Abraham; Sans Eyes, Sans Teeth, Sans Everything, Isaac.

Subjection of Static

Technicians are examining many steps that make up the sound process with the object of overcoming that disturbing scratch and static which often accompany voice reproduction. Without laying claim to supernatural powers, the engineers are sure that such noises will soon cease to be troublesome factors. Nothing radical may be expected in sound films five years hence; but a small invention here, an innovation there, will so improve recording and reproduction that the ultimate goal of perfection will be approached.

Pupil Pumps Bored by Collapsing Rubby

If many people had real hobbies there would be fewer cases of nervous breakdowns, according to Dr. E. F. Kimball, writing in Hygeia, the Health Magazine. Hobbies keep children out of mischief and they relieve the monotony of routine life for adults. It is well to be able to lose oneself for an hour, or evening, or even for a day in something that is not related to the daily tasks, this author believes.

A desirable hobby should furnish enjoyment, pleasure and gratification; it should require a minimum of equipment and expense, in Doctor Kilander's opinion. Many hobbies may be distinctly educational. Literature, music and astronomy are examples of that type. Physical as well as mental health may be improved by a hobby; sports are of distinct value.

Many hobbies are started accidentally without forethought. It is well, however, suggests Doctor Kilander, that parents and educators should plan indirectly to guide children in certain desirable interests in order that their leisure time may be wisely spent.

Recreation has become a necessity, writes Doctor Kilander. The trends of the times indicate that the schools must include more training in the use of leisure time not only for the years that the student is in school but also for the time when he is an adult.

Old Hand-Woven Linen of Marvelous Fineness

Twelve dozen of everything—that was the quantity which the proper continental bride of a century ago received in her trousseau. It sounds lavish, but it was actually common sense, because our great-grandparents had a grand laundering only once every three months!

A relic of those brave days appears on special occasions now, in a smart New York home. The linen damask cloth was woven by hand in the days when George Washington was more than a memory, and hand woven so finely that linen experts of today marvel at it. Narrow looms compelled the weavers to make their cloth in two strips, which are sewn together down the middle of the table.

An interesting feature of this setting is that the ancient damask creates a background of harmony for the latest silver, whose design identically matches the china.

Coffee in 1634

As to the precise date when coffee was introduced into England, authorities differ, and very little of real value on the subject can be found, wrote Edward R. Emerson in "Beverages, Past and Present." Sir Henry Blount visited Turkey in 1634 and in one of his letters says: "The Turks have a drink called 'cauphe,' made of a berry as big as a small bean, dried in a furnace and beat to a powder of a sooty colour, in taste a little bitterish, that they seethe and drink, hot as may be indured. It is good at all hours of the day, but especially at morning and evening, when to that purpose they entertain themselves two or three hours in 'cauphe-houses,' which, in Turkey, abound more than inns and alehouses with us."

Corn's Many Products

Not much more than half of the great corn crop of the country finds its way to the dining table. The remainder goes to the refineries to be made up into a large variety of materials. These include the "sparklers" which do Fourth of July duty, explosives, face creams, soap, artificial rubber and silk, varnish, tanning extracts, radio batteries, batteries, paper carpet, mucilage, salad dressing, syrup, cooking oil, vinegar and milk acids. Some considerable success has attended the manufacture of paper from the stalks, and it is probable that at no distant day a profitable use will be found for the piles of corn stalks which accumulate each year on the farms of this country.

Famous Dinosaur Skeleton

The dinosaur on exhibition at Peabody museum of Yale university is nearly 70 feet long, 16 feet high, and the skeleton weighs six and a half tons. Its estimated weight when alive was between 37 and 40 tons. The specimen was discovered by William Reed in Wyoming in 1881, and the bones were brought to Yale under the direction of Prof. Othniel C. March, whose research resulted in this type's being known as Brontosaurus excelus. At Yale's bicentennial in 1901 a portion of the skeleton was mounted and exhibited. Lack of space prevented the erection of the rest, which remained in storage. A few years ago the mounting was begun anew, the hall of Peabody being especially constructed to house this one animal.

Cake for Indigestion

Claudius Galenus, commonly known as Galen, was born at Pergamum, Greece, in 130 A. D., and is supposed to have died in Sicily. He was a celebrated philosopher, pharmacist and physician, and was for many centuries the supreme authority in medicine and pharmacy, wrote Charles H. LaWall in "Four Thousand Years of Pharmacy."

A bride's cake used at weddings during Galen's time and described by Cato was called "mustaceo." It contained aromatics and carminative and was served at weddings to reduce the chances of indigestion caused by the usual over-indulgence on such occasions.

COUNTY SCHOOL NEWS

BRADDOCK HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The first of the three games series of base ball between the Burlington High School and Fraternity was won by Burlington Friday, October 2nd by a score of 3 to 1. The batteries for Petersburg were Bradshaw and Chesley, for Burlington Ogden and Greenup. The only main event of the game was a home run by Bradburn in the seventh inning. Both teams made several good plays during the game. Next Friday October 9th the Burlington Hi School team will play Coach Lamb's Warriors at the Florence Hi School grounds.

This will probably be the last base ball game that B. H. S. will play this season as Basket ball practice starts next week. As you all know Coach Lamb turns out some good teams, so be on hand next Friday and watch old B. H. S. win her ball game.

So far this year there has only been two ring agents here which have been in conference with our Seniors who have not yet decided upon any definite ring. The Seniors have elected their class officers as follows: Alvin Stephens president; Hal Riley Hensley vice-president; Zora Cason, secretary-treasury.

The High School pupils have not received all their books yet but hope to get them in a few more days.

Don't forget our first Chapel program given by the entire Hi School next Friday, October 9th. Everybody invited.

The officers for the High Y for coming year were elected last Friday as follows: William Greenup, president; James Ogden vice-president; Ralph Maurer, Sec.; Marvin Moore, Treas.; Hal Hensley, chairman of program committee; H. K. Cloe, Wm. Cook Advisors; Professor Kirkwood, Mr. McMillan, Rev. Pollitt and Mr. R. E. Berkshire.

The Sophomore officers for the coming year were elected last Friday and are as follows: President Wm. Cook; vice-president Wilma Cotton, Secty., Londa Lee Jarrell; Treas., Dudley Rouse.

The General History class have been making outlines on their history lessons which seems to be bothering some of them. So if you see a history student with a long face you will know why so sad.

FLORENCE SCHOOL NOTES

(Pat Ward School Reporter)

The faculty and student body of the Florence school wish to express their sincere regret of the accident of last week that resulted in the death of lovable litle Bobby Adams.

Miss Kathryn Ford suffered a severe attack of appendicitis last Friday. We are glad that she is now able to be back in school.

School is now is full swing and the faculty and students are surely cooperating in a most commendable manner.

Mr. Davis, our principal, is constantly receiving innumerable compliments on our marvelous new building.

Friday afternoon the nine of Burlington Hi and Florence Hi will meet at Florence for a base ball game. Game to be called at 4 p. m. (fast time). Everyone invited.

P. T. A. is serving lunch on the lower floor. Some mighty good eats are obtainable.

Everyone attend our P. T. A. meetings and help by constructive criticism, to boost our school.

The first news agency is believed to have been that organized by Charles Havas in Paris in 1835, when he began translating articles for the French press. In 1840 Havas established news service by carrier pigeons between Paris and London and Brussels.

Japanese Name for Ship

The Japanese word "maru" means ship. It is used in the names of Japanese merchant vessels to distinguish them from warships and other craft. It is not known just how the word came to acquire its present significance. Apparently it is derived from the Chinese character meaning something round or circular.

Washington Snap Shots

Taken by The Hahn News Service

By a vote that approximated two to one, the American Legion at Detroit went on record against taxing the American people another $3,000,000,000 for immediate cash payment of the war bonus. The World War soldiers have justified the confidence of their friends that, once cognisant of the plight into which a fresh compensation demand would plunge the national Treasury, the Legion would take the only course that patriotism dictates.

Backed by the American Legion in his stand against a $2,000,000,000 cash bonus, President Hoover moved to head off agitation from other sources for increased governmental expenditures in the economic emergency. He appealed to the nation in a public statement to stand with him against propaganda for big appropriations. He called also upon all voluntary organizations to withdraw their pressure upon the Administration and members of Congress for larger appropriations "until the country is in better condition." The Administration's policy for coping with depressing conditions was seen by observers between the lines of the President's pointed statement. It was generally considered to mean that the Administration would work toward minimum appropriations, tax revision and a trimming of the deficit and would resist all proposals for huge Federal bond issues to try to stimulate business recovery.

Investigation of the New York Stock Exchange by a congressional commttee, particularly with reference to "short selling" and its effect on the securities market, when Congress reassembles is looked for by responsible leaders of the Senate. Furthermore, there will be a drive in the coming Congress for legislation to put a curb on short selling, either of securities or of gran. Several meimbers of congress already have prepared bils for such a purpose and will introduce them. There has been no indication from the administration what its attitude would be toward legislation designed to prohibit or to curb largely short selling. It would be difficult, however, for the President of the Unted States to veto such a measure if it ever came to him. Nor has there been anything to show that the President would oppose efforts to curtail the short selling in the stock and grain exchanges.

It is said that the only Republican who has any real chance to be elected Speaker of the next House of Representatives is Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan. He is practically the only compromise candidate now seriously discussed. If the Republicans should be any chance pick up an additional member or two in the by-elections to fill vacancies, Mr. Mapes in all probabilities will be the next Speaker. But unless the Republicans are successful in these special elections, the chances are that they will not be able to hold together the 218 votes necessary to give their candidate for Speaker a majority of the House. In any case, Mr. Mapes seems sure to be able to get more votes than any other Republican now in sight.

President Hoover has again sounded a warning that this is no time to seek new and added appropriations from the Federal Treasury. Taking hte action of the American Legion in declining to urge further cash payments on the soldiers' bonus certificates as his text, the Chief Executive has told other organizations to follow in the foot steps of the World War Veterans. How strongly such a warning may be needed, the President said, is indicated by the fact that during hte last Congress 271 bills for different projects were introduced in that body, referred to executive departments, and by those departments were disapproved, calling for total new appropriations of about $6,000,000,000. Many of these measures were, the President said, sponsored by organizations of American citizens.

President Hoover is stated in Washington dispatches to be ready "to go to the country" in defense of his cuts in the naval program. This aggressive attitude, appars, is due to evidence that some members of the naval establishmentment, acting with big-navy advocates on the outside, have been trying to start a backfire against the President's plans and, presumably, to go over his head to Congress.

Governor Roosevelt, of New York came back to his "other home" the other night and was hailed by the leading Democrats of Georgia as a certain Presidential nominee on the first ballat and an equally certain victor for the Presidency in 1932. Arriving for a two weeks' vacation after his strenuous labors during the special session of the Legislature, the Governor found the Southland with arms wide open to receive him and offer many indications of steadily growing support. A short stop over at Atlanta was marked by a rousing reception with a blaring band and cheers for the New York Executive and al Warm Springs the community turned out in full force to welcome him.

The election of Robt. D. Johnson, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel C. Major, Democrat, in the 7th Missouri Congress District was expected. The district is normally Democratic. Since 1920, when a Republican went in with the Harding landslide, the Republicans have carried it only once—in 1928. It is the size of the Johnson plurality which must be considered in estimating the political trend. From this viewpoint his 9,000 margin over his Republican opponent, former Representative Palmer, and his carrying Republican counties is unmistakably impressive. It becomes even more so when one considers that there was an indpendent Democrat in the field. It is, however, not surprising. Every realist, we think, will concede that the trend has been away from the Administration, due primarily to the provertbial tendency in times of depression to blame the party in power. It would be a miracle if the tendency were otherwise. A devout prayer that the depression continue until November, 1932, is written on the heart of every Democratic politician.

Postmaster General Brown will urge in his report to Congress in December that the postage on first-class mail be raised from 2 cents to 2½ or 3 cents i nan effort to meet the department's deficit, now nearing $100,000,000 annually. "Basing the estimate on the present volume of first--class mail matter," Mr. Brown declared, "a half-cent raise will bring in an additional $65,000,000 yearly, and with a one-cent increase the deficit would be more than balanced by the extra $135,000,000. This would enable the Postoffice Department to accomplish some other things we have in mind in this manufacturing and selling of stamps and postal service." The Postmaster General feels that rates on second, third and fourth class mail cannot be raised again to bring in greater remuneration, and he holds that the solution lies in higher first-class rates.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of our loved one John C. McMurray, who passed away Friday October 3, 1930.

Why did he go when life seemed fair,
And no dark clouds were near,
To drive the brightness of our lives
Or start the bitter tears?
We thought not at the close of day,
When night veiled earth and sky,
That one so full of life and hope
Would breathe the last good-bye.

SCHOOL CHILDREN NEED GOOD LUNCH

It is of the utmost importance that the school child have an adequate diet, says the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Many of the ills of childhood, such as decayed teeth and stunted growth, as well as disorders in later life, are often due to a lack of proper nourishment in early life. The newer knowledge of nutrition should lead to a more careful study and plan for the school lunch.

In districts where the children have to walk considerable distances to school it is necessary that they have a warm, nourishing lunch. This can usually be accomplished if the mothers will cooperate with the teacher in preparing one hot dish, such as soup or cocoa, to supplement the cold lunch brought from home. If there are older girls in the school they might be given charge of the preparation of the hot lunch, which would relieve the teacher and also be excellent training for the girls.

The cold lunch brought from home should be wholesome and palatable. A tin box with a thermos is the most satisfactory type of container. Lunches wrapped in newspaper or carried in paper sacks are liable to get mashed and become soggy.

Sandwiches usually form the basis for the lunch. They need not always be meat and egg sandwiches. Vegetables, cottage cheese, nuts, dates and raisins can be used to give variety. Fresh fruits and vegetables should be included as often as possible.

...SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

GREAT NATIONAL DESSERT GIVEN NUTRITION O. K.

What's all that talk one used to hear about pie—good, old-fashioned apple pie, every man's favorite—being indigestible. Every so often some busybody launches the indigestible charge against our great national dessert, and you begin to look askance at the next piece that is offered you. The explanation is two-fold; some pie is not properly made, and actually is indigestible and soggy and, secondly, pie is too substantial a dessert to serve at the end of a very heavy meal. That is all there is to it.

A well-made, flaky pie served at the end of a moderate meal never did any normal person, even a child, any harm. Pie is rich in food value and has a definite place in any homemaker's list of menus. The ideal pie presents, when finished, a somewhat blistered surface, golden brown in color. The crust should break easily with a fork, but should not crumble, and the lower crust should be as tender as the upper one.

To make a pie like this, use a good grade of self-rising flour which, because it has baking powder already in it, gives the pastry just the amount of leavening required to make a tender, flaky crust. Furthermore, the phosphate and calcium in the leavening ingredients of self-rising flour are among the materials most needed in a balanced diet and therefore the use of self-rising flour improves the wholesomeness of the pie. Sift the flour only once. One of the advantages of using self-rising flour is that it does not require so many siftings. Another is that it takes little mixing. You will be astonished how quickly you can make this pastry.

First mix two cups of self-rising flour and ½ cup of cold shortening, which must not be too thoroughly blended. When the shortening is cut to about the size of peas and each piece is well coated with flour, it has been sufficiently mixed. The blending may he done with a knife, or more quickly with a regular pastry blender. Cold water is then added to the mixture, about six tablespoonfuls. Add one spoonful of water, run a silver fork along the bottom of the bowl, bringing the fork up gently through the mixture. Add another spoonful of water and repeat. No salt is used as self-rising flour has salt already added in correct proportions and properly mixed at the mill.

The pastry is now ready to be rolled until it is about 1-16 of an inch thick. Fit the bottom crust closely into the pan, which is preferably a deep one. If the pie is to be baked before the filling is added, prick the crust with a fork or fit an empty pie tin of the same size over it, to prevent bubbles from forming. Such a shell is baked in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes. A filled pie is baked in a hot oven for ten minutes and then the temperature is lowered to moderate for the next 35 minutes.

Two popular fillings are as follows:

Apple Pie.

Mix together 1 cup brown sugar, ½ cup white sugar, 3 tablespoonfuls of self-rising flour. Sprinkle about ½ of this mixture on the bottom crust of the pie. Fill the pie up with thinly sliced tart apples. Scatter the remainder of the sugar and flour over the apples, add 4 tablespoons of water and dot the top layer with dabs of butter. Add a sprinkle of cinnamon or nutmeg if desired. Cover with a top crust.

Chocolate

½ cup grated chocolate
1 cup boiling water
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons self-rising flour
2 eggs yolks
2 tablespoonfuls butter
1 teaspoonful vanilla

Put the boiling water and grated chocolate in a double boiler. When melted add the flour and sugar which have been previously blended. The have been previously blended. When thickened pour in the well-beaten egg yolks. Stir occasionally. Add butter and vanilla and set the mixture aside. When cool put it into the pastry shell which has been baked 15 minutes in a hot oven. Cover with a meringue made from 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, to which are then added a tablespoonful of sugar and 1 teaspoonful of lemon juice. Beat until sugar granules are dissolved. Pile lightly on the filling and bake in a moderate (325 degrees)—not hot—oven for 15 minutes. This will give a more fluffy, tender meringue than one baked for a shorter period in a hot oven.

Origin of Name Wisconsin

It is surprising how many persons, particularly in the Middle West, pronounce "Wisconsin" as if it were spelled "Wisconsing" with an "ing" instead of an "i" in the initial syllable, says Pathfinder Magazine. The name is correctly pronounced "wis-kon-sin," and there is little in its history to account for or to justify the colloquial pronunciation. So far as known the first white man to set foot on any part of what is now the state of Wisconsin was Jean Nicolet, a coureur de bois, who in 1634 was sent into that region by Champlain to make treaties with the Indians. He landed at Green Bay in 1634. In 1673 the region was traversed by Father Marquette and Joliet. At that time the river was known to the Indians by a name which sounded to the French like "wis-kon-sin" and the whites picked up the Indian name and applied it to the territory itself. In early literatures dealing with Wisconsin the name is variously spelled "Wisconsing," "Ouisconsing," "Ouisconsin," and "Wiskonsan," etc., but in no case does the short "o" sound occur in the first syllable. However, in 1685 Le Seuer referred to the tribes along the Wisconsin river as the Ouisconsins, and this may be taken as circumstantial evidence that the name was even then sometimes pronounced "wes-kon-sin."

Strict Treasury Rules as to Damaged Money

There is no federal law forbidding the total destruction of coins by their owners. But there is a statute forbidding the mutilation or lightening of a coin in such a way that the original coin may later be circulated in its impaired condition. It is also illegal to deface a coin without removing any part of it.

Occasionally the ashes of burned money are identified by the Treasury department and redeemed at face value. But no relief is granted by the government to the owners of paper currency totally destroyed. Three-fifths or more of a mutilated United States paper currency bill, note or certificate is redeemable at face value by the Treasury department. When less than three-fifths, but clearly more than two-fifths of the original bill remains, it is redeemable at one-half the face value of the original bill. Such fragments, however, must be accompanied by satisfactory evidence, as affidavits, subscribed and sworn to before a notary public, setting forth the cause and manner of destruction.

Zoo Specimens Come High

Lions are the lords of the jungle, but their value on the open market is often much less than that of other animals. A good gorilla usually is worth about $1,000, while lions have sold for even less than $200. And a gorilla is a risky purchase because the climate of most American cities is hard on the big apes. In the zoo market, the rhinoceros brings the highest price—$500 or more. Snakes are sold by the foot, some of the more interesting varieties selling at $15 a foot. Giraffes run the rhinos a close race in price. A pair of angelfish are snapped up at $100. Among birds, the little blue lovebirds are worth their weight in gold.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Gorilla Walks on All Fours

Contrary to popular belief, the gorilla walks on all fours, points out a writer in Boys' Life Magazine. "There have not been many gorillas brought out of Africa," says he, "and most of them have lived only a few months in captivity. Gorillas have only recently been brought to the attention of the world. The first gorilla in England arrived in 1837, and the first exhibited by the London Zoological society was received in 1855. On the other hand, an Indian rhinoceros was shown in Europe in 1513, a giraffe was sent to the emperor of Germany in 1559, and the first elephant in England was presented by the king of France to Henry III in 1255."

Admitted

Martin was talking at the dinner table about the inconsistency of woman.

"These girls who protest that they are never going to marry!" he broke out. "Everybody knows they will belie their own words at the first opportunity."

He paused, and evidently hoped that Mrs. Martin would come to the rescue of her sex. But that discreet woman held her tongue.

"Why, Mary," he continued, "you remember how it was with yourself. I heard you say more than once that you wouldn't marry the best man alive."

"Well, I didn't," said Mrs. Martin.

Post Office in the Home

Letter writers often find themselves without stamps when ready to mail their letters. One mother has solved this problem, according to the Parents' Magazine, by delegating one of the children in the household to act as postmaster. He is given a dollar's worth of stamps and it is his business to see to it that stamps are always available. The various members of the family buy their stamps from him. This arrangement not only ensures a supply of stamps being in the home, but also provides the child with training in the handling of money and the keeping of accounts.

Poor Richard Quotes Proverbs

The good sense and practical philosophy so rampant in the sayings of Poor Richard have caused many people in various professions of the country to be referred to as Poor Richards, including bank clerks and by others who have agreed to give information as to the future. It is customary to add some (not necessarily to the point) to the answer made by human folly to desire for foreknowledge. But it is reasonable to believe that a goodly part of this expenditure is made worth the investment in other announcements.

Every normal person is interested in the future to some degree and eager to learn something about it, if that were possible, in well nigh universal. But it is not reasonable to suppose that $125,000,000 annually is spent by people who really believe that they can learn something. For the curiosity about the future is accompanied by curiosity almost as urgent about anything mysterious—anything that is seemingly outside the zone of personal experience and capacities.

Fortune tellers have attracted and continue to attract a host of patrons who would strenuously deny belief that the future can be foretold, but yet are interested in the occasional evidences, deriving from unknown means and causes, that those who practice prophecy do "hit it right" many times.

There is innate in humanity distrust of absolute rationality. We are all conscious of the vast nescience that underlies our knowledge and present means of acquiring it. We are greatly curious about possible sources of knowledge yet undeveloped. And we pay a high price merely to gratify curiosity.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Indians Outclassed in Use of Bow and Arrow

Archery 200 or more years ago was a useful accomplishment as well as a competitive sport. Prior to the invention of gunpowder, the bow and arrow had been, for almost 1,000 years, the principal weapon of defense in England. So important was it considered that every Englishman be able to wield a wicked bow that archery practice was long compulsory for all men between the ages of sixteen and sixty. The Mayflower immigrants were armed with blunderbusses, but, in order to conserve their supply of shot, they frequently hunted with the bow and arrow, in the use of which they were more skillful than were their savage neighbors. Indian prowess with the bow and arrow seems to have been much overrated by romanticists. They usually shot their quarry at close range after it had been stalked for them, and in friendly shooting competitions between redskins and Englishmen, the white men are said to have invariably won.

Lip Pronunciation

Forms of the letters in a recently discovered old Phoenician alphabet show evidences of having been chosen to represent the forms of the mouth used in speaking them. This theory is advanced by Sir Richard Paget, an authority on human speech, who finds that nearly every one of the twenty-nine symbols used is suggestive of the lip formation to produce the sound symbolized. He does not suggest that the scribe who selected the mouthlike characters did so intentionally, but believes instead that the forms were chosen unconsciously. The letter "P," for instance, is represented by a sign suggestive of the closed lips used at the start of pronouncing it.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Presidential Gardener

The President's garden goes back to the days when John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts lived at the White House, says an article in a Boston paper. It was said that President Adams had the tastes of an English squire. In his diary he mentions that he delighted to work in the garden in the dew of the morning.

"In this small garden," he wrote, "of not less than two acres there are forest and fruit trees, shrubs, hedges, esculents, vegetables, kitchen and medicinal herbs, hot-house plants, flowers and weeds to the amount I conjecture of at least 1,000. Ouseley, the gardener, knows them all by their botanical names."

Old Jewish Burial Customs

The ancient Jews of Palestine buried their dead by placing the corpse either in the earth or in caves hewn out of the rock. Sometimes the sepulcher was dug in the ground in the neighborhood of the family dwelling. More frequently, however, rocks were excavated so as to form compartments or galleries with as many vaults as desired. These vaults were known as "kokim." The burial place was often in a garden situated at least 50 cubits distant from the city. The site was usually marked by a whitewashed stone.

Ancient Water Organ

One of the strangest musical instruments, and which, by the way, plays an important part in the history of music, is the ancient water organ or hydraulic. The water organ was the musical instrument of ancient Alexandria and Rome. One of these old organs was discovered in making excavations for a new electric plant in the suburbs of Budapest, Hungary. Despite the fact that it had been buried for centuries it was in a good state of preservation.

Rainfall Decides Size of Wheat Crop

Weather finds a strong way to influence events and will change the face of the world. Dawson remarked on the late Fred Fleetgal Lowell, are the beginning of the end of life upon the earth, and they are widening. Lower California and the west coast of Mexico, Central and South America down to Cape Horn are arid most of the year. Australia is ringed around with water and vast stretches of barren beaches. The Sahara and Arabia are bone-dry all year. Yet here are the seas covering more than three-fourths of the earth, used by us merely to sail on and fish in.

In every 100 pounds of sea water there are only three and one-half pounds of salty materials, three-fourths of the salts being sodium chloride, or common salt. If we knew how to separate the salt and water economically, we could drive back the deserts from every shore.

Nature knows one way; she evaporates the water, leaving the salt behind, then condenses the vapor into rain. On ships at sea, man makes use of the same process, but this evaporation process is too expensive for use ashore. Unless willing to let nature take its course, multiplying man will in time have to tackle the water problem in a new way.—Los Angeles Times.

Warning About Neglect Credited to Franklin

The authorship of the old saying about "for want of a nail a kingdom was lost," is attributed to Benjamin Franklin. In the preface of his "Poor Richard's Almanack for 1758," Richard Saunders, the name Franklin assumed in the writing, quotes a man named Father Abraham as saying: "And again, he Richard adviseth to circumspection and care, even in the smallest matters, because sometimes a little neglect may breed great mischief, adding, for want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of care about a horseshoe nail." No historical incident of this nature is known, and it is believed that Franklin invented the story. In old school readers, Franklin's precept is given as follows: "For the want of a nail the shoe was lost; for the want of a shoe the horse was lost; for the want of a horse the rider was lost; for the want of a rider the battle was lost; for the want of a battle the kingdom was lost—and all for the want of a horseshoe nail."

Mankind's Average Height

It is estimated by the United States public health service that the average height of a man in this country is about 5 feet 8 inches and the average height of a woman about 5 feet 4 inches. Whitaker's almanac gives the average heights of natives of the British Isles as follows: Scotsmen, 5 feet 8¾ inches; Irishmen, 5 feet 8 inches; Englishmen, 5 feet 7¼ inches; Welshmen, 5 feet 6½ inches. Books dealing with anthropology, such as that by E. B. Tylor in the Popular Science library, give average heights of other races. Thus 5 feet 4 inches is given for the Chinese laborer, 5 feet 7 inches for the Swede, 5 feet for the Lapp, 5 feet 11 inches for the Patagonia of South America, 4 feet 6 inches for the Bushmen and other South African tribes.

Longevity of Elephants

No accurate information is obtainable as to the extreme age an elephant reaches in the wild state. Nor is there any positive evidence available that one ever lived to be more than seventy-five years old either in captivity or the wild state, although it is supposed that one may occasionally live to be ninety-five or one hundred years old. The director of the New York Zoological part states that the extreme life span of animals may be estimated with a fair degree of accuracy by multiplying by four or five the number of years which the young of the species requires to reach maturity. Elephants reach maturity at about twenty-five and begin to get old at sixty or sixty-five.

Knew His Host

He was well known to his friends for his weakness for extravagant living and a distinct aversion to paying anybody when he could possibly avoid it; and the other day, having taken and furnished a somewhat sumptuous flat, he invited some of his friends to dinner.

"Don't you think," he asked, proudly, as he was showing them round the place, "that it's rather nicely furnished? Don't you consider I deserve great credit for it?"

"You do," remarked one of the party, dryly, "and I should imagine you've got it, too."

Americans Use Most Power

Some years ago a farm power survey showed that each farm worker in the United States produced more than six times as much farm products as the average Italian farm worker, and used 2.05 horse power as compared to 19 horse power for the Italian worker. Now the average Nebraska farmer with more than 5 horse power available is able to produce 18 times as much as the average Italian. This difference in productive capacity accounts largely for the difference in their scale of living. —Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Artificial Lights Help Egg Production

Artificial lights for the fall, winter and spring months are proving profitable for poultrymen, according to tests made at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky.

Pullets in lighted houses averaged six dozen more eggs during the winter and hens a dozen more eggs each, than did the birds in unlighted pens. During the spring and summer, however, pullets in unlighted pens laid better, and consequently at the end of the year the production in the lighted and the unlighted pens was about equal.

The value of artificial lights, however, is in the fact that they bring increased production during the winter egg prices are high.

AT AUCTION

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13

AT 2 P. M.

Lying between Polk Lafoon's farm and Price Pike about One Mile Northwest of Florence, Kentucky.

Having contracted with the owners Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bauers to sell this farm known as Pleasant View we will on above date sell same at ABSOLUTE AUCTION—our only method. Farm will be sold in several tracts, each with a good frontage on the road.

This is good productive land and is conceded to be one of the best farms in this community. Lays well, about 40 acres in cultivation—rest in grass; lots of grass, old bluegrass. Many young locust and walnut trees. Watered by 2 ponds and several springs. Dairy barn and small stock barn—both in good condition.

Large brick residence with hardwood floors, several very attractive old-time fire-places, basement, hot air furnace (not in best condition), electric line in yard, well and cistern at door and necessary out-buildings.

This home is typical of many Kentucky homes of a few decades ago, and stands as a monument to that day when no doubt it was the scene of many happy gatherings. And today, this old mansion seems to express that same hospitality. Not in its most luxurious attire at present—but indeed a foundation and environment in which a most desirable and comfortable home can be made. In the avenue which it overlooks are acres and acres of bluegrass, dotted with large old shade trees which time can only produce.

An ideal country home—a real stock farm, just a few minutes from Cincinnati—a ready market for your produce. Near churches and New High School at Florence, school bus at door.

A recent survey made by the Bureau of Agriculture at Washington shows that there is now a steady trend from the cities to the farms. Don't wait until everybody is buying—invest NOW in Real Estate land—the backbone of the Nation. Buy good land, well located—where your money will be safe. Think it over.

FIFTY YEARS

SIXTY MR. AND MRS. P. A. HALL WERE MARRIED — GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED HERE ON OCT. 13.

Fifty years, just a half century, have elapsed since the bonds of wedlock between Frank A. Hall and Lillian Reed.

That's a long time, but to Mr. and Mrs. Hall, of Burlington, it does not seem so long, they say. It seems to them just as yesterday that the Rev. Foster pronounced them man and wife on October 13, 1881.

On Tuesday evening at their home in Burlington this happy couple celebrated the occasion in the presence of their family and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have two daughters, Mrs. H. W. Shearer and Mrs. G. W. Bodker, both of Newport.

Mrs. Hall came to Burlington five years prior to her marriage, while Mr. Hall was born and reared in this town, having spent the greater portion of his active life as a printer on the Boone County Recorder, from which post he voluntarily retired in February of 1925. He was with the paper approximately 45 years.

The following were present at the celebration Tuesday evening:

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Daly, of Cincinnati, Mrs. Harry Emerson and son, Wesley, of Hyde Park, Ohio, Miss Kate Bradford, of Florence, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Reed and daughter, Ester Louise, of Fort Thomas, Mrs. Grace Weathers, of Covington, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer and daughter Helen Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. George Bodker, of Newport, and Mrs. Louisa B. White, of Burlington. Three of the above were at the marriage fifty years ago.

"MAIDENS OF THE NINETIES"

They came from Erlanger, Ludlow, Hebron, Burlington, Constance and many other points. To the number of sixty they came, the "Maidens of the Nineties," to enjoy once more the dance steps of that gay day. "The Maidens of the Nineties"—now just do a little reverse figuring and may be able to learn just about who some of them were. You know that 1890 was something over forty years ago, so do your own guessing as to who enjoyed the afternoon. And only one man was present, aside from the musicians, and that was Dr. Furnish, of Erlanger. Of course, being a physician, there may have been a "method in his madness." Through the courtesy of the management of the Harvest Home dance hall the affair was given there.

KOREAN OFFERS NEW POSSIBILITIES

New possibilities in the handling and management of Korean lespedeza as a pasture and hay crop were discussed by farmers, the county agent and the crops field agent from the College in the Boone county lespedeza tour held last Tuesday, October 6th.

Korean cut for hay around August 1st and then allowed to make a seed crop represented a new line of thought in the management of the crop. Korean pastured the first year and cut for hay the second was recommended as a method for securing greater return from the crop. Phosphate fertilizer gave marked increases in the growth of the crop. Inoculation remained one of the most important factors. Successful crop yields were found only where the crop had been properly inoculated the first year.

Farms of T. W. Rice, Joel Gray, J. B. Respess, Robert and Charles Chambers and J. L. Vest were visited in the tour.

Mr. Everett Ryle of Union R. D. has purchased a lespedeza seed pan and is making plans for the saving of his own seed. He will be the first farmer in Boone county to have saved any considerable amount of lespedeza seed. This project offers considerable possibilities in Boone county.

VERONA HI SCHOOL WINS TROPHY AT GALLATIN CO. FAIR

The Verona High School basket ball team opened its season auspiciously by winning the silver loving cup at the Gallatin County Fair, at Warsaw, on Saturday, October 3rd.

In the tournament on that day they encountered the fast Sanders five in the finals of the event and emerged the victor by a score of 13-11. Miss Frances Stevens, the only lady coach in the county, has been working with these girls for a number of years and no doubt the victory was largely due to her good work.

The personnel of the team is as follows: [illegible] Claude Greenup and Ray Goodridge are building an addition to the stock barn of Hubert Gaines on the Petersburg road.

FIELD DAY

AT KENTUCKY EXPERIMENT STATION ENJOYED BY COUNTY AGENT AND BOONE COUNTY POULTRY RAISERS

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cleek, Mr. Robert Chambers, Miss Nannie Chambers, Mr. Fred Heil and County Agent H. R. Forkner attended the annual poultry field day held at the Kentucky Experiment Station at Lexington last Wednesday, October 7th. A tour of the Experiment Station plant was made in the morning followed by a special program in the afternoon.

The best lot of pullets ever raised on the Experiment Station farm were put in the laying house October 1st. These pullets were raised in colony brooder houses on ground on which no poultry had run for over two years. The pullets while growing were quarantined to prevent disease being brought in and no one except the caretaker allowed on the range. Mr. J. F. Cleek and Grant Mattox, leading Boone county poultrymen carried out similar programs this year and both have a strong lot of healthy pullets being put in the laying house.

Dr. Rice, head of the poultry department of Cornell University was principal speaker of the afternoon program. Strong vigorous pullets with good body weight for profitable production was the principal point of his interesting discussion. These pullets should be disease free from strong healthy parents and should be raised on clean range with abudance of sunshine and green feed. They should be healthy, plump, fat and well matured before being housed. He also charted the production cycle and market price cycle. Poultry and egg should hold a strong position this winter.

Results of two years feeding experiments at the Kentucky Station showed that range the year round gave higher production and lower mortality than cod liver oil and vitamine B yeast in confinement but that cod liver oil and vitamine B yeast gave lower mortality and much higher production in confinement than when they were left out.

HEBRON NOMINATED AS OUTSTANDING COMMUNITY

Hebron has been nominated as one of the twenty most outstanding rural communities in Kentucky from which the three communities scoring most nearly ideal will be selected by the Farm and Home Week committee of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, for special study. The results of this study will show what factors are essential for a progressive, live, awake successful rural community.

Each of the twenty communities nominated has been visited by a specialist from the University of Kentucky who scored the community in general activities. A special meeting of representatives from each of the local organizations met at the Bank in Hebron with representatives from the College last Tuesday night for a more detailed scoring of the community.

Boone county may not have one of the three highest scoring communities in the state. We are glad to know that we have some of the best. We believe when the final score is made Hebron will stand close to the top.

MT. ZION EAGLES ON FINAL STRETCH

H. R. Forkner was at the Mt. Zion school one day last week to see how the Eagles are finishing their work(and to make arrangements for the first fall meeting.

The Eagles have done good work again this year and are hoping to have their name engraved on the Farm Bureau Trophy for the third time, making it their's to keep.

The people of the Kensington, Richwood and Mt. Zion districts should be proud of this group of their boys and girls who are learning many valuable lessons in their club work, which they could not otherwise obtain.

THE DEACON AND THE DOG

A great many people we know remind us of the frog that Charles F. Kettering, chief research engineer of General Motors, told about the other day.

A deacon was on his way to church one Sunday morning, dressed in his best and with his shoes nicely polished, when he heard his name called from a mudhole near the roadside. Down in the hole was a big bullfrog.

"I have been in here three days," said the frog, "without anything to eat, and I wish you would help me out."

The deacon looked at the mud and looked at his shiny shoes and remembered that he had to pass the collection plate in church, so he replied: "I'm sorry, old man, I can't help you now, but on my way back from church I'll give you a lift out of the hole."

As he came back from church the deacon was surprised to find the frog sitting in the middle of the road, contentedly snapping at flies.

"I thought you said you couldn't get out of that hole," said the deacon.

"I thought I couldn't either until a snake came along and I just had to get out, replied the frog.

Lots of people are discovering these days that they can do things they didn't think they could do. Under the pressure of necessity every one of us can accomplish the impossible. In good times nobody uses more than a fraction of his ability and resourcefulness. But when the smake of hard times comes along we just have to get out some way to do what we didn't believe we could do.

It is a good thing for humanity that life is not always pleasant and easy. Intelligence, ability and character are only developed to their best in the face of adversity. And the harder the struggle, the more fun there is in looking back on it after the peak has been passed.

HOGS VACCINATED TO AVOID CHOLERA OUTBREAK

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 10—Reports received at the department of animal pathology at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky indicate that hog cholera is becoming wide-spread in Kentucky.

Practically all of the Bluegrass counties now have cholera, while other sections, including the large hog raising counties in the western part of the state, have reported the disease in herds.

Dr. W. W. Dimock, head of the department of animal pathology, urges farmers to vaccinate their hogs without further delay. This is the only known method of preventing cholera, he said.

If pigs already are sick, they should be treated with anti-hog-holera serum, which is the only possible way to save any of them. If there are no complicating diseases, such as pneumonia, and the pigs are free from parasites, vaccination may save 50 per cent of sick hogs. The dose of serum should be increased for sick hogs.

It has been observed that cholera comes at intervals of four to seven was in 1926. Knowing that vaccination was being neglected, the department of animal pathology issued the following statement in June of last year:

"Unless a large number of hogs are vaccinated this spring and summer a large percentage of these animals will be susceptible to cholera, and conditions will become ideal for another wave of the disease.

"During and immediately following an outbreak of hog cholera large numbers of animals are vaccinated, resulting in a large percentage of the hog population becoming immune to cholera. The prevalence of the disease then decreases, which tends to cause farmers to give less attention to vaccination. As a result a large number of hogs become susceptible to cholera. Cholera infection may be brought into a community at any time, through the movement of hogs or other channels. Once started, it spreads rapidly because of the large number of unvaccinated animals."

Fruit in Breads

WHEN Marie Antoinette was told that the people had no bread she is said to have answered: "Why don't they eat cake?" Had this flippant Queen lived in a later epoch, she might very well have recommended a fruit bread to the hungry peasants. For certainly there is no more nourishing or appetizing form of the staff of life than tasty fruit muffins or biscuits. Here are some excellent recipes.

Blueberry Biscuits: Sift together two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt and two tablespoons sugar. Cut in four tablespoons shortening, or work in with finger tips. Add seven-eighths cup diluted evaporated milk to make a dough soft enough to drop. Add two-third cup well drained canned blueberries quickly and carefully and drop by spoonfuls on a buttered baking sheet or in muffin tins. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for twelve to fifteen minutes.

Try This for Breakfast

Apple and Date Muffins: Beat two eggs and add one cup milk. Sift together two cups flour, three tablespoons sugar, four teaspoons baking powder, and one-half teaspoon salt, and add to first mixture. Add one-half cup canned apple sauce and three tablespoons melted butter. Add one-half cup chopped dates, and pour into buttered muffin tins. Bake about fifteen to twenty minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees). This makes eight to ten muffins.

PAUL IN THESSALONICA
Acts 17:1, 9-11 I Thessalonians 2:7-12

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Paul and Silas were escorted to the boundary of Philippi by the very magistrates who sentenced them. That part of the country was also familiar ground during the recent world war. Thessalonica is the modern Salonica. The usual approach was made through the Jewish synagogue. Soon, jealousy arose because the success of the evangelists meant the giving up of many of the ancient national traditions and customs. A group of roughnecks was stirred up to attack Paul and they sought him in the house of Jason. Fortunately the soul winners were elsewhere, and poor Jason had to bear the brunt of the attack. Meanwhile high praise was paid to the work of the gospel in the charge that was made: "These that have turned the world upside down have come hither also."

Since the messengers could no longer be heard in Thessalonica they were sent forward to Berea, where the same method was pursued. These people showed just plain common sense when they took the words of Paul and sought out confirming references in their Scripture rolls, our Old Testament. Therein they found the prophecies concerning the Messiah and beheld their complete fulfillment in the life and works of Jesus Christ. We do not need to believe everything we are told, but many a great truth is lost because we refuse to give attention to the supporting evidence. The result was that many believed and among the number we find a group of Greek women of distinction.

In passing, attention should be given to the various letters that Paul wrote to the churches that he established enroute. Two epistles were sent to the church at Thessalonica after Paul reached Corinth. The Golden Text is a good verse to commit to memory: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law," Psalm 119:18.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

JUST BETWEEN US BOYS

I am frequently asked, which is the more dangerous for a man, smoking or chewing tobacco. Because so many do one or the other, if not both! Especially is this so in rural life—that sort of living that comprises most of human liberty if not luxury.

I can hardly concede danger in either phase of tobacco-using, provided always that moderation is strictly observed; the limit of the safety zone is TEMPERANCE, and that applies to food and drink and work and play as well.

At the time of my graduation, I had learned to be a fiend for smoking; ambitious to succeed, I observed very keenly that my pockets carrying the smoker's fragrance mixtures offended some of fine patrons almost to the point of disgust. This wouldn't do. I banished the old pipe and betook myself to the seductive "plug."

But, oh, the filth of that! The abomination that goes with the cuspidor! Smoking threatened to ruin my business; chewing menaced me with a divorce court. I resolved to quit—had to do it. And I did it. Here's how:

I bought gum, plenty. I chewed a wad of gum till the sugar was extracted from it; then, I added to the tasteless wax a small bit of tobacco, making a very smooth "chew." It had the seductive flavor of the plug, without the eternal spitting and bad breath. One bolus would satisfy me continuously for half a day; my tobacco was reduced to the vanishing point; I became free.

And, there's a method by which the excessive chewer may make himself decent in a very satisfactory way. I wonder how many of my masculine readers will try it and be convinced? It's so easy to shake off a very filthy habit, if you just care to—and as the wife wants you to do.

In Way of Life

PERSONNEL

The head of a trust company was describing the extraordinary growth of their business.

More and more estates are passing into the hands of trust companies. The capital funds of these estates are invested not only in bonds and mortgages but in the voting stocks of the country's leading corporations.

If the process goes on at the same rate for another twenty-five years the trust companies will control a large proportion of the wealth of the Unied States.

"Your problem is personnel," I said to the banker.

"That's our only problem," he answered.

"How are you solving it?"

"Well, we try to pick the smartest young men from the colleges, men who have majored in economics and finance. We start them in at the bottom and let them fight their way up. Some drop by the wayside, but the survivors develop into very good men."

I told him I thought they were omitting one very important step in the process of training.

"After your young man has sad two or three years' experience in the bank you ought to pull him out and send him into the heart of the country," I said. "Make him spend a year or two working on a farm, or with a section gang on the railroad, or clerking in a country store. Insist that he live on what he earns.

"When he comes back to New York he will have some idea of how most ordinary people have to work for their money. He will have a social, as well as a merely financial point of view. A dollar will never become merely a sign or a sum to him. It will represent hopes and fears, ambitions and defeats, human sweat and blood."

When it came time for me to go to college my father took me aside and said: "You have planned to go to Amherst, and I approve of the plan. But I want you to take your first year at Berea College in Kentucky, where I worked my way through." He added a sentence which I have never forgotten: "I want your sympathies to be always on the side of the men who have to struggle for what they get."

It was a wise and fine thing for a father to say to a boy.

I am one of those who believe that we are entering a period of great social changes. No matter how big and strong an institution or an industry may be it is going to be tested. Those institutions will win out which are headed by men of broad, human sympathies; men who can see the other man's point of view because they have shared the other man's daily life.

It is a time of wonderful opportunity for young men. But they must get themselves education.

Not merely the education of books; the greater education of really knowing and liking their fellow men.

Soy Bean Long Known

The use of the soy bean goes back to the beginning of China's agricultural age under Emperor Shen Nung.

LATE CABBAGE IS BEST FOR KRAUT

The later varieties of cabbage are best for kraut, says a statement sent out by the College of Agriculture, University of Ky. The heads should be firm. Kraut may be packed in heavy crocks or wooden kegs. A ten-gallon crock holds about 50 pounds of cabbage. If a keg is used special precautions should be taken that it is perfectly clean and free from odors which might affect the flavor of the kraut. Thorough washing with soda water, scalding with boiling water, and exposure to sunlight is a good method for preparing the keg for kraut.

To prepare the cabbage for kraut remove the outside leaves and hard core and weigh. To every forty pounds of cabbage allow a pound or approximately 2 cups of salt. Shred the cabbage very fine. The salt and cabbage may be mixed before packing, if this method is followed: Mix 5 pounds of shredded cabbage with 4 tablespoons of salt, and pack. Repeat until the cabbage is within a few inches of the top. The juices are drawn out by the salt. When the keg is packed the cabbage should be completely covered with brine. Press cabbage down, and cover with clean leaves or cloth. Put a plate or clean piece of hard wood on top and weight with a heavy block. Fermentation will begin almost immediately. The rapidity of the process depends on the temperature. Eight to 12 days are usually sufficient in very warm weather. Lower temperatures require a longer period.

It is necessary that the scum be removed as it forms. As soon as the kraut is as sour as desired, it may be canned and kept indefinitely. Pack in sterilized jars, add enough of the kraut brine to fill the jars, partially seal, process 1 hour in a hot water bath or 40 minutes in steam pressure cooker at 10 lbs. Seal and store in cool place.

Kraut may be served cold as it is taken from the can or it may be heated and a small amount of fat added for seasoning just before serving.

P. D. B. DESTROYS PEACH TREE BORER

The peach tree borer destroys more peach trees in Kentucky than all other insects combined, says the College of Agriculture, in a circular containing directions for the use of paradichlorobenzene, commonly known as P. D. B. This white crystalline material, which looks like coarse salt, may be purchased at drug stores or from concerns dealing in orchard supplies.

Scrape the grass and weeds away from the trunk of the tree, and then in a circle an inch to 3 inches from the tree pour the P. D. B., using a half of an ounce for trees 3 to 5 years old, and an ounce to an ounce and a half for trees 6 years or older. Then mound up the dirt around the tree to a depth of three inches, so as to bury the chemical, and pack with the back of the shovel. Fumes from the P. D. B. kill the borers.

John Delahaunty of the firm of Woodward & Delahunty, Real Estate, was in town Friday closing a deal for the Chasles Youell farm, now owned by Mr. Morgan. The price was a long one. The crop, sock and all farming implements were included. Gray and Bartlett, of Latonia, were the purchasers.

JOHNSON DENIES HE WILL BE CANDIDATE

Frankfort, Ky., Oct., 9.—"I shall not be a candidate against Alben W. Barkley or anybody else for the United States Senate; nor shall I ever be a candidate for any office," Ben Johnson, Bardstown, chairman of the State Highway Commission, declared today in answer to campaign utterances of John C. Worsham, Hend erson, Republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Worsham charged that Mr. Johnson was laying his plans to oppose Mr. Barkley next year for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

GENERAL HENRY LAWRENCE

General Henry Lawrence, editor of the Cadiz Record, long prominent in Democratic politics in western Kentucky, came to Louisville Friday to be associated with State Campaign Headquarters until the end of the campaign.

General Lawrence, besides being one of the outstanding editors in Kentucky, is regarded as one of the state's most astute politicians. In past years he has been associated with the Beckham wing of the Democratic party.

Innumerable friends of this genial Kentuckian may look forward to a sincere and hearty welcome from him when they have occasion to visit Democratic Headquarters in the Seelbach Hotel.

WHO REMEMBEERS FRANK BLAIR?

(Lexington Herald)

By the way, isn't Ed. Morrow about the last person who ought to be coming back to tell Kentuckians whom they should elect as governor.

Does anybody remember Frank Blair? Do the people of the state remember that Ed. Morrow went in as governor by a substantial majority and went out almost by unanimous consent?

Do they remember the famous "I Will Nots" that swept him into office? Do they remember the famous "I am sorry speech" when he attempted to defend his administration when Charles L. Dawson was nominated?

Of course they remember. The people of Kentucky will laugh at Ed's jokes but they will vote against his candidate.

THE FARMERS' INTEREST

Hardin County Enterprise)

In introducing Judge Laffoon at Shelbyville last week, Judge Ralph Gilbert, Congressman from the Eighth Congressional District, who was one of Judge Laffoon's opponents for the Democratic nomination for Governor, said: "Judge Laffoon is entitled to the vote of every farmer in Shelby county. I ran in order that I might aid in relieving real estate from an over-burden of taxation and Judge Laffoon stands for the same program."

Birds Like Small Boys

It appears that the bath-hating complex of small boys extends to birds. That conclusion could easily be drawn after observing a robin who, after several unsuccessful attempts to entice two youngsters under a lawn sprny, forced them to take a bath by nudging them along with her beak until they were under the water.

LABOR ENDORSES JUDGE LAFFOON

The Four Railroad Brotherhoods have issued an endorsement of the candidacy of Judge Ruby Laffoon and will advocate his election in November.

Representatives are being placed in the field throughout the state to carry out this endorsement.

Judge Laffoon's understanding of the problems of the laboring man has been evidenced on more than one occasion. His is a sympathy born of understanding, and the man who earns his living by daily labor knows that he may leave his case with Judge Laffoon with the assurance that he will receive fair treatment.

In this connection it is notable that all legislation for the welfare of labor since 1890 has been passed by Democratic legislatures. In the last session many laws, sought by Labor, were passed only to be vetoed by a Republican governor.

With Judge Laffoon as Governor and a Democratic Legislature assured, Labor does not need to be convinced that its problems will receive a sympathetic understanding and consideration.

ENDOSES DAN TALBOTT

The Bulletin Board, official publication of the Kentucky Association of Insurance Agents, in its October issue, endorses the candidacy of J. Dan Talbott for State Auditor.

The endorsement was given following Mr. Talbott's declaration to the agents of Kentucky that he will not tolerate favoritism in the administration of ither the Insurance Commissioners Department or the State Board of Fire Prevention and Rates. "On the whole," says the Bulletin Board, "Mr. Talbott clearly indicates a refreshing sense of the responsibility that is incumbent upon the State Auditor in making proper appointments. The attitude of the Republican candidate for State Auditor we find unconvincing."

Writer "Hands It To Hoover" For Outlining Bank Program

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Hudson)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

In his inaugural address, on March 4, 1877, President Rutherford B. Hayes said: "He serves his party best who serves his country best."

Expressed more than half a century ago, that will be news to many of our modern-day politicians.

Under our bi-partisan method of selecting our chief executive and other governmental servants, it is to be expected that intensive competitive programs will be carried out. But we have come to be intelligent enough that personalities, vituperation, mud-slinging and blindness to everything other than personal aggrandisement, political preferment and treasury pap during and after a campaign—particularly after—only serves to nauseate us, while an honest fight for principle, no matter how forceful, is to be commended. However, once we have made a selection, the candidate becomes the selection of the Nation and as such should have the whole-hearted support of all citizens.

For the time being, at least, an election should bury partisanship—particularly so when there exists an emergency. When in view of the continued sinking of American ships President Woodrow Wilson came to Congress on April 2, 1917, and asked for a declaration that a state of warfare existed between the United States and Germany, a resolution to that effect was offered in both the Senate and the House—passed by the former on April 4 and by the latter on April 6th with a plethora of Republican votes in both branches.

Whatever may be the burden of your song, all the way from "Hail to the Chief" to "Give the Devil his Due," it must be admitted that there has never been in time of peace a more striking illustration of th value of national leadership than has just been afforded by President Hoover's initiative in proposing "a definite program of action to mobilize the banking resources of the country." The immediate favorable reaction to early reports of his intention was an augry of the widely beneficial results that are now confidently expected on every hand. The prompt acceptance of his plan by the leading bankers and the hearty indorsement it received from the most influential members of both parties in Congress with whom the President conferred at the White House have already strengthened this general feeling of encouragement.

Among the hundreds of messages of congratulation and support on his plan for mobilizing banks behind the country's credit system—messages from all parts of the country and all of a laudatory nature—that from John Darrouzat, of Galveston, Texas, is outstanding. Mr. Darrouzat wired: "I am a collar-bound, brass-bound, dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, and as such did everything within my power honorably to elect your opponent in the past election. However, I want to congratulate you upon your program and believe that if you can get the proper cooperation of the Democrats and epublicans the plan announced in the morning papers will bring this country out of chaotic conditions and at an early date relieve the nation of the much-talked-of depression."

"We have not," said one of the most influential of the Democrats who count most in party affairs—and these are not all in Congress—"in any way changed our mind about Hoover. We are just as firmly convinced of his mistakes of the past, and are just as determined to beat him for reelection if we can. On the other hand, in a crisis such as this partisan politics is an unforgiveable crime. When he has a sound proposition, there is no excuse for Democrats to pull back. In this case the soundness of his proposal is too clear to argue about. We are supporting him simply because he happens to be carrying the ball. Furthermore, looking at it from a political instead of a patriotic angle, it would be rotten politics not to. If the plan works, we will be in position to get some of the credit. If it does not, it can't be blamed on us."

In convention at Atlantic City, N. J., members of the American Bankers Association, speaking for the financial community at large, put the full weight of their influence behind President Hoover's plan for a gigantic institution to thaw out frozen banking assets. At the same time, the association, in a comprehensive set of resolutions, strongly recommended to the Washington administration that negotiations be started at once looking to efforts in the direction of disarmament, vigorously opposed any form of governmental dole and advocated energetic unemployment relief through private agencies. By implication, the ass. President Hoover's general program for hastening economic recovery.

The only impressive criticism—and it's only half-baked criticism, at that—of President Hoover's move comes from the intensive Democratic Baltimore Sun, which tells us that it is an axiom of successful statecraft that measures and methods must be geared to the times to which they apply. "At present," says the Sun, "we are parring thru weird conditions. And President Hoover's latest move to introduce 'constructive factors' into the situation must be guaged accordingly."

In his Reflexions on the Revolution in France, Ireland's great orator and statesman, Edmond Burke wrote:

"You had that action and counteraction which, in the natural and in the political world, from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers draws out the harmony of the universe."

Irishmen always did have "the gift of the gab," anyway.

Royal Soup Calls for Variety of Ingredient

The recipe for the famous "olio" soup made for the Austrian court "since the time of the Empress Maria Theresa's father" has been printed in Budapest. It is said to have originated in Spain, and the secret was revealed by a pensioned court chef. The stock consisted of veal or ham, mutton, venison and other game roasted in butter and then boiled. Calves' feet and ox feet, turned into jelly, were added, together with white cabbages stewed with smoked and fresh pork, maize seed, chestnuts, lentils, pearl barley and carrots roasted with sugar.

The combination was laid on ice for four hours, so as to remove every trace of grease. Next a bouillon was prepared of beef and veal bones, mushrooms and other vegetables, making a liquid to be cleared by the addition of hashed beef, ox liver and white of egg. The boiling bouillon was strengthened by cooked fowls, ducks, turkey, pigeons, pheasants, goose and wild duck. It took two days and two nights to complete the process.

The last thing done was to drain the concoction through muslin bags. When porcelain jugs were filled, the guests were served in small china cups.—New York Times.

Almost Colorless Ink

There is no colorless ink. There is, however, a certain form of camouflage in which figures and letters are painted on a background of the same color. This is done by coloring the paints with pigments, or mixtures of pigments, which match one another in color but which are of different chemical composition. They match one another because the impression made on the retina of the eye is the combined effect of all of the light rays that are transmitted to it from the painted surface. A piece of colored glass partially analyzes the light by absorbing some of the light rays and letting others through. What gets through to the eye is not the same in both cases, hence the background and the design do not appear the same color.

True Story

An excited foreign gentleman was awaiting the arrival of his first-born in one of our hospitals.

He was so certain it was going to be a boy that he had invited all his friends to an elaborate banquet that evening and had broadcast the joyous news all over town. Thus, when the nurse came to tell him that the arrival was a girl, his rage knew no bounds. Hurriedly, he made several telephone calls, canceling the feast.

Then, summoning the nurse, he announced: "I'm going to get into my automobile and go home. You tell the wife when she's ready to come home to take a street car."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Speed on Railroad Lines

Under special conditions railroad speeds of 90 miles an hour and over were attained more than 28 years ago, for short distances. A train on the Plant system in 1901 made 120 miles an hour on a test run between Fleming and Jacksonville. Among regular scheduled American passenger trains today there are several that average over 50 miles per hour. The World Almanac states that first-class German and French trains now average 50 to 60 miles an hour over long runs. A regular train on the Great Western in England makes 66.3 miles an hour.

Day of Hearty Eating

During the administration of John Quincy Adams, evening assemblies were popular at the homes of congressmen and cabinet members. The parties began at eight o'clock. Promptly at ten o'clock everybody went out on the back porch for "light refreshments." At one end of the table would be a roast bah; at the other a saddle of venison. In between came the wild ducks, and the pastries. And scattered about were cakes and puddings. A large side table held the punch and the madeira.

Japan's Climate

Since Japan extends through nearly 20 degrees of latitude, it necessarily has a great range of climate. In the south the climate is sub-tropical; in the north it is extremely cold. The southern islands have high temperatures in the summer and no snow or ice in the winter. In the Kurile islands the snow and ice never entirely disappear. Kiushu and Shikoku have a moderate climate.

The same year Capt. Owen Tweedy and Captain Crofton, of the British army, made a 5,500-mile trip from Rejaf, in the heart of Africa, to Algiers, crossing the Sahara en route, in a small delivery car.

THAT IS DIFFERENT

(Richmond Daily Register)

Some days ago a controversy arose between Mack Galbreath, federal highway engineer in Kentucky, and the state highway department, over the quality of stone being used on a federal road project between Crab Orchard and Stanford. The state laboratory insisted that tests made of the stone indicated it met specifications. Galbreath sent a sample of the stone which provoked the dispute to the federal laboratory at Washington, where tests indicated that is did not entirely meet requirements set for road material.

Following the incident there was much criticism of the state highway department. The Courier-Journal was volublo and caustic. It was implied that the highway commission had connived to lower the quality of stone used in highway building. It was asserted that the commission had purchased the stone which the federal laboratory declined to approve. The incident was regarded by this critical publication as reflecting upon the judgment and integrity of the highway commission.

As result of the incident Donald Wolfe, head of the physical testing laboratory of the federal bureau of public roads, was dispatched to Frankfort to ascertain the exact facts in the matter. His report being prepared for chief of the bureau exonerates those of the state highway commission whose motives had been impugned.

Mr. Wolfe found that the discrepancies in the stone tests were due to the fact that Kentucky's laboratory for testing the soundness of rock is improperly equipped. That is an unfortunate deficiency but not unusual. It provides ample explanation for the divergent results of tests made in the state laboratory and at Washington. It refutes the imputation that the laboratory tests were improperly made by incompetent persons, or that there was a sinister plot to "put something over" by using stone of inferior quality.

Details of Mr. Wolfe's finding were not announced in the dispatch from Washington in which it was said only that laboratory equipment was inadequate. In a discussion of the matter while at Frankfort he said that it was a virtual impossibility to make a test of stone in the laboratory at Frankfort, or in any other than the laboratory of the bureau of standards at Washington that would be absolutely accurate. Rooms in which the prolonged tests are made must be maintained at an exact temperature of 70 degrees Fahrenheit. There must be no variation in the temperature for a period of twenty-four hours if the test is to be absolutely accurate. He said that no chemist could make an absolutely accurate test in the Frankfort laboratory or in other state laboratories because of the difficulty of maintaining an even temperature.

The laboratory equipment at Frankfort is the same that has been in use for a number of years during the period Mr. Galbreath has been on duty in Kentucky. This it seems is the first time he has raised the question as to quality of stone in use, or been dissatisfied with tests made in the highway laboratory.

That newspaper which was most critical of the highway commission, basing criticisms on the divergent laboratory tests, asserted, as we recall, that the highway commission bought the inferior stone which provoked the dispute. Such is not the case.

Contract for the road was let to the Stone Construction Company for $100,879.20, which was $44,003.40 less than the bid of a construction company that was frequently favored by the Democratic highway commission. The contractor building the road bought the stone used. The highway commission did not purchase it. It was thought that proper precaution had been taken to insure stone up to standard. It had been tested and shown by these tests to be acceptable material.

Actual work started on this project May 24, 1931. It is to be completed January 5, 1932. The work be about three-fourths finished. One can but wonder why Mr. Galbreath found no fault with the material used until a time when such action might be utilized as political campaign material. Prhaps such a thought was foreign to his mind, yet his protest was accurately timed to create a condition that might in the minds of some, in possession of only part of the facts, reflect upon the integrity of the highway commission. We prefer to believe that such did not motivate his actions because we have had a high regard for the federal engineer.

Just now there seems to be much interest in the subject of termites or white ants. This unusual interest prompted the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station to feature an exhibit at the State Fair this year. Large water-color drawings of the insects, their dwelling, tunnels and injury were displayed along with living specimens and material on which their work was clearly evident. Many hundreds of fair visitors viewed the exhibit and invarably asked the question: "Are these new insects, and do you recommend the commercial termite treatments?"

The answer to these questions is summed up in the following statement from the United States Department of Agriculture under date of August 11, 1931.

"Home owners should beware of overdrawn and alarming reports of injury to buildings by termites or white ants. In particular they should be wary when exaggerated statements of this kind form a part of the 'sales talk' for a 'termite treatment.' Many of these treatments are expensive and are not correspondingly effective. Reports to the Bureau of Entomology indicate that sharpers, overemphasizing the real injury that termites are likely to do, are flinching from home owners hundreds of thousands of dollars and rendering little or no effective service in return.

"Salesmen, however, have been exaggerating the danger from termites in an effort to sell treatments, many of which have little or no merit. but which they picture as absolutely necessary to prevent the collapse within a short time of buildings invaded or under allegd danger of being invaded by the termites.

"The Bureau of Entomology says that there has been no change n the situation in the South and West as to termite damage; that conditions are substantially the same now as they have been for the last 50 or 100 years. The records indicate that the collapse of a building on account of termite damage is so rare as to be for practical purposes a negligible risk. It is true that where termites have been in buildings for many years, as indicated by emerging swarms of the winged forms, the foundation timbers, and even the floors and adjacent woodwork, may have become so weakened as to make necessary some replacement.

"Spraying and fumigation are practically useless.

Tests of Truth

It takes a beauty surgeon to see a face, but a little monkey and a little brake will tell a story.

Personality Not Thing for "Hand Cultivation"

Entertaining articles the reader may often see telling how to develop personality; but be careful whom you practice on. Personality is something you do not have premeditatedly. It is too elusive for that. Truth is, you do not know that you have it until others tell you so.

The kind of personality you "cultivate" is rather artificial; and the victims of it are infuriated when they detect that they are the guinea pigs on whom it is being tried.

Our inexpert advice is to let your personality alone. Try to be kind, generous and sympathetic and permit your personality to take care of itself. Like your complexion, which you must leave to its face, after you have endeavored to follow the rules for good health, a "thought-about" personality hazards being overdone. It becomes an exhibition; and that will never do. —F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Original Athletes

No ancient literature in the world contains so many descriptions of sport as the old Norse sagas. Greater assiduity was shown by the Vikings in perfecting themselves in strength of body and limb than in cultivating their mind. Their principal sports consisted of racing, running, leaping of various kinds, wrestling, ski-running, tugs-of-war and throwing the spear, fencing with sword and also many ball games. Skiing today is the Swedes' national pastime, more so than it is that of the Swiss. The Swedes have long exercised supremacy in the domain of gymnastics, Swedish gymnastics having come to be recognized as the most efficient and valuable physical culture system so far devised by man. There are few places in the world where winter sports can be practiced to better advantage than Swede.

Organization's "Minutes"

The essentials of the minutes of an organization are: Name of organization; time and place of meeting; kind of meeting, whether regular, special, adjourned, etc.; the fact of the presence or absence of the regular chairman and secretary and the names of their substitutes, if they are absent; whether the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved; all main motions made at the meeting, except those that were withdrawn, and points of order and appeals, whether sustained or lost, and all other motions not lost or withdrawn; usually the names of members introducing main motions are recorded, but not the names of seconders.

Grasshopper's Mausoleum

Millions of grasshoppers that lived many years ago when glaciers were in the making are preserved in a huge glacier 12 miles from Cook, Mont., on old mining camp just outside the northeast corner of Yellowstone National park. The grasshoppers thus embalmed are believed to have been caught in a snowstorm as they swarmed over the region north of Yellowstone National park. More snows on top increased the pressure and eventually the snows became a glacier, forming a mausoleum for the insects. Today these insects may plainly be seen and as the glacier recedes they are left lying on the ground. —Exchange.

Constructive Sleep

To make our sleep constructive we should review in our minds near the retiring hour some of the things we want to do on the coming day, so that our so-called subconscious processes can be active on these things to be accomplished rather than with disturbing dreams. Taking our tasks to bed for solution helps the tasks and also helps sleep if we are otherwise emotionally calm. The person who keeps his mind at work on a constructive problem while he is asleep does not have disturbed sleep if his emotions are stable and if life is faced with a smile.—Hygeia Magazine.

Supply Eastern Idols With Artificial Eyes

One of the queerest trades in this country is that of artificial eye maker. There is in New Oxford street, London, a firm which has been carried on by the same family for over 150 years, the present manager being the great-great-grandson of the founder.

Artificial eyes made by this firm are so wonderful in their naturalness that even in a photograph no difference can be detected. The artificial eye must be perfectly matched, the tiny veins all appearing in it. It is possible even to make the pupil enlarge and contract.

Some strange orders are received. Business is done with Africa and with eastern countries in the manufacture of eyes for idols. The eyes of a temple god must, of course, be of a very special kind.

The fierce, warlike gods need piercing, flashing eyes, whilst those of the gentler kind require eyes that are liquid pools of sympathy.—London Mail.

Billfish a Fighter

Of the men who set out from Boston, Gloucester and Portland to catch swordfish, perhaps six during the entire season are fortunate enough to land billfishes. The billfish is rated more belligerent than the swordfish and can be landed only at great risk, yet swordfishermen think it all kinds of good luck to catch one.

The billfish is one of the foremost of the round-sworded spearfishes. Ordinarily it is an inhabitant of southern waters, but occasionally it accompanies a school of swordfish as far north as Georges bank. It varies from 6 to 20 feet in length and from 100 to 1,000 pounds in weight. In New England it is called the "skillagelee."

When harpooned, it will make spectacular charges at its attackers.

Unannounced Tornado

Science has devised no way of predicting when or where a tornado will strike, or exactly what path it will travel once it starts. Weather bureau officials recognize certain conditions that are favorable for their formation. But the weather bureau does not attempt to predict tornadoes. Tornadoes are more numerous in the United States than most people realize. Many of those which pass over sparsely settled parts of the country are never reported; only those which do damage to cities or towns are brought to public attention. In the Middle West they are more numerous in May and June than at any other time of the year.

Lucky Marriage Months

The belief that June marriages are luckier than those of other months is a relic of Roman superstition and mythology. An old Roman proverb says, "Prosperity to the man and happiness to the maid when married in June." It was popularly supposed that the month of June was named in honor of Juno, whose festival was held on the first of that month. Juno, the wife of Jupiter, was the guardian of the female sex from birth to death, and also the patroness of happy marriages. Another month which comes in for its share of luck to married couples is February.

Rejoinder That Stung

Thomas Sparta, once bishop of Rochester, in England, later became chaplain to the witty and profligate duke of Buckingham, it is related in Brand's "Observations on Popular Antiquities." At his first dinner with the duke, his grace, observing a goose opposite his chaplain, remarked that he wondered why it generally happened that geese were placed near the clergy.

"I cannot tell the reason," Sprat said, "but I shall never see a goose again, but I shall think of your grace."

"Inspired" by Hasheesh?

It is generally supposed that the "Arabian Nights," and others of these strange weird Eastern tales were written under the influence of hasheesh, which lends such a marvelous brilliancy to the imagination.

Rules for Pharmacist Under "Bluff King Hal"

"A prominent pharmacist and physician of Henry VIII's reign named Bulleyn, who is said to have been a cousin of Anne Bolleyn, one of the king's numerous wives, laid down these rules for the practice of pharmacy," wrote Charles H. LaWall in "Four Thousand Years of Pharmacy":

"The apothecary must first serve God; foresee the end, be cleanly, and pity the poor. His place of dwelling and shop must be cleanly, to please the senses withal. His garden must be at hand with plenty of herbs, seeds, and roots. He must read Dioscorides. He must have his mortars, stills, pots filters, glasses, boxes, clean and sweat (correct). He must have two places in his shop, one most clean for physic and the base place for chirurgic stuff. He is neither to decrease nor diminish the physician's prescriptions. He is neither to buy nor sell rotten drugs. He must be able to open well a vein, for to help pleurisy. He is to meddle only in his own vocation, and to remember that his office is only to be the physician's cook."

Spider Captures Bird

An unusual incident is recorded from the Transvaal. "Passing a bush," says a correspondent, "I became aware of excited flutterings. On going to investigate I found a small bird hanging upside down, apparently in the air, between two branches. A nearer view revealed that its feet were firmly entangled in a very large spider's web. The spider was not to be seen. It had evidently retreated to a place of hiding. The captive was doing its utmost to escape, fluttering and twittering loudly. It appeared, however, to be getting more and more entangled, so I released it and let it go. Although they are not found here, bird eating spiders are well known in South America."

Pilgrims Visit Mecca

About 200,000 pilgrims from all the Mohammedan countries visit Meccca every year at the pilgrimage season, said Eidon Rutter before the Manchester (England) Geographical society. But if any but a Moslem approached within 20 miles of Mecca at any time he did so at the risk of his life. No unbeliever, as such, had been to Mecca in the last 1,800 years. In spite of the risk several Europeans, by first learning the Moslem ritual and customs, had managed to get into the city in disguise and to come safely out again. On the other hand, a considerable number of unbelievers appeared to have got into Mecca and never to have come out again.

He Travels Without Noise

Moose is the largest of our land mammals. His curious head with its large, odd nose, the broad, palmated antlers, and the pendant "bell" below the throat, all combine to make him seem like a story book animal. Because of his long legs he is taller than a horse, says Nature Magazine. Though large and heavy, he is able to travel almost noiselessly through his northern home in the thickets of alder, birch, tamarack, along the edges of slow-moving streams and shallow lakes. He is fond of water plants, leaf, steam and root.

Meaning of Horsepower

The term horsepower originated in the Eighteenth century when the mechanical force of expanding steam in engines was replacing the force of horses in hoisting and pumping in the British mines. One horsepower equals 33,000 pounds lifted one foot in one minute, or 550 pounds lifted one foot in one second.

"Distance" Almost Obsolete

It was Kossuth, we believe, who declared that "Watt with a steam engine has blotted the word 'distance' from the dictionary." What a lot of blasting the airplane is responsible for!

Washington Snap Shots

Editor by The Boone News Service

During its recess there are always calls upon the President to summon Congress in extra session. These requests come from interests concerning that they face a national emergency, from members of Congress with special purposes and from political friends and foes. The instinct of a President is to deny such appeals, and especially in recent years business has warmly approved of this attitude. Not until lately has any one devised a method of consulting Congress on a proposed move of national importance when Congress is in recess.

President Herbert Hoover has presented a carefully prepared and at the same time a bold plan for unified action to preserve the banks and restore confidence throughout the country. His plan calls both for action by the bankers themselves and for legislation by the Federal Congress. Today, with the concurrence in his proposals of bankers and congressional leaders, the prospect of translating the plan into action appears bright in the extreme.

The White House was the scene of intense activity as President Hoover received the leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives, together with the financial advisers of his own Administration, to consider the economic problem of the government. Probably at no time since the days immediately following the World War has the picturesque mansion on Pennsylvania Avenue witnessed more stirring moments than those attending the arrival of Mr. Hoover's bi-partisan conferees.

One of the most ironical spectacles that have been presented to the American people in recent months is that of the War Department supplying all of its commissaries with Soviet matches. Communism, under which factories have been confiscated by a clique of dictators and men are forced to work at starvation wages, is anathema to the people of this country. Yet the War Department was found patronizing Communist industry while American match factories and their employes remained idle.

As the time for the convening of the Seventy-third Congress approaches, the chances that the Democrats will elect the Speaker increase. The whole drift is in that direction. For example, various Republican organs and journalistic spokesmen are in striking agreement that the special election in Missouri, in which a Democrat achieved an overpowering victory, makes this reasonably certain. As things stand now, the House membership is divided as follows: Republicans, 214; Democrats, 214; Farmer-Labor, 1. The thing is really thrillingly close, with various exciting potentialities, explosive possibilities and a not unmeaning aspect.

One thing that has contributed to the spontaneous demand among many Democrats for Newton D. Baker for President, is the favor, for example, with which he is regarded among Democratic editors; the increasing feeling that the solution of this country's economic problems is going to depend upon an understanding of international relations. The boom for Owen D. Young sprang from a belief that he was peculiarly qualified by experience to deal with a world crisis. The Democrats who turned first to Young now turn to Baker. It will be recalled that Mr. Baker was the first public man of prominence in this country who had the foresight to point out the unwisdom of this country's war-debt collection policy.

In preferring Ex-Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, for Vice-President, Governor Roosevelt aims high. Mr. Baker is a very distinguished man. He is of presidential size himself. In fact, he is just now next to Mr. Roosevelt the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination. It would be interesting to know just how you approach a man who has reasonable hopes of being nominated for President and offer him second place on the ticket with you. It would be a situation of great delicacy. It is a safe bet that if the offer was made, Mr. Baker did not nter into a contract under his own seal and signature to take second place.

The death of Dwight W. Morrow, Senator from New Jersey, is a loss to the country and to the Senate. The country can ill spare his services. Although Mr. Morrow's entry into public life began only four years ago, he was widely recognized as one of America's foremost statesmen, wise in council and steadfast in purpose. His first important public service, as Ambassador to Mexico, was signally successful and resulted in the adjustment of differences with that country which had been eminent for years. His position as a diplomat was thereby established. When President Hoover was elected Chief Executive many friends of Mr. Morrow believed that he should be chosen Secretary of State. Later he was selected by President Hoover as one of America's delegates to the London Naval Conference, and finally he was elected a Senator of the United States.

Senator Borah of Idaho has not thrust aside Presidential aspirations, and may enter the primaries next year against President Hoover in the Western States as well as Illinois and Ohio, according to some of his Progressive colleagues who are predicting a political revolution which will induce him to become an active candidate. He is now regarded as n t receptive mood. This view is held by Senator Brookhart of Iowa, one of the insurgent Republicans, who says that political unrest is growing so rapidly west of the Mississippi River as to compel the Progressives to get behind the candidacy of a man to oppose Mr. Hoover.

When both of them were private citizens of Northampton Massachusetts—Calvin Coolidge, a young attorney, and the late Dr. Alfred Pearce Dennis, a professor at Smith College—they ran against each other for the Board of Aldermen. Coolidge won, after a close race. In 1924, when "Cal" was a nominee for President, his old Northampton crony let him know that he'd like to vote for Coolidge, even though Dennis was a Democrat. Calvin remonstrated, saying: "No, you'd better stay regular. I may need you later on." Dennis thereupon supported John W. Davis. In 1925 when President Coolidge had to fill a Democratic vacancy on the United States Tariff Commission, he appointed Dennis.

Morning Stars

This popular and poetic name "morning star" is given to the planets Jupiter, Mars, Saturn, and Venus, when one of them rises shortly before the sun and is a conspicuous object in the sky before dawn.

Band Conductor's Qualities

A conductor of a band or orchestra must be thoroughly grounded in the rudiments of music, history of music, instrumentation, composition, counterpoint, harmony and the ranges of different instruments, plus a great deal of practical experience in band and orchestral work.

Not Subject to Debate

Under ordinary parliamentary rules, these motions are not debatable: 1, to fix the time to which to adjourn; 2, to adjourn; 3, to take a recess; 4, to raise a question of privilege; 5, to call for the regular order; 6, to table; 7, the previous question; 8, to extend the limits of debate.

MUFFINS

Perfect come under the heading of quick breads. Such breads are so named because they are baked quickly and are not allowed to rise. This is quite the opposite to yeast breads.

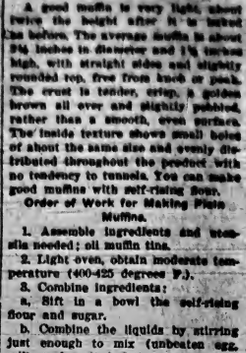
Muffins can be easily made for breakfast if one uses self-rising flour. It is the test of a good cook to make a good muffin. You may say, "What are the characteristics of a good muffin?"

A good muffin is very light, about twice the height after it is baked as before. The average muffin is about 2¼ inches in diameter and 1¾ inches high, with straight sides and slightly rounded top, free from hard or peak. The crust is tender, crisp, a golden brown all over and slightly pebbled, rather than a smooth, even surface. The inside texture shows small holes of about the same size and evenly distributed throughout the product with no tendency to tunnels. You can make good muffins with self-rising flour.

Order of Work for Making Plain Muffins.

1. Assemble ingredients and utensils needed; oil muffin tins.

2. Light oven, obtain moderate temperature (400-425 degrees F.).



3. Combine ingredients:

a. Sift in a bowl the self-rising flour and sugar.

b. Combine the liquids by stirring just enough to mix (unbeaten egg, milk and melted fat).

c. Pour the liquid at one time into the dry ingredients.

d. Stir as fast as possible until the dry ingredients are just dampened well (takes 10-20 seconds) then give four or five strokes. Should lumps be formed, leave them.

Taking Sweet Muffins Out of the Oven. Muffins Can Be Had Frequently for Breakfast if Self-Rising Soft-Wheat Flour is Used.

e. Dip with a spoon and fill tins ⅔ full. Do not stir batter while filling tins.

4. Bake in a moderate oven (400 degrees F.) for about twenty minutes.

5. When muffins shrink from edge of tins and do not leave a dent when pressed with the fingers, they are done and should be removed from tins and served at once.

Here is the master recipe for muffins:

2 cups flour	4 tbsp. melted shortening
2 eggs	2 tbsp. sugar
1 cup milk

Sift the flour, add eggs, milk, melted and cooled shortening to make a stiff batter; mix all together well. Half fill greased muffin tins and bake in moderate oven (400 degrees F.) 18 to 20 minutes.

This recipe makes 14 muffins.

You can take this master recipe and make many variations such as blueberry, ginger, date, poppy seed, chocolate, coconut, pecan, potato and rice muffins.

Cumbersome "Change"

No paper money circulates in Tibet. Change is frequently made by cutting silver coins into two pieces.

Goose Feathers

The best goose feathers are procured from the live bird in the spring, about six birds of average size furnishing one pound of feathers.

Hunter's Paradise

Of all European countries Bulgaria is most richly stocked with game, partly because little hunting was done under Turkish rule, and partly because the mountains afford natural sanctuaries for wild life.

American Triumph

Chrysanthemums, originally Japanese, have been so improved in America in recent years, that Japanese growers now obtain the latest varieties from this country.

One-Twentieth Ounce

The pennyweight was originally the weight of the old Anglo-Norman silver penny, 22½ grains. It is now reckoned in apothecaries' weight and in jewelers' weight at 24 grains or 1-20 of a troy ounce.

Waterproof

If you want the flower pots to be waterproof, dip the bottoms in melted paraffin. This will close the pores of the pots and prevent any moisture from staining the woodwork on which the pots may rest.

Whale Oil Uses

Originally the principal uses of whale oil were for soap making and the manufacture of lubricants, but improvements in refining processes have resulted in the elimination of the fishy taste, so that it is widely used throughout European countries, especially in the manufacture of lard substitutes, and the production of such edible fats as margarine.

Early Peace Societies

The first peace society of the world was founded by David Low Dodge of the United States, 1815. The Massachusetts Peace society was founded the same year and the American Peace society by William Ladd in 1828.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous. my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Deaths

ROBERT CHURCHILL ADAMS

In memory of Robert Churchill Adams, who died September 28th, 1931, age seven years 10 months and 15 days.

Baby darling, you have left us,
How we bear the pain and sorrow
God alone does only know.
Heaven now has got our treasure
Earth the lonely casket keeps.
But the sun will always linger
Where our darling Ruby sleeps.

Short was your life, sharp was your pain,
Great was our loss, much was your gain.
When called to your side as there you lay,
To say farewell, but you murmur not,
Though far away, you are not forgot,
Great is the loss which we sustain
We trust in Heaven to meet again.

Greatly missed
Mother and Father

C. E. STEPHENS

C. E. Stephens was born Dec. 29, 1860, was the son of Joe and Elsie Stephens. He was married Dec. 29, 1897, to Miss Mamie Winston.

Two children were born to this union—Eugene, of California, and Roberta, who survive him, also his wife, one brother William Stephens and three sisters Mrs. Nora Souther, Mrs. Doll Allen and Mrs. Wm. Graves, also one grandson, several nieces and friends who mourn his departure.

He has been a great sufferer for sixteen months and passed away October 9th, 1931.

He was a devoted husband and father, a true neighbor and friend.

He was a man of sterling character, upright and honorable in all his dealings with his fellowman.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the residence in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

Rev. Sam Allen, pastor of the Walton Christian church, who was a great favorite of Mr. Stephens, spoke beautiful and comforting words to those who are so deeply bereaved.

While Mr. Stephens had not united with any church, yet had testified of his acceptance of Christ and his body was placed in the Petersburg cemetery to await the Resurrection morn.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of C. E. Stephens desire to express their appreciation and thanks to the relatives and friends for the many kindnesses shown them during his illness and death.

Also to Revs. Allen and Brown, who conducted the services, and to those who sang so sweetly.

Also for the beautiful floral offerings, and to Dr. Nunnelley for medical services and Mr. W. A. Bullock for the splendid way in which he conducted the funeral.

MRS. ABBIE MAE BIRD

Mrs. Abbie Mae Bird, widow of T. T. Bird, passed away Saturday night at her home 321 Commonwealth Ave., Erlanger, Ky., after several months illness, at the age of 66 years.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. S. L. Powers, of Detroit, Michigan; Mrs. Anna Mae Hensley, Erlanger, and Arthur Bird, Cincinnati, besides four brothers and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Tallaferro Funeral Home, by the Rev. Runyan, pastor of the Latonia Christian church assisted by Rev. McChord of the Erlanger Christian church, after which she was laid to rest by the side of her husband in Independence cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

Words fail to express our heartfelt thanks to everyone who came to our rescue and so herocically fought the great flames against heat and wind, that consumed our garage to save our home on October 7th. May Gods protecting eye and arm be ever over and around you as it was each of us, on that day.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Green,
Burlington, Ky.

Perpetuated Her Name

The word pamphlet owes its name to Pamphila, a Greek lady who left behind her a kind of commonplace book containing notes.

Youthful Genius

Pope wrote many of his published poems by the time he was sixteen; at twenty, his "Essay on Criticism," and at twenty-five, his great work—the "Translation of the Iliad."

Colors Denote Pure Blood

COUNTIES CHOSEN WELL IN DAVIES FOR RELIEF WORKERS

Two thousand needy families of Eastern Kentucky miners have been provided with instructions for the home salvaging of surplus fruits and vegetables, and 10 special food preservation demonstrations, available to 1,000 of these families, have been arranged, in the hope of effecting some measure of the needed winter relief indicated by a survey being made by the University of Kentucky, relative to unemployment in industrial centers.

This work is in connection with a special gardening and food preservation service arranged by the College of Agriculture for industrial communities where partial or total unemployment threatens the public with serious problems of feeding needy families. Officials of many industrial concerns, who already are encouraging and assisting their employees in substance gardening, are cooperating with the College in availing their employes' families of this service, and many other concerns are interested in initiating such a program, in the hope that surplus fruits and vegetables and spare time, both of which otherwise would go to waste, may thus be utilized by families unable to buy such foods, in addition to clothing and other living expenses.

This special service of the College of Agriculture includes assistance to such concerns or other local interests in locating and securing suitable garden seeds, fertilizers, etc., in personal visits, wherever discussions, contests, exhibits, etc., are desirable and practicable; and in furnishing instruction sheets for distribution to participating familes. Such sheets are being prepared in seasonal sequence, outlining each step in the proper preparation and fertilization of the soil, selection of vegetable varieties, planting distances, depths, cultivation, insect and disease control, preservation and storage. This service is rendered without charge.

The preservation of surplus vegtables and fruits this fall, and arrangements for gardens for next year, are important parts of the immediate program of work. The home canning, drying, evaporating, salting and storage of surplus fruits and vegetables are being stressed. To this end, concise service sheets have been prepared containing instructions for canning and for preservation by methods not requiring exepnsive containers. These service sheets are being sent, in bulk, to such industrial concerns or other local agencies as request a definite number and are willing to be responsible for their prompt distribution to proper families.

In order to make the use of these service sheets effective, the College is asking local leaders who request them, to employ some means of creating interest. In cooperation with leaders in Letcher, Johnson and Perry counties, the College of Agriculture has arranged to send special agents to these counties to conduct canning and drying demonstrations in coal mining communities, with a view to activating effective use of the specific instruction with which these families have been provided.

Apples, pears, greens, pumpkins and other products will be available at low cost for canning, evaporating etc., until late fall. Many farmers are even willing to donate surplus fruit and vegetables to unthe gathering and transportation, realizing that much relief may thus be effected without adversely affecting the demand of the buying for such products.

32 Counties Endorse 1931 Pool And 1932 Cut-Out Of Tobacco

FORTY-SIX COUNTIES OF FOUR STATES ATTEND MASS MEETING OF GROWERS AT LEXINGTON—BOONE COUNTY MEETING AGAIN NEXT SATURDAY

At a meeting of burley tobacco growers held at Lexington last Saturday the majority of sentiment of the growers from out in the state seemed to favor pooling the 1931 crop and cutting out the 1932 crop.

There were 46 counties of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee represented at the meeting and 32 of these counties voted unqualifiedly in favor of such a movement. Others of the counties, however, qualified their votes, stating that they might favor a cut-out next year if bordering states outside of Kentucky also would join wholeheartedly in the cut-out. Approximately 1,000 growers were at the meeting, which was held in the livestock pavilion at the University of Kentucky. The meeting had been called by John C. Robinson, of Danville, president of the Kentucky Farm Bureau.

After reports from the various counties were heard a committee, with Mr. Robinson as ex-officio chairman, and consisting of eighteen members, was appointed to consider some definite form of action and to report at a second meeting to be held at the University on October 28th.

Only accredited delegates will attend the meeting on October 28th, said delegates to be selected at county mass meetings on Saturday October 24th, in each of the counties.

The committee named to draft plans for the sale of the crop is composed of Catesby Spears, Paris; Charles Land, Lexington; Stanley Prewitt, Winchester; Martin Light, Falmouth; Dawson Chambers, of Walton; Percy Colvin, Carrollton; D. L. Carlis, Brooksville; Walter Sharp, Sharpsburg; Ben Allen Thomas, Shelbyville; L. L. Wells, Cave City; J. E. Robinson, Lancaster; W. A. Asbuckle, Richmond; G. A. Brooks, Mayslick; Roger Long, Gallatin, Tennessee; Walter Bernard, Greenville, Tenn.; Ben Scranton, Rising Sun, Indiana; Geo. Roth Adams County, Ohio; N. W. Nelson, Clermont County, Ohio.

J. C. Layne, of this county, answered the roll call and said that the growers of Boone favored a 1931 pool and a 1932 cut-out.

While a majority of the counties represented at the meeting favored a like movement, yet several representatives of other counties spoke vehemently against it, giving it as their opinion that such a step would be disastrous to Kentucky as a tobacco growing state.

Sam B. Sleet, who was named chairman of the Boone county delegation at a former meeting has issued the following call for a second meeting to be held at Burlington next Saturday afternoon, October 24th, for the purpose of reaching a definite understanding:

There will be a meeting of tobacco Growers on Saturday October 24, 1931, at 1 p. m., at Burlington, Ky., to hear the report of delegates who attended meting at Lexington October 17th, 1931 and to select deleley belt in Lexington October 28th, gates to meet delegates from Ber- 1931, to formulate plans to handle 1931 crop of Burley. We would like a large attendance of growers from all parts of the county for it is the desire that the exact expression of the growers of Boone county be expressed at this meeting so that the correct report may be made at the meeting to be held at Lexington October 28th.

Deaths

SOPHIA TERRILL ESTES

Sophia Terrill Estes, daughter of Jeremiah and Edith Estes, was born in Boone County, Ky., Jan. 1, 1874. She was united in marriage to William H. Eggleston March 4th, 1896. To this union was born 10 children, eight of whom are living.

She united with the Sand Run Baptist church Sept., 1889, and was a faithful member as long as she lived.

She departed this life Sept., 23rd, 1931, aged 57 years, 8 months and 23 days. She leaves to mourn her death her husband, five sons, three daughters, three sisters, four brothers, one daughter-in-law, 4 grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. Funeral was held at Sand Run Baptist church conducted by Rev. Avery, pastor. The remains was laid to rest in the nearby cemetery. Funeral arrangements were efficiently conducted by W. A. Bullock.

The passing of this noble, christian woman points the way to the sacrifice on the Cross of Him who said "Follow me." She has made this world better for having lived in it. The bright rays of sunshine of her life and the leadership of her christian influence have doubtless found their way—even perhaps to the far East and we as neighbors and friends are glad of her useful life—lovable—tho briefly spent among us. The grand finale of her life is but a promise redeemed.

The vacancy she left is but a bright spot in this earthly Garden of Life, where we may pause awhile, reflect, and enjoy the beauty as the years go by. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the family and the memory of her beautiful character remains with us.

Shall Kentucky Stagnate For Four Years?

A substantial Democratic majority in both House and Senate is assured. Democratic hold-over Senators, Democratic candidates for Representatives who are without opposition, or of whose election there is absolutely no doubt, make the complexion of the next General Assembly certainly Democratic.

Shall the State Legislature work at cross purposes with a Republican Governor, each balked by the other? Or shall the chosen representatives of the people, working with a Governor of their political faith, formulate a program of accomplishment and constructive legislation that is possible only through mutual co-operation of the legislative and executive branches of the State government?

Why consider the matter for a moment? Surely we do not want a repetition of the last four years under Flem D. Sampson. A vote for the Democratic ticket is a vote for the advancement of Kentucky.

FISH FRY

GIVEN AT HOME OF W. H. ROUSE BY CITIZENS ALONG CAMP ERNST ROAD—FISCAL COURT AND THOSE WHO DONATED FUNDS ARE INVITED GUESTS

A most enjoyable noon hour was spent at the home of W. H. Rouse, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, last Wednesday, when a fish fry was givn by the citizens of that community for those who donated toward the building of the road thru that section, now known as Camp Ernst road. The members of the Boone County Fiscal Court also were guests.

Ladies of the community assembled and assisted in the frying of the fish and the preparation of the rest of the dinner, which was done to a queen's taste. The fish were purchased at Constance and were frsh from the river.

About fifty people were present at the dinner and fish fry, some [illegible] stopping in [illegible] appreciation, as Dr. Yelton and Geo. Miller had not finished when we left.

The affair was given on exactly the right day to make all present appreciate the benefits of the new road, as it rained in torrents and its a certainty that none would have been able to reach Mr. Rouse's home over the road as it once was.

The citizens of the community are to be heartily commended for their enterprise, generosity and hospitality, especially Mr. and Mrs. Rouse, who freely opened their home for the occasion.

SWAN SONG

IS SUNG ON BASE BALL SEASON AT BELLEVIEW SATURDAY—COLORLESS CONTEST TAKEN BY BELLEVIEW IN FRIGID WEATHER

Petersburg and Belleview sang the "swan song" on Boone county base ball for the current season when they staggered through nine innings with a foot ball wind sweeping the cheerless field last Saturday afternoon.

The Belleview team was the victor, but it was a hollow victory. In fact the feat was not "frantically cheered" even by the most loyal home fans. The score was 4-2, which might indicate a hotly contested and well played game. But such was not the case, in fact the contest became farcical at times.

Boehler did not care to unlimber his ageing wing and merely tossed [illegible] although [illegible] the best crop caught a [illegible] some of the wierdest slants they ever had seen when he took a notion to turn it loose.

The cold wind did not bother the fielding of Cox, Petersburg left gardener, who turned in some sparkling catches. Les Ryle, Belleview slugger, made the longest drive of the day when he caught one of Boehler's "cripples" on the nose and parked it on the knoll in deep left for three bases. Bradburn, Petersburg short stop, made three of the bingles off Sprague.

DIES AT 42½ YEARS

"OLD TINY"

"FINAL SUMMONS"

FROM "HORSE HEAVEN" IS ANSWERED BY "TINY" AT ADVANCED AGE OF 42½ YEARS—HAS BEEN IN TOLIN FAMILY SINCE HER YOUTH

The oldest horse in Northern Kentucky has passed away. After forty-two and one-half years, the latter of which were spent in ease and comfort in a private pasture in Burlington, "Tiny" shuffled off last Wednesday afternoon.

Tiny was the property of Senator S. W. Tolin, who has been her proud owner since she was a young and active animal, when she came into the "Tolin family" as the family driving mare. She served faithfully until the advent of the automobile when her usefulness began to wane. However, she saw many years of fairly active life even after that.

But for the past ten years at least Tiny has not felt the touch of leather. During all of that time she has received the most careful and tender treatment at the hands of her devoted master, who was sorely grieved at her death.

What has become of the old fashioned Russet apple tree? It is indeed rare today. One day last week Solomon Long brought to this office an apple, which he had picked from a tree near his boyhood home in Wolfe county. The tree is 99 years old, according to Mr. Long, and he said that he had picked fruit from its branches when a small boy 88 years ago. Mr. Long just had returned from a very pleasant visit with relatives and old friends in that section of the Kentucky mountains.

[illegible] was [illegible] ber 17th. This [illegible] ing game and [illegible] teams seemed [illegible] it could have been [illegible] ball game until the last of the [illegible] inning, Petersburg won by a score of 2 to 1.

H. Huey and L. Deck, battery for Petersburg, J. Aylor and McClasson for Hebron, working effectively with good support played a real ball game. It was said to be the best of the season.

Each team made one run during the first part of the game then the score remained tied until the last half of the 9th inning, when with H. Deck on first Boone Ryle, the veteran who hits just when its needed most, connected for a long drive to left field, which was slightly misjudged by Hazel Walton and sent H. Deck scampering over the plate for the winning run. Just Just maybe you think this wasn't a happy hour for the Petersburg team and rooters.

Petersburg made two runs 7 hits, Mr. Huey being credited with nine strike outs; Hebron made 1 run, 5 hits and Mr. J. Aylor being credited with 8 strike outs.

The fifth and deciding game will be played at Hebron Saturday October 24th if the weather permits.

Why not all the other S. S. teams also county teams support this game as it will probably be the last game of the season.

A GREAT MAN PASSES

Four years ago, when President Coolidge appointed Dwight W. Morrow Ambassador to Mexico, his name was all but unknown to the people of the United States. He had been a classmate of Mr. Coolidge's in Amherst College, had become a partner in the great international banking house of J. P. Morgan and Company, and had served as one of the American government's financial advisers during the war. But so quietly and modestly had he done his work that very few people outside of the limited circle of his personal acquaintances had ever heard of him.

Evrybody wondered what this quiet little man could do to straighten out the extremely strained relations between this country and our neighbor to the south. It did not take long to find out. This country and the Mexicans soon learned that Dwight Morrow had a mind which went directly to the heart of things, and a personality which charmed everyone with whom he came in contact. In a surprisingly short space of time he had established the relations between the United States and Mexico upon a more friendly basis than they had been for nearly a hundred years. He was chiefly responsible for Lindbergh's good-will flight to Mexico, which culminated in the young airman's romantic courtship of the Ambassador's daughter, and their subsequent marriage.

Mr. Morrow's election as U. S. Senator from New Jersey was regarded by political leaders as a step toward the White House. From the moment of his election President Hoover leaned upon him heavily for advice and council in international finance. He was one of the few men in American public life of whom it can be truthfully said that he was universally beloved and respected. In his all too brief public career he had made himself a national figure of the first importance. His death is a loss to the whole world.

4-H CLUB MEMBERS ATTEND NATIONAL DAIRY EXPOSITION

Creameries and milk companies sent eight Kentucky 4-H Club boys and girls to the National Dairy Exposition in St. Louis, as a reward for their interest in good dairy farming. Trips were offered to a club member owning the highest producing cow for the period April 1 to October 1, in each of eight counties.

The winners were Thomas Culton, Bath county; Margaret Whaley, Fleming county; Hume W. Wilson, Madison county; Wilbur Harris, Boone county; C. J. Clausen, Jefferson county; Edgar Moseley, Logan county.

Companies providing trips were French Bros.-Bauer, Beatrice Merchants and Tri-State creamery companies of Cincinnati, and D. H. Ewing's Sons, Gray-Von Allmen Sanitary Milk Co., the Sugar Creek Creamery Co., and Armour & Co., of Louisville.

The Simpson county dairy cattle judging team, trained by County Agent H. W. Whittenburg, represented Kentucky in the National Dairy Exposition 4-H club judging contest. The team was composed of James Hammond, Gilbert Durham, William Dinwiddie and Miss Burnette Johnson.

A 4-H club dairy demonstration team sent to St. Louis was composed of Sam Beckley and Horace Allen of Shelby county, trained by County Agents J. W. Holland and H. R. Jackson.

The state champion poultry demonstration team also attended the National Dairy Exposition. It was composed of David May and Joe Wheeler Jarvis of Floyd county, trained by County Agent S. L. Isbell.

Graves and Calloway county 4-H club members exhibited dairy cattle at the national show.

RECOMMEND USE OF CABBAGE IN SALADS

During the winter months it is often difficult to find a variety of raw vegetables to serve. Cabbage is recommended by the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, because it is usually easily secured and can be served in a variety of ways.

Following are combinations for salads:

Cabbage, apple, celery and nuts (hickory, pecans or walnuts).

Cabbage, grated carrot and chopped green pepper.

Cabbage, grated carrot, shredded cocoanut and pineapple.

Cabbage, raisins and celery seed.

Cabbage, white grapes, pineapple and marshmallows.

Cabbage, tomato and cucumber.

A quick cream dressing made as follows is good to use with cabbage combinations: Use half of a cup of sweet or sour cream, a tablespoon of sugar, a half of a teaspoon of salt, 3 tablespoons of vinegar and a half of a teaspoon of celery seed. Add sugar, salt and celery seed to the cream and slowly add vinegar, beating constantly.

Another dressing suitable for the same use is bacon dressing, made as follows: Use 6 slices of bacon, a tablespoon of sugar, half of a teaspoon of salt, a small onion chopped fine, and a fourth of a sup of vinegar. Fry the bacon until crisp, cut into fine pieces, add the vinegar, sugar and salt, and remove from the fire immediately. Pour this over the cabbage to which has been added onion chopped fine. This amount of dressing is enough for four cups of cabbage.

FALL IDEAL TIME TO SET TREES AND SHRUBS

A large variety of trees and shrubs grow well in Kentucky, which enables home owners to have large and beautiful plantings. N. R. Elliott, landscape architect at the College of Agriculture, considers fall an ideal planting time. The root system becomes established during the winter and the plant is ready to grow as soon as spring opens. Plants bought in the fall are usually the best ones produced that year.

November is the best planting month in most sections of the state. Holes can be dug at any time and allowed to catch the fall rains. Care should be taken not to set plants too deep. They should stand with the dirt about two inches higher on the stem than when they were removed. Water is especially important the first growing season.

Elliott county farmers recently purchased several purebred bulls and a large number of purebred rams. Ninety-seven per cent of the bulls in the county are purebred.

Approximately 550,000 pounds of Korean lespedeza seed were produced in Christian county this year.

The use of lime and phosphate fertilizers increased the corn yield by 10 to 12 bushels to the acre in Estill county, where there is a large crop.

Fine Fruit Candies

If there anyone anywhere who doesn't prick up his ears at the words homemade candies, especially when they are made from pure sweet fruit? Children love them, because they are so good, mothers approve of them because they are wholesome. As for fathers—they like them because it is the best candy they've tasted since the old maple sugar days down on the farm.

Peach Jelly Cubes: Press an eight-ounce can of peaches through a sieve, making a purée. Add one-half cup pectin syrup (made according to directions on bottle), one-half cup sugar, one-half cup corn syrup, and one tablespoon lemon juice. Boil until thermometer registers 222 degrees. Pour into greased pans so that mixture is about one-half inch thick, and let cool. Let stand over night in a cold place. Cut in cubes and roll in powdered sugar. May also be dipped in chocolate or in melted fondant.

This Is Divine

Pineapple Divinity: Cook one-half cup shredded pineapple and three tablespoons sugar to a thick jam, 236 degrees. Mix two cups sugar, one-half cup water, and one-eighth teaspoon cream of tartar, and boil to 260 degrees. Just before this temperature is attained, add the pineapple jam, continuing the boiling to the 260-degree point. Beat one egg-white stiff, then add hot syrup very slowly, stirring constantly, and beating till stiff and will hold its shape. Add one-fourth cup chopped maraschino cherries, and pour into buttered pans.

Motorists Warned to Prepare Now for Winter Freezes

AVERAGE DATE OF FIRST FREEZING WEATHER IN THE AUTUMN

Compiled from tables of U.S. Weather Bureau covering a long period of years

Motorists will prevent trouble and expense later if they prepare now for winter driving. Statistics compiled by the United States Weather Bureau, based on records reaching over a long period of years, show that old man winter is just around the corner.

The above map, compiled by the American Automobile Association, shows the approximate date on which freezing weather can be expected in the various states.

The most important step in preparing the car for winter is a thorough overhauling, cleaning, and tightening of the cooling system before the anti-freeze solution is put in. It is a great mistake, automotive engineers point out, merely to flush the cooling system and put in anti-freeze solutions without giving the system a thorough overhauling. Few motorists have the time, knowledge or equipment to do an adequate job. The safest procedure is to have the work done at a service station. The small expense involved will be more than compensated for by the resulting savings in repair bills, not to mention the pleasure of trouble-free performance.

There are many good anti freeze solutions on the market from which the motorist can choose. However, a safe guide in selecting this important protection for his motor is set forth by the United States Bureau of Standards in nine points constituting the perfect anti-freeze. They are: Whatever compound is used should give complete protection; it should not boil off; it must not do any damage to the cooling system; it should not heat up the motor; it should not affect the paint or varnish of the car; it should be odorless; it should be non-inflammable; it should not become viscous at low temperatures nor decompose at high temperatures; it should never deteriorate.

Sunday School Lesson

PAUL IN CORINTH

Acts 18:1-11; I Corinthians 15

Rev. Samuel D. Price, B. D.

Many items of fascinating interest are omitted in the lesson text. The careful student will, however, become thoroughly familiar with all the in-between portions. Right now we are passing over the visit of Paul to Athens, and especially that great address on Mars Hill, when Paul told those who worshipped many gods about the one true God.

Corinth came next, and it must have required the maximum of faith to think that any impact could be made by a few outsiders upon such a profligate city. That isthmian city was the play-ground for the Romans who did not find wickedness enough in their own town. But Paul was God's man and was not afraid to settle down for work in any place that his Lord directed.

Again, as speaker in the local synagogue, there was opportunity of declaring that Christ was the long-expected Messiah. Both Jews and Greeks were attentive listeners. When Silas and Timothy arrived from Macedonia a school was set up in the home of Titus Justus, and there were many converts. Cripus, ruler of the synagogue, was also a believer. All confessed their faith in the sacrament of baptism, which is still the approved way of giving personal testimony to the new birth in Jesus Christ.

Repeatedly visions came to Paul in times of special need. Strength came in Corinth for further service by one of these nocturnal messages in which the Lord said: "Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to harm thee: for I have much people in this city. "Thus encouraged the ministry was continued in Corinth for a year and six months. Two wonderful letters were written to the Christians there and one of the choicest passages to memorize is I Corinthians 13, the blessed love chapter.

GENERAL HENRY LAWRENCE BRANDS AS FALSE THE HARRISON STATEMENT

Mayor Harrison, in his Middlesboro speech October 14th, made the following statement:

"My opponent has led his hearers to believe that the State Capitol at Frankfort was built under a Democratic administration without additional taxation to the regular revenues. The truth of the matter is that the United States Government supplied the money with which the structure was built, by payment of an old war claim in the State held against the Government."

Referring to the above charge, General Henry Lawrence, of Cadiz, Kentucky, who was a member of the State Legislature from 1901 to 1906, Speaker of the House in 1906, and Adjutant General until the end of Governor J. C. W. Beckham's term of office, issued the following statement Thursday:

"The facts are these: Mr. Beckham took office in February, 1900. Soon thereafter he employed C. C. Calhoun to take up the collection of an old war debt amounting in round numbers of $800,000.00. The bonded debt was not then due, but due to favorable business arrangements Governor Beckham and his associates on the Sinking Fund Commission paid off the bonded indebtedness of a million dollars and applied the remaining quarter of a million dollars on the floating debt of $800,000.00.

"The building of the capitol was not started until 1906, three years after the war claim had been collected and applied on an old debt the state had inherited from former administrations. Not a cent of this old war claim was used in the construction of the state capiol. The capitol was built out of current revenues and without a cnt's increase in taxes."

Kenton county peach growers used newspaper advertising to help market their peaches locally. As a result they received 75 to 90 cents a bushel when peaches were selling for much less in Cincinnati. Allen county growers sold 5,000 bushels of peaches, three-fourths of them being purchased by local people.

Thousands of bushels of apples were left on the ground in McCracken county for want of a market. The crop was the largest in the history of the county. Henderson county growers have been offered 7½ cents a bushel for apples for vinegar making. The best apples are being stored.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

TRY, AND BE CONVINCED

I am not prone to giving recipes in my newspaper work. Rarely do I actually prescribe in front of your physician. But, here is a recipe for a physical exercise that should have free publicity, because of its genuine worth in practice.

I am not the originator of this sort of self-treatment. I do not know who is. And the advice herein is not copyrighted—it's yours for the using.

I believe the "laziest" muscles of the human body are those of the abdomen and colon. Especially so in cases of corpulency, very common in middle-aged and beyond—those "bay windows," if you get what I mean. Those unwelcome hammocks, hanging-baskets which make us look and feel ponderous, as if we were carrying dead weight, too much ballast for the ship; not actual disease—just laziness in bellists.

Try it when in bed. On retiring and on awakening in morning. Lie flat on back. Place a hand on the abdomen. See how high you can lift the hand with the abdominal mucles. Up—down,—up, down, 12 times; that's all for each treatment. Continue a month, night and morning, in bed. The lungs need not enter into this exercise.

You will note beneficial results in constipation and in the increased activity of these sagging muscles, which leads to a better feeling all over; your waist-band will actually become too loose in due time—if you keep up your treatment faithfully. You get a nice degree of voluntary control of muscles in this old hanging-basket of yours that may have caused you backaches in the past from only moderate use. Learn the benefits of "belly-breathing."

The Way of Life

RESERVE ELIMINATE

Broadly speaking, mottoes have done me little good.

Being exhorted to "do it now" has not conquered a natural instinct to procrastination. "Tackle the hard things first" has not increased my courage; nor has "a penny saved is a penny earned" spurred me to thrift.

All of these wise saws, and others, I would trade for the two words on which a shrewd old merchant told me he had built his store:

Almost anywhere you look in business you may see the need for those two words.

A certain manufacturer, whose products already covered the field, announced his intention of still another item to the line. His banker was skeptical. "What excuse is there for it?" he demanded. "Does it meet any real need? Has it any special qualities that make it deserve to succeed?"

The manufacturer replied rather testily that he could not see what deserving had to do with it. There was an opportunity to steal more business from a competitor, and he proposed to do so.

The banker protested. "That seems a poor foundation on which to build," he said. He was right. After an expensive and unsuccessful campaign the new product was abandoned.

Another company, whose volume had grown rapidly during the months of prosperity, came into dull times and began to examine its expenses. It discovered that nearly half its overhead could be cut without reducing profits. While things were rolling it had entirely neglected elimination.

The words apply with equal force to individual lives. How many useless habits we loaded up with during the ten years previous to 1929! How we frittered away our time and diluted our energies! Apparently hard times are necessary once in a while to compel us to cut.

As for the word deserve, who has not experienced the increased sense of power which comes when one knows in his heart that his plans and purposes are wholly right?

Under the spell of such conviction we astonish ourselves by an unexpected capacity. We feel in tune with infinite forces. We deserve, and the stars in their courses seem to be fighting on our side.

AGRICULTURAL WORKERS IN ANNUAL CONFERENCE

County farm agents, county home demonstration agents and other agricultural extension workers in Kentucky will hold their annual conference and short course at the Experiment Station Oct. 27-31. Among the speakers will be Dr. C. B. Smith and Geo. E. Farrell of the United States Department of Agriculture; B. B. Derrick of the Federal Farm Board; Miss Doris Hinman of New York, and President Frank L. McVey and Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the University of Kentucky.

Seventy purebred rams have been placed on Marion county farms this year and a large number of farmers are improving their flocks.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of W-H-A-S the week of October 26. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

October 26—The home demonstration agent brings beauty to the home, Miss Ida Hagman.

Four-H dairy shows in 1931, G. J. McKenney.

October 27—The home demonstration agent and health, Miss Florence Imlay.

Farm Fire Prevention, Mr. E. G. Welch.

October 28—Vegetable St orage, John S. Gardner.

Sun-up in the mountains Earl Mayhew.

October 29—Vegetable Storage, John S. Gardner.

Lunch at the school cafeteria, Miss Maye Hoover.

October 30—What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

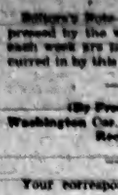
Henry Snyder of Oldham county cut his alfalfa four times, some of the last cutting being 33 inches tall.

Tile drainage enabled F. P. Trammel, a McCreary county farmer, to grow 50 bushels of corn to the acre.

Magoffin county reports excellent crops of tobacco, corn and surghum.

The Madison county tobacco crop is said to be the best in the history of the county, and probably as good as any grown in the burley district.

Union county farmers report a return of 90 cents to $1.30 a bushel from wheat fed to hogs, when the local wheat price was 30 cents per bushel.



The raspberry growers' association at Parksville in Boyle county sold $5,000 worth of fruit this year, while independent growers in the region sold about $1,200 worth. The association has 44 members. The acreage is being enlarged to where a normal crop would produce 2,000 crates next year. The average crate price this year was $2.59, compared with $6 six years ago.

Wheat averaged 22 bushels in Rockcastle county this year, compared with an average for several years of only 7 bushels. J. M. Wallace, in the Ottawa community, grew 38 bushels to the acre on land that had been growing clover and alfalfa and treated with lime and phosphate. Most farmers will use their wheat for food and feed. The cash price is about 50 cents a bushel.

Holmes Discusses Prohibition, The Nation's Biggest Problem

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co Recorder

Your correspondent has heretofore scrupulously refrained from commenting on the subject of national prohibition. There are consistently conscientious and ardent believers in the efficacy and success of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law. There are anti-prohibitionists so fanatically "wet" that they would restore all of the unspeakable conditions of pre-prohibition days. In between these extremes there is a long chain of adherents to a wide range of so-called "remedies," all the way from moderate modifications to those who would restore control or total banning of the liquor traffic to the States individually.

Readers of this column doubtless include many of each of the various groups making up the chain. Prohibition, therefore, is a dangerous subject for a writer, just as it is, as a rule, for the editor of any newspaper of general circulation.

In one of his famous fables, old Father Aesop tells us about the miller and his son who were taking their ass to market. As they walk beside the ass a young girl jeered at them trudging along on foot when they might ride. The old man told his son to get on the ass's back, but he was no sooner up than they met a group of old men and one called out, "There, that shows how little respect is shown to old age nowadays. That lazy son rides while his father walks."

So the father made his son dismount and got on himself. Then they met a woman who said it was a shame to make that boy walk, so the miller took his son up behind him. Near the market a butcher called out, "Say, old man, is that your own ass? I guess not or you wouldn't load him like that—you are better able to carry him."

"Anything to please," agreed the miller, and they both got off, tied the ass's hind legs and his front legs, put a pole through and tried to carry him on their shoulders. This gave rise to such vociferous hilarity that the ass, not looking the noise or the situation, broke the cords that bound him and tumbled off the pole into the river below.

The old man turned sadly home, convinced that by trying to please everybody he had pleased nobody, and lost his ass in the bargain.

The moral is two-fold. One is that if you have no judgment of your own, you don't gain much by the advice of others; the other, that he who tries to please everybody pleases nobody.

For the sake of pacifism, expediency or discretion we may sometimes close our eyes to a major controversy, but it happens every once in a while that a controversy reaches a stage where it can no longer be ignored Willy-nilly both correspondent and editor are bound to sit up and take notice. Undoubtedly economic distress as a national issue is of an overshadowing nature; just as surely will be foreign affairs of the utmost importance in the next campaign. But there is now no gainsaying the fact that the bitterest fight in both national conventions will be over prohibition.

Just how the Democratic convention will deal with the subject is more interesting on account of uncertainty; furthermore, because the party is more uniquely divided. In the ordinarily reliably Democratic South it is preponderantly dry; in the great pivotal Eastern States, with large electoral votes, it is overwhelmingly wet. Both sections are indispensable to Democratic success. No one doubts that the Democrats will nominate a wet for President and the South has indicated that it will not repudiate a wet nominee—with strong preference for Franklin D. Roosevelt—but the South will not sanction an unequivocal wet plank in the platform.

Every news agency in Washington is swamped with propagandistic literature emanating from any number of anti-prohibition sources. Much of it is puerile; some of it provides food for serious thought. Those who are responsible for the latter agree that "The Eighteenth Amendment cannot be changed." Whether it is good law or bad law, whether we like it or dislike it, the Eighteenth Amendment is here to stay. It cannot be repealed during our lifetime and it is just as impossible to modify it. At the same time, all maintain that prohibition in its present form has not, does not and never will successfully prohibit.

The League for the Modification of the Volstead Act, with national headquarters in Washington, recommends the legalization of comparatively harmless light wines and beer, which the Volstead law now forbids; the doing away with the statutory fixing of the amount of medicinal liquor which may be prescribed, and the number of prescriptions, as recommended by the Wickersham Commission. According to the League's prospectus, a simple Act of Congress containing these provisions will solve the "liquor problem" without repealing, modifying or nullifying the Eighteenth Amendment.

The most recent brochure on this subject was written, published and distributed by Mr. George F. Cahill, of Cahill Brothers, manufacturers of Flood-Light Projectors, in New York City. In his foreword Mr. Cahill recites that in the last few years business carried him into most of the States of the Union. "It has taken me into a great many colleges, high schools, public and private business places. I have dealt with architects, college presidents, high school principals, superintendents of schools, business men and manufacturers like myself. I have talked with coaches, directors of athletics, managers, owners, policemen, salesmen, travelers and hotel men."

Mr. Cahill propounded three questions. The first was: "Are the Prohibitionists getting prohibition?" The unanimous opinion was that they were not. The second was: "Are the prohibitionists likely to get prohibition—is prohibition becoming more effective or less effective?" Here the replies were somewhat varied, but "scarcely any of those men of affairs and intelwould become a reality in any appreciable time." The third question was: "If the Prohibitionists are not getting prohibition, and are not likely soon to get it, are those who seek repeal going to get repeal?" Says Mr. Cahill.

"To that question the answers were not varied. Until last summer, very few seemed to think so. Just before election and in the first enthusiasm over the wet victories in 1930, some thought the Repealers would get repeal very soon. But they were few. The older and more thoughtful men almost always said either 'No,' or 'Not for a time, at least! At a convention of clubs in Montreal last fall, I noticed that practically all of the men from the West and South with whom I talked said 'No,' without hesitation. Surely the very weight of replies was that the Repealers could not get repeal for many years, probably never. At least three out of four answers ran that way. If attention be paid to the thoughtfulness and to the reasons given for the replies, fully seven-eighths to nine-tenths were against the possibility of repeal in less than ten years, if ever."

The Eighteenth Amendment now reads: Sec. 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited. Sec. 2 The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation. Sec. 3. Specifies the time within which the Amendment must be ratified to be operative.

Here is Mr. Cahill's proposal: "Let every word of that amendment stand just as it is, but, at the end of Sec. 1, let there be added the sentence—

"But three months after the people of any State shall have approved a proposed law for prohibition, regulation or control of the manufacture, sale and transportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes within their State, the proposed law shall become the law of said State, and the territory of said State shall be exempt from the prohibitions of this Article and from any legislation of the Congress for the enforcement of this Article;

"Provided that said propsed law shall have been approved by a majority of all those voting at a special balloting appointed by law of that State for that purpose and no other at least four months before said special balloting; and —

"Provided, further, that the full text of the proposed law shall have been published by law, not later than when the special balloting was appointed."

"And after original Sec. 3, add—

"Sec. 4. Nothing herein, or in the law of any State, shall affect the prohibitions in this Article of the sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes from one State to another State.

"Sec. 5. The law of any State adopted as aforesaid may be amended or repealed in like manner to its adoption.

"Sec. 6. The voters in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the legislature."

So, after all, "yo' pays yo' takes yo' choice." Take it or leave it.

A large crowd of patrons were out Monday to attend the formal opening of the New Haven Consolidated School building with Prof. A. B. Moore and his corps of excellent teachers in charge. All indications are that we will have a splendid school this year.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Norman and A. H. Norman, Esq., were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Voshell at their home on the Commissary road near Petersburg.

A number of our good friends and neighbors were ill the past week. Those confined to their homes and under the care of a physician were Mrs. C. H. Bristow, Mrs. Harvey Hicks, Miss Nannie P. Burkett, Mrs. Annie A. Bristow, Mrs. W. H. Smith and Messrs. J. J. Garrison and B L. Norman.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION ATTACK REFUTED

Hammering along the line of the single issue the Republican party has developed in the campaign so far, an attack on the State Highway Commission and especially upon the chairman, Ben Johnson, appeared in the recently rehabilitated Herald-Post in the issue of October 10th.

As usual, when one of these attacks is sifted it is found to be "made stuff," containing a germ of truth, perhaps, but with facts supposed to be colored and distorted.

In the article appearing in the Herald-Post the following charge was made:

"The faulty arithmetic used by Johnson and Justice in determining the lowest bid was demonstrated in the purchase of twenty-five Dodge trucks from Thompson & Ferguson Co., Versailles. A Thompson & Ferguson bid of $969 each with a 30 per cent discount on repair parts was accepted in preference to a bid of $845 each and 35 per cent discount by Duvall's Garage, Frankfort. Johnson and Justice claimed that the highest discount given by Thompson & Ferguson made the latter company's bid the lowest.

"As a matter of fact, in order for the bids to be equal, it would be necessary to purchase $1,470 worth of parts for each of the trucks from Thompson & Ferguson, or a total for repairs of $36,750."

Disproving the above assertion and showing that the "faulty arithmetic lies in the news attack and not in the highway commission, is the following article from Duvall's Garage:

DUVALL'S GARAGE

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I noticed an article in the Herald-Post under date of October 10, 1931, which critisized Hon. Ben Johnson and Zach Justice of the State Highway Commission, in regard to the purchase of twenty-five Dodge trucks. I represented Duvall's Garage in its bid, and in making bid of $845.00 per truck had to furnish parts for all Dodge trucks owned by the Highway Commission at a discount of 25 per cent, Thomas, Ferguson & Company, as I am informed, bid $992.00 per truck for the twenty-five, with discount of 35 per cent for all Dodge trucks owned by the Commission. The difference between these bids was $147.00 per truck. My bid on the equipment of these trucks was on six standard balloon tires with standard tubes. My competitor bid on extra heavy duty tires and tubes of the same class. The difference in cost of these tires and tubes is about $14.00 per tire, and six tires to the truck makes a difference of $84.00.

When you take into consideration the difference on the discounts on parts, in my judgment the bid of my competitor was the best and lowest bid. I, therefore, consider the criticism of these men as to this transaction very unjust.

RANKS PARIS THIRD AS FASHION CENTER

ONA MUNSON is one movie star who does not feel she has to run to Paris twice a year in order to be well dressed. In fact she has joined the Buy At Home movement and really prefers American fashions. It has been said before that New York is ahead of Paris in styles. Miss Munson agrees with this and says too that Hollywood also outranks Paris. "The average woman in a Paris gown is not so well dressed as she is well costumed," Miss Munson says. Hollywood as a style center is to be spotlighted in an early episode of the Radio Newsreel of Hollywood, a weekly broadcast presenting the "behind-the-scenes" story of movie life. Miss Munson is to be featured in the broadcast.

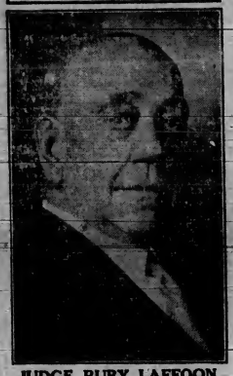
SKETCH OF JUDGE RUBY LAFFOON



Judge Ruby Laffoon, Democratic nominee for Governor, was born January 18, 1869, in Madisonville. His family moved to a farm when he was about 3 years old, and his love for this life is shown by the fact that he yet owns farm land in his native county.

Judge Laffoon received his early education in the common schools of Hopkins county. At seventeen he went to Washington to become messenger for Judge C. R. Faulkner, director of the pension office. He attended and completed, at night, the Columbia Law School course and returned to Madisonville to practice. He was admitted to the bar at twenty-two.

Judge Laffoon was elected county attorney for two successive terms, the only elective office he held until 1921, when he was elected Judge of the Fourth Judicial District.

On January 31, 1894, he married Miss Mary Nisbet. They have three children, Mrs. William R. Robinson, Mrs. C. H. Boyd and Miss Lelia Laffoon, and two grandchildren, R. W. and Thomas Robinson.

DEMOCRACY'S STANDARD BEARER

JUDGE RUBY LAFFOON
of Madisonville
DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY

In the years of his judgeship the court of appeals has reversed him only three or four times. In his judicial district he is admired for his common sense and humanness. In all his busy life he has never lost touch with the masses and has a broad understanding of the problems that confront those who must earn their living by manual labor.

For forty years Judge Laffoon has been a member of the Christian church, as is each member of his family. He is a member of the Masonic Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery, and Rizpah Temple Shrine.

He spends a great deal of time on his farm and is in robust health.

SKETCH OF A. B. CHANDLER

Albert Benjamin Chandler, Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor, was born at Corydon, Kentucky, July 14, 1898. His career is typical of those traits of energy, courage and self-reliance so widely admired in young American manhood.

FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

A. B. CHANDLER
of Versailles

He attended the graded schools of his county and graduated from the Corydon High School. Immediately following his graduation this country was swept by a holocaust of the World War and young Chandler, promptly and without hesitation, sacrificed temporarily his ambition for an education to his country's need for fighting men. After the war, his unconquerable desire to complete his education overcame the handicap of a lack of money. Setting to work with true courage he made his way thru seven years of college receiving his A. B. degree from Transylvania in 1921, spending two terms at the Harvard Law School, and in 1924 receiving an L. L. B. from the College of Law of the University of Kentucky.

In 1924 Mr. Chandler began the practice of law at Versailles, Kentucky, adding to the necessarily meager income of a young lawyer attempting to establish a practice by coaching football teams at the Versailles High School and later at Center College.

In November, 1929, he was elected to the State Senate from the Twenty Second District, composed of Woodford, Scott and Jessamine counties, being chosen by an overwhelming majority.

Senator Chandler married Miss Mildred Watkins of Keysville, Virginia and has three children, Marcella, Mildred and Albert Benjamin Jr. He lives in Versailles and is at present Master Commissioner of the Woodford Circuit Court.

Senator Chandler is a member of Landmark Lodge No. 41 F. & A. M.; of Versailles Council No. 31, Junior Order United American Mechanics. He is Past Commander of Woodford Post No. 67, American Legion and Grand Worthy Patron of the Versailles Chapter, Order of Eastern Star.

Miss Mahan was born in Clay county, Kentucky, but came with her parents to Boyle county to make her home when nine years old.

It has been said of her work as Circuit Court Clerk, by competent lawyers, that it was always, without exception, painstaking and thorough.

There can be no doubt of Miss Mahan's ability to discharge capably the duties of the office of Secretary of State.

Washington Snap Shots

John W. Davis, defeated Democratic presidential candidate in 1924, will lead a nation-wide committee of prominent party men and women to handle the Democratic 1932 campaign. Announcement of this, a new departure in Democratic methods of conducting national campaigns, was made by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Democratic National Committee. More than 300, including most of the party's "big wigs," will assist Davis. Committeemen and women are listed from every State. Others include potential presidential candidates. Governor Roosevelt, New York, Newton D. Baker, Ohio; Governor Ritchie, Maryland, and still others not so prominently mentioned as party prospects.

Republican National Committee leaders are giving consideration to raising funds for the 1932 campaign and it was disclosed that the subject will be discussed when the National Committee meets here in December. Republican national headquarters made no comment on the Democratic drive for a $1,500,000 fund but it was pointed out that the Republicans were not handicapped by a huge deficit and, besides, that something had already been accomplished through the new '32 Clubs, intended to arouse interest in the re-election of President Hoover. These clubs, though not sponsored by the Republican National Committee, have been launched for the purpose of lining up Hoover supporters and also for bringing into the Republican national treasury a continual stream of dollars.

Ex-President Coolidge's article in the Saturday Evening Post setting forth reasons why he should not be a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1932 has established a precedent which will be referred to in the future like decisions of the United States Supreme Court. In general it means that it is better for a party to renominate its President for a second term than it is for it to seek its way out of difficulties by refusing him a renomination and preferring some one else who seems to be stronger.

A study by the veterans' administration shows only 7 per cent of the war veterans who borrow ed on their bonus certificates used the money "in such a way as to receive no practicable benefits therefrom." The average per cent of veterans obtaining loans for personal and family needs was 85 per cent; one-fifth of the borrowers utilized loans for investment, while 8 per cent bought automobiles, "purpose undetermined." These figures, along with others showing 33 per cent of the 2,000,000 veteran borrowers are out of jobs, were given to Representative Patman, Democrat, of Texas, by Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs.

President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson have expressed the common hope that the fullest exchange of views on every subject wil be possible in the forthcoming visit of Premier Pierre Laval of France. This statement was intended to controvert the rumors appearing in the French press that a "cut and dried program" will be handed to the French Premier for his acceptance or rejection. It was stressed in an official announcement of the State Department that the United States regards Premier Laval as a guest of the Nation. In that capacity he would naturally be treated with all the consideration and courtesy that a guest receives from a host. Therefore the initiative for discussion will always be given M. Laval. He will be invited to unfold the ideas of his government on any and all the political and economic questions that are of common interest to the U. S. and France. The more pressing problems of war debts, reparations, gold standard, disarmament will undoubtedly play a prominent problem in the discussions.

State Department officials appear somewhat disconsolate over the results of their venture into the realms of high-powered international diplomacy under the guidance and with the cooperation of the League of Nations. Two days after United States had put forward a precedent-making offer of full cooperation was still in doubt as to whether his representative at Geneva, Prentiss B. Gilbert, would sit on the Council. Still more important, he lacked any reports that the Council had made tangible progress in breaking the Sino-Japanese deadlock. He is known to attach the greatest importance to these deliberations, not merely because the peace of the Orient is in the balance in Manchuri, but because the entire machinery of the League of Nations and the United States, carefully built up since 1918 to prevent war, is being put to test.

AN ULTIMATE CONSUMER

This baby in a drought stricken section of West Virginia was one of the ultimate consumers of the foodstuffs given by the American Red Cross in the past year. More than 2,750,000 persons were fed by the organization.

Pauline Phrase

In Thomson's "The Seasons" is the spring ecstatic, opposite the desert "delightful task to rear the tender thought, to teach the young idea how to shoot." This is believed to be the source of the phrase "the young idea" in referring to children or youths.

Belongs to the Nation

4-H CLUB CALVES ON EASTERN FEED FOR FAT STOCK SHOW

Junior 4-H Club members in 10 counties are putting the finishing touches on 200 head of calves which they are fattening for the tenth annual fat stock show at the Louisville Stock Yards in Louisville the second week in November.

The show and sale will complete the year's 4-H club work in a practical course in preparing cattle for the market, conducted for farm boys and girls, and supervised by county agents and the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Cash prizes totaling $5,500 appropriated by the State Legislature and $100 given by The Courier-Journal, and trips to Chicago and other premiums will be divided among 4-H club members exhibiting calves.

Most of the calves will be in high condition, according to M. S. Garside, field agent for the College of Agriculture. Feed has been abundant and cheap, and the boys and girls have given their calves good care. The average weight will be about 850 pounds.

All the calves were raised in Kentucky, with the exception of one car load. Seventy-five club members will show calves of their own raising in a special breeders' class.

Wayne county 4-H club members will again show the largest number of any one county, 109 head. Garrard county will be present with 88 Angus calves. Montgomery county will have 56 head. Boys and girls will show calves from other counties as follows: Barren, Bourbon, Caldwell, Carroll, Christian, Fayette, Grayson, Harrison, Henry, Hopkins, Jessamine, Marion, Nicholas, Owen, Pulaski, Shelby and Union.

Trips to the International Live Stock Exposition will be given by Swift & Co., Belknap Hardware & Manufacturing Co., Ballard & Ballard, and Chas. R. Long, Jr., Co.

Wasted Argument

There is no good in arguing with the inevitable. The only argument available with an east wind is to put on your overcoat.—Lowell.

EXPERTS SUPPORT SHOULD CAPITALIZE ON POULTRY RAISING

Two hundred men and women from 10 counties, attending the annual poultry meeting at the Experiment Station, were told by Prof. James E. Rice, noted authority of Cornell University, that Kentucky should capitalize its advantages as a poultry raising state.

"Kentucky has everything in its favor as a poultry raising state," he declared. "It has an abundance of sunshine and a mild climate. It has a soil rich in limestone and other elements that grow bluegrass, grain, alfalfa and other legumes, necessary for the production of high-quality eggs. Farmers of Kentucky should capitalize on the economical production possibilities of the state, and then develop an efficient marketing system."

Prof. Rice spoke encouragingly of the poultry industry, declaring that feed costs made it possible to secure a profit even at present egg prices.

Dean Thomas P. Cooper, in welcoming the visitors, said that poultry farmers should feel encouraged, in that egg prices have not fallen as rapidly as feed costs. He believed that poultry will continue to become a greater farm asset in Kentucky.

The morning was spent in inspecting the Experiment Station's poultry plant, flocks and incubation and brooding laboratories. Reports were made by Dr. J. Holmes Martin and his assistants on various feeding and breeding experiments. The brooding coops with wire floors, where the chicks are not allowed on the ground until old enough to turn on range, were of interest to visitors. This method of brooding has reduced chick loss to a minimum, by eliminating the danger of worms and other parasites ordinarily picked up from the soil. After being taken from the wire floor coops, the chicks are turned on ground that has been free from poultry for at least two years.

HEAVY PRODUCTION FROM DRAINED LAND

Corn that will produce 65 to 75 bushels and tobacco 1,600 pounds to the acre were grown this year in the Elkhorn creek bottom in Franklin county, as the result of opening up a drainage ditch, according to reports of farmers to the agricultural engineering section of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

A powder company cooperated with engineers from the college and County Agent R. M. Heath in the use of dynamite to blast out several miles of drainage ditch. Much of the rich bottom land had gone out of production from lack of drainage.

Mrs. J. D. Bradburn reports corn that will yield 75 bushels to the acre, and Ernest Lee corn that will make 65 bushels, while Bates Bros., expect their tobacco to make 1,400 pounds to the acre.

Walter Fitzgerald reports producing 1,600 pounds to the acre on land that had not grown a crop in 30 years.

The use of dynamite proved an efficient and economical way of making a drainage ditch, according to the engineers.

G. M. Haycraft of Grayson-co., produced more than 100 tons of soybean hay on 50 acres this year. It was his seventh soybean hay crop and the sixth crop that averaged more than two tons of hay to the acre. He sowed two bushels of Haberlandt seed to the acre.

Lured to Death by Moon

The moon has the strangest attraction for earthly creatures. Even the squid, a well-known relative of the octopus or devil-fish seems to be inspired by her charms. When the moon is full the squad will swim along on the surface of the water, his cold eyes fixed on the lunar orb until he is stranded high and dry on the beach. After a bright moonlit night dozens of these ferocious pirates of the deep are found helpless on the sands—victims of their misplaced sentiment.

Soil Leaves Record

The soil that covers a buried city sometimes indicates the manner in which it was buried—for instance, if the city is buried in sand it is reasonable to believe that some terrific sandstorm enveloped it. On the other hand, if the overlaying earth is volcanic in character, it is indicated that some eruption caused the loss of the city. For many cases historical records are available, telling of the nature of the catastrophe.

Baby Carriage in Museum

The baby carriage has been placed in the collection of vehicles of transport at the Smithsonian institution. For some reason no one ever thought of including a perambulator until one of them, bought in 1903, was donated to the institution. The carriage differs from the modern four-wheel perambulator. It looks like a miniature one-horse shay, has two wheels and is pulled by a long handle.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

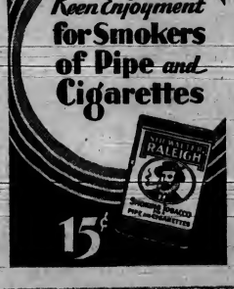
Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years



"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years, I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

REPORT OF RED CROSS NURSING SERVICE FOR SEPTEMBER 1931

With the school year beginning I always feel that greater opportunities for Health Teaching are opening to me, and I find myself wishing for more time in which to be able to be in the schools more than it is possible for me to be, when I try to cover a county as big as ours, yet each year I am gratified in knowing that the teachers are increasingly giving attention, the matter of health education in the schools daily, and I feel sure this shall continue and shall play a big part in bringing better Health to the public at large.

At Hamilton school this year I am teaching a class of 16 girls Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, it is with great joy that I go there twice each week for this, for I always feel I can render greater service through and by these classes for both the present and the future than in any other method of Health Teaching in a community. Its a long rough ride to Hamilton, but as I contemplate the good these trips may bring to the people of that section of our county, I count the ride of little significance.

I carried five children into Cincinnati to the Children's Clinic and to two hospitals during the month for examination and treatment.

Miss Sara A. Hays, Chapter Field Director of the American Red Cross, spent one day in the county stimulating interest in the fall Regional meeting to be held in Covington.

Much of my time has been spent the past month in interviews and home visits, 84 in all, this is as it should be, as we always feel when folks come to discuss health problems, or to obtain information in the field of prevention of disease, or write in requesting a visit from a Nurse to their home, that there is a growing appreciation of the knowledge which may be obtained by such conferences, not that I feel capable of giving out conclusions of positive certainty, but that I may guide those seeking knowledge to those people and places where expert advice is to be had.

BESSIE B. WILLIS,
Red Cross P. H. N.

COLORADO BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Malinda R. Ross and Mrs. Margaret Clarkson, of Union, have just returned from a delightful visit and birthday celebration of Mrs. Mary A. Lancaster of Mt. Washington, Ohio.

Lancaster having died in the years ago, there remains only one child, Miss Edith R. Lancaster of Mt. Washington, Ohio.

On the 14th Mrs Lancaster celebrated her 88th birthday with a luncheon at Netherland Plaza. There were six present. Mrs. Lancaster, her sister Mrs. M. R. Ross, a niece Mrs. Margaret Clarkson, her daughter-in-law Mrs. J. W. Lancaster of Covington, Ky., a friend Mrs. Elisabeth Phillips, of Mt. Carmel, Ohio, and her daughter Miss Edith R. Lancaster. Of this party Mrs. Lancaster, Mrs Ross and Mrs. Phillips are all over 80 years of age.

Mrs. Lancaster and Mrs. Ross are the only survivors of the Joshua Tanner branch of the family. Those ladies are remarkable for their youthful spirit and the wonderful way in which they interest themselves in the present Mrs Lancaster enjoys excellent health and is happy in the every day duties of her household Here's wishing Mrs. Lancaster many happy returns of the day and that she and her sister Mrs. Ross may be with us many years.

EARLY COUNT INDICATES DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE

LAST RITES

FOR MRS. O. C. HAFER, OF HEBRON, OBSERVED SUNDAY AT LUTHERAN CHURCH—IMPRESSIVE SERVICE CONDUCTED BY DAYTON, OHIO, MINISTER

The Hebron community was rocked by a severe shock last Friday when Death suddenly took Mrs. Clyde Hafer, one of the most beloved and honored citizens of that neighborhood. To say that the town and its surrounding communities were intensely grieved does not appropriately describe the feeling that existed. Every man woman and child was stunned beyond belief.

The last rites were observed in the Lutheran church last Sunday afternoon and it was one of the most beautiful and impressive services the writer ever has attended. Rev. E. R. Wagner, of Dayton, Ohio, a friend of the family of long years standing, delivered a splendid discourse, his subject being the "Three Shadows."

The Hafer family long has been recognized as one of the most respected and admired families in this section of the county. They always were in the center of every worthy and progressive community activity. Therefore, the loss of wife and mother is keenly felt by a host of friends with whom this newspaper joins in extending the most profound sympathy.

A complete obituary will be found in the Hebron community news items in this issue.

The Radio Achievement Program for 4-H Clubs will be heard from Station WHAS on Saturday, Nov. 7th. The program for the state clubs will be heard from 11:30 A. M., to 12:30 P. M. at which time the National program will come on the air. During the last fifteen minutes of the National program the voice of Mrs. Herbert C. Hoover, wife of the President, will be heard in a nation-wide address to the clubs.

Reasons why Boone County and all of Kentucky should conduct a Hearty Red Cross Roll Call this year:

WILL YOU BE ONE?

Boone county apple growers are letting the Ohio growers put one over on them. The past three weeks Ohio growers have been sending truck loads of apples into Boone county where they are sold to motorists along the highway from portable road side stands.

While Kentucky consumes more apples than she produces, Boone county produces a surplus. This year every little bit helps and many Boone county growers could likely profit by what the Ohio growers have learned. Good roadside markets pay.

On Sunday October 25th Raymond Beemon and wife, August Dringenburg wife and son, Irvin and Mrs. Fannie Utz motored to New Castle, Indiana, to visit Harold Beemon, who is located there as pastor of one of the Lutheran churches. Mrs. Fannie tells us that they had the pleasure of going to Harold's church and heard him deliver a very interesting sermon. After service closed they got acquainted with quite a number of the members of the congregation. They said Harold was getting along fine with his church work and had organized a Young People's meeting. They are proud of him and said they were lucky to get this fine young man to preach for them.

CAR STOLEN

One night last week A. Gadd, of near Big Bone, had his automobile stolen. The garage door had been broken and the car taken therefrom before Mr. Gadd learned that the thieves were on the place. The telephone wires also had been cut, leaving Mr. Gadd without quick means of reaching assistance. Sheriff Snyder, however, was notified as soon as possible and the officer has been working on the matter in the hope of turning up some sort of a clue. But nothing has been found of any assistance so far.

JOHN L SHUFF

TO HEAD DEMOCRATIC VICTORY DRIVE FOR FUNDS FOR NATIONAL CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE—JOHN W. DAVIS IS NATIONAL CHAIRMAN

FortThomas, Ky., Nov 2, 1931—John L. Shuff of this city will head the Kentucky Committee which will cooperate with the Victory Campaign of the Democratic Party. This national preparedness drive for $1,500,000 is now being organized under the leadership of John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee in 1924, to put the party in a strong financial position for the 1932 presidential election.

Mr. Shuff's selection as chairman of the Kentucky Victory Campaign Committee, which will be one of forty-eight similar state committee throughout the country, was announced by Jouett Shouse, executive chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in a letter to Mr. Shuff. Mr. Shuff will have complete charge of the steps to be taken by his committee whose personnel also is to be decided by him.

Declaring that "there never has been greater national need or greater opportunity for Democratic Victory," Mr. Shous in his letter urged every Kentuckian asked by Mr. Shuff to serve on the Kentucky Committee to "respond enthusiastically.

"You will proceed at once to enlist as members of your State Victory Campaign Committee a group of friends of the Party who will lend their wholehearted efforts in Kentucky to the Party's preparedness drive for victory in 1932," Mr. Shouse wrote to Mr. Shuff.

"Under your able leadership, and with the calibre of the men and women whom you will ask to serve on the Kentucky Committee, the National Committee has no doubt of the enthusiastic response which the Victory Campaign appeal will elicit from every citizen of Kentucky who is interested in constructive national Government.

"The Nation's need and the Party's unparalleled opportunity for victory next year places a responsibility on every member of the Party in Kentucky and in every other state to help assure victory." Mr. Shouse continued. "That victory must result in more than the placing in the White House of a Democratic president, it must give him the essntial backing of strong Democratic majorities in both branches of Congress, so that the constructive program our Party will have to offer may be executed expeditiously and effectively.

"A virile Party organization in a strong financial position, and ready to swing into immediate action as soon as the 1932 Convention adjourns, is the goal of the Victory Campaign through the efforts of such groups as the Kentucky Committee. I know that the Party nationally can depend on you, and on those selected by you, to muster the full support of every Kentucky friend of the Party behind this significant undertaking for the welfare of the Democracy and of the nation to whose service it has been dedicated from birth."

PASSES AWAY AT HOME NEAR IDLEWILD AFTER PROLONGED ILLNESS—FUNERAL SERVICES CONDUCTED BY REV. J. W. CAMPBELL. BURIAL AT BULLITTSBURG

The death of William L. Stevens, which occurred at the old family homestead near Idlewild, Wednesday, October 28th, was the cause of profound grief in his wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Stevens was one of Boone county's best and truest sons. He was a quiet and unassuming man, always with a good natured greeting, seldom, if ever, found in illhumor. He has been a patient sufferer for several years, finally yielding to the inevitable last week. His funeral took place from the old Bullittsburg church last Friday afternoon after which he was laid to rest in the cemetery adjoining the church yard.

The services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Campbll, his pastor, who delivered a beautiful and very appropriate discourse. "Lead Kindly Light," rendered by a quartet and "When I Go Home," a solo by Mrs. Flossie Campbell Martin, were beautifully rendered.. Six cousins of the deceased acted as pass bearers. C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, ments.

The following obituary has been handed the Recorder for publication:

William Stevens, son of Henry and Christine Bohnett Stevens, was born Feb. 11th, 1868 near the home where he spent the greater part of his life. Died October 28th, 1931. In early life he united with the Bullittsburg Baptist church, where he remained a faithful consistent member.

His character was unselfish, gentle and retiring, kind and considerate of all, and speaking evil of none. Tis little wonder that he was universally loved and respected. Not having lived in vain, he has built an enduring monument to his memory, and this world of ours is better by his having passed thru.

Beside his immediate family he leaves a host of friends to mourn his loss. Surviving him are two brothers Charles and Jonas. Three sisters Misses Lizzie and Bess, and Mrs. Fannie Rice. His brother Harry preceded him to the grave only

A local 4-H tobacco show will be held in connection with each of the meetings. The meetings will be held in the following communities at the designated time:

Russian thistle often known as Russian cactus and tumbling thistle has been found in Boone county. This weed is consideed one of the worst of the weed pests. It has been introduced mainly thru unclean alfalfa seed.

The weed when young is succulent and sheep and cattle will readily eat it. When the weed is more mature the stalks grow with sharp spines and tend to crowd out other grasses. A thrifty plant may bear from 10,000 to 100,000 seeds per year which adds to the menace.

Preventing the production of seed by cutting early, plowing under the young plants and clean cultivation are recommended as methods of control. A sample of the weed may be seen at the county agent's office.

FOX HUNTERS

TO HAVE GALA TIME AT LEXINGTON DURING WEEK OF NOVEMBER 9-14 — STEEPLE CHASE FOR PRINCE OF WALES CUP ON NOVEMBER 12

Lexington, Ky.—The resonant blast of the hunter's horn, colorful hounds baying the trail, a flash of red as the fox plays hide and seek with the pack, horses taking high hurdles beneath expert riders, a steeplechase the likes of which never has been held before in this country, the celebrated charity race meeting of Col. MAJORITY

IN BOONE WILL BE AROUND 1000, LARGEST SINCE 1923—BEAVER BACK IN DEMOCRATIC COLUMN FOR FIRST TIME SINCE 1924 IN STATE ELECTION—CONSTANCE ALSO RETURNS

The trend of the early counting throughout the state and the fact that voting was heavy in all parts of the Commonwealth serves to indicate, according to political sages, that Judge Laffoon and the entire Democratic ticket has been swept to victory in the gubernatorial race.

Promptly at ten o'clock Wednesday morning C. Liston Hempfling and E. E. Fry, Boone County Election Commissioners, together with Sheriff Herbert Snyder, ex-officio member of the commission, started the count of the vote in the Grand Jury room at the court house. The Commissioners were being assisted in the count by County Clerk A. G. McMullen. A deputy clerk and deputy sheriff also were helping with the tally, which it was predicted would require the better portion of a day (Wednesday) and tomorrow, although the Commissioners indicated that they might attempt to complet the count before adjourning to-night.

The total vote cast in Boone [illegible] nearer to the mark.

The Beaver precinct was in the Democratic column for the first time since 1924 in a state race, when Sackett carried the precinct over Stanley. The majority for the head of the ticket was 16, Judge Laffoon receiving 69 votes and Mayor Harrison 53. Little scratching was done, all candidates on the two tickts running within from one to two votes of each other.

The new election law precludes a complete tally of the vote by precincts in the Recorder as the paper goes to press at noon Wednesday. However, a complete result will be published next week.

Following is the total vote in the county by precincts:

TOTAL VOTE CAST IN STATE ELECTION

Beaver	125
Belleview	115
Bullittsville	139
Burlington No. 1	187
Burlington No. 2	179
Carlton	132
Constance	190
Florence No. 1	383
Florence No 2	292
Hamilton	111
Hebron	170
Petersburg No. 1	158
Petersburg No. 2	118
Union	236
Verona	170
Walton No. 1	236
Walton No. 2	258
Total	3059

The last precinct to be counted as the Recorder goes to press was Constance, which Laffoon carried by 14 votes. This is the first time that Constance has been listed on the Democratic side since 1919, when Woodrow Wilson carried the precinct by 13 votes. The Burlington precincts gave the Democratic ticket a majority of 200, Bullittsville, 90, Belleview, 53, Carlton 62. Complete returns next week.

Elmo Gaines, who never misses an opportunity to return to his home precinct to cast a Democratic vote, was on hand early Tuesday. He returned to Frankfort Tuesday afternoon to resume his post in the Auditor's office fully confident that he will remain there for the next four years under J. Dan Talbott.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Frymire, of Cynthiana, spent the week-end with Postmaster Everett Blankenbeker and wife.

HE WILL LIVE FOREVER

It has been given to few men to completely revolutionize the world's way of living and its habits of thought. Fewer still have lived to see the full fruition of their achievements. Thomas Alva Edison, in the course of his own lifetime, almost literally turned the world upside down.

If Edison had done nothing but to invent the multiplex telegraph and the telephone transmitter which made Bell's invention practical, his fame would have been world wide. In speeding up communications he speeded up the tempo of all human life. If he had invented nothing more than the phonograph, he would still be rated among the great inventors of all times. The phonograph brought good music for the first time to the ears of hundreds of millions all over the world, and has unquestionably been the greatest stimulus to musical development and musical taste in all history. If his only invention had been the incandescent electric light, his name would be hailed everywhere as the world's greatest benefactor. This invention alone has lengthened the human day in every corner of the civilized world, has changed all the world's ideas of entertainment, of housing, our whole manner of living and consequently our manner of thinking. If Edison's sole achievement had been the motion picture, on what a pedestal for that alone we would hold his memory. He gave the world a marvelous new means of looking at itself, brought to the remotest hamlet, even beyond the frontiers of civilization, not merely a new form of entertainment, but the most powerful organ of education in its broad sense that has yet been devised.

Yet so marvelously active was this man's mind, so resourceful and ingenious, that even that list of great accomplishments does not begin to cover all that he did. He took the first crude typewriter and made it work. He invented the mimeograph. He invented the megaphone. He invented the machinery on which the whole great Portland cement industry is based. It was the so-called "Edison effect," a new scientific principle which he discovered while exprimenting with the electric light that gave Marconi the clue on which to develop wireless telegraphy and so, in a very direct way, Edison was the father of radio broadcasting.

He was one of the few inventors who was practical enough to develop his own inventions commercially and make money from them. Yet throughout his life he retained the boyish curiosity, the youthful eagerness to learn that had possessed him as a school boy. Because he was so eminently practical in the application of his inventions, and because his formal schooling had been so brief, he had the popular reputation of being an unscientific, rule-thumb inventor. As a matter of fact, he had probably the broadest and deepest knowledge and understanding of the physical and chemical sciences that any one brain ever possessed.

Edison's life completely filled Dean Swift's description of a benefactor of humanity as being a man who made two blades of grass to grow where one grew before.

"He was a man. Take him all in all.
We shall not look upon his like again."

A ten-point program of essential action to speed business recovery, coupled with a rebuke to the purveyors of gloom, was made public by the committee on employment plans and suggestions of the President's organization on unemployment relief. The report, a 6,000-word document, was made public without advance notice following a session in Chicago. This committee is headed by Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, and its membership includes seventeen other business leaders and economists.

Control of the closely divided House continues to ride the whirling wheel of fortune. Word comes from New Hampshire that the normally-Republican first district will be unable to send a successor to the late Representative Fletcher Hale until near the end of December because of the election laws. Loss of this district cuts the Republican advantage to one vote, even if the party's candidates are successful in four special elections in tradtionally Republican districts.

Senator Tydings renewed his request to the Navy Department to have the U. S. Scores of patriotic societies, civic organizations and other groups in Maryland, Senator Tydings said, have indorsed the proposal that Old Ironsides be kept at the Naval Academy, where it would ever be an inspiration to the future officers of the Navy.

Directing its attack for the first time at President Hoover personally, the Navy League of the United States has come out unreservedly in opposition to the Administration's naval policy, from the earliest proposal to make food supplies immune from interference in time of war to the latest decision to agree to a general one-year construction holiday. The studiously restrained, factual style with which the Navy League phrased its statements in the past was abandoned as William Howard Gardiner, president of the organization, turned the attack directly on President Hoover, accusing him of "abysmal ignorance" about naval matters and declaring that his policy is subordinating the United States Navy to those of foreign powers.

President Hoover has come out strongly for a Navy adequate only to protect the country against invasion, adjusted to the minimum based on the present-day outlook. To maintain greater forces, he declared, "is not only economic injury to our people, but a threat against our neighbors." "Ours is a force for defense, not offense," said the President.

For the third time since President Wilson sent Governor Burton Harrison to the Philippines in 1912 to prepare the Filipinos for full independence a Presidential investigator has returned to Washington to report that the withdrawal of American sovereignty would not be an act of wisdom, grace or kindness. It is made despite pleas of President Hoover for curtailment of Government expenditures. Woodcock's recommendation at this time puts a difficult problem up to Mr. Hoover, who, while seeking economy, cannot well ignore the urging of the Wickersham Commission that the dry force is inadequate.

The Way of Life

OLD MAIDS

It had been a very pleasant crossing of the ocean and all of us who had been passengers had become well acquainted.

As the big ship moved slowly to her pier we stood on the promenade deck looking into the mass of upturned faces, each hoping to discover a relative or friend.

Suddenly a woman beside me began to wave her handkerchief, and, from the pier, an old lady waved back.

"That's my aunt," the woman confided to me. "Dear old Aunt Julia. My husband sent me a wireless that he is sick in bed with grippe. My mother is in the South. I was afraid there would be no one to meet me.

"But I might have known. Aunt Julia never fails. Blessed old maid, she mothers us all. How could we ever live without her!"

On the pier I was introduced to Aunt Julia. A trim little figure of a woman bubbling over with unselfishnes, launched with an extra coat and a pair of overshoes just in case her loving niece might happen to be cold.

Having just come from France, and feeling very continental, I bent over and kissed her hand. She blushed like a girl.

"You mustn't try to flatter an old lady," she said. But it was no attempt at flattery; it was an act of reverence. She is a member of the noblest clans in the world.

I had been reading, on the boat, a book about the Bronte family. Mr. Bronte was a self-centered country parson who wore out his wife by making her the mother of six children in six years. Left with the motherless brood on his hands, he cast around for help, and thought of his wife's maiden sister. She, poor thing, was living peacefully in a lovely little town, with an income sufficient to provide comfortably for her simple wants. There was every selfish reason why she should stay just where she was.

Yet, at his summons, she did not hesitate. She cast aside every personal consideration, came down to the bleak parsonage in its ugly part of England and proceeded, for the rest of her life, to devote herself to those children.

How many millions of similar instances have there been in history! What a priceless wealth of affection is poured out on the other people's children by aunts and nurses and cooks and teachers to whom Fate gives no children of their own! How could humanity conduct its existence without them?

I thought of these things as I watched Aunt Julia wrap up her niece and hurry away. I lifted my hat reverently and waved them good-bye.

MORE HEARTS

Living almost in the door of a great city, I naturally notice their vital statistics, and their prevailing causes of death as reported in the newspapers. Listen: Within the last seven days five sudden deaths have occurred, the victims ranging from fifty to sixty years of age. "Heart disease" was the newspaper report, doubtless based on the official death certificate. And the mad, unthinking chase after the dollar keeps right on.

It's the same old story. The business man arises from bed in the morning—probably retired at midnight or later—he hastily swallows a cup of coffee and a half-cooked dish of somebody's health food." He is too busy to fool with a good breakfast; besides, the wife isn't up yet, it's half past eight.

He rushes downtown to the office, or to the car-barn, garage, store or what-have-you. Customers are there waiting. He grinds till twelve-thirty; then the lunch-counter, a miserable xcuse for a meal—it just isn't one. Back to the grind for the second session.

Six o'clock—he hurries home—ah, dinner! Beefsteak, fried potatoes, coffee, many condiments for stimulation; fritters, omelettes, gravies—a monster feed and plenty of time; it reassures the tired body and nerves. The deserts challenge the capacity of old King Cole, the merry old soul.

The tubby daddy gets short-winded in time—but he looks so capable with his ample bay-window. He stimulates more—struggles on and on to the fatal fifty to sixty decade, shorter of breath, maybe gets elected to a seat in the city council—drops dead! Just heart disease; too bad.

Is life of so little worth? I wish I could impress upon my neighbors the danger of the six o'clock dinner!

Lawrence county farmers report the best corn and soybean hay crops in th history of the county, with sufficient feed to meet the needs of livestock owners.

One hundred and twenty-six farmers who owned demonstration flocks and managed them according to suggestions from the poultry department of the College of Agriculture, reported profits. By applying current prices as they were received or paid, these 126 flocks, averaging 114 birds, returned $1.47 per hen to the operators for their labor, which averaged 3.8 hours per hen. The total feed cost per hen was $2.65, allowing market prices for all feeds.

PAUL IN EPHESUS

Rev. Samuel D. Price, B. D.

Begin your reading with Acts 18:18 and continue through chapter 19. Note the two similar incidents where a total of thirteen who had known only the baptism of John enter into the larger experience in Christian truth when thy knew about Him, the Holy Spirit. Paul returned to Ephesus after having been to Antioch that he might report on the second missionary journey.

Three years were now spent in Ephesus as the third journey is entered upon. After three months the school of Tyrannus became the general meeting place. Fine results came from the two years of preaching and teaching at that center. In fact, many points in the surrounding country were reached and these places were later addressed by both Paul and John in their letters.

The bonfire at Ephesus revealed the growing influence that Paul gained over the superstitutious who used all sorts of charms to try and offset evil. It was quite like the rabbit's foot idea with some today, and there are still many who give up good money to have a palmist or other fortune teller hoodwink them. Multitudes brought their charms and soothsayingg books for the fire and about $100,000 worth was destroyed.

All this cut into the sale of the images of Diana, whose massive temple and licentious worship was dominant in Ephesus. The makers of these idols had their part in starting the uproar as the people rushed to the temple and shout ed themselves hoars as they cried "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Paul wanted to talk to the crowd but cooler minds dissuaded him and Paul decided to work elsewhere.

Over 13 Billion Dollars of Bank Assets in Affiliated Systems Numbering 1,850 Members—In Nearly Every State.

Over 1,850 banks with more than thirteen billion dollars in resources are shown to be associated with chain or group banking systems in the United States in facts recently gathered by the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. The chairman of the commission, R. R. Hecht of New Orleans, pointed out that the facts indicate that "almost 7½ per cent of our banks and over 12 per cent of our banking resources are in the great net of group or chain banking that now covers almost every part of the country."

The commission's facts comprised chain and group banking affiliations in the broadest sense of the term, the report said. They included those groups in which the controlling element was a particular bank, there being reported 78 instances of this class involving 607 banks and about $6,473,000,000 in combined banking resources. They included also groups in which a nonbanking holding company, not subsidiary to any particular bank, was in control and of this class 28 instances were found, involving 330 banks and nearly $5,335,000,000 in resources. The report also included groupings in which control was exercised by individual persons and these cases numbered 167, involving 1,071 banks and about $1,463,000,000 in assets.

The Total Figures

The total was over $13,275,0a0,000 in aggregate resources. Some of the systems comprised 50 to 100 banks each. Head offices of the groups were found in all jurisdictions, but nine of the states and the District of Columbia.

"We have not included in these figures," the report says, "banking groups in which a commercial bank, a trust company and an investment house, and sometimes a savings bank, are tied together by some form of stock holdings and operated as complementary elements in an organization rendering complete financial services. We have held that such groups are similar to a departmentalized bank and different in the purposes and operations from a chain or group banking system.

"For purposes of the present report we define chain or group banks as systems in which centralized control, whether corporate or personal and either rigid or informal, directs the operations of two or more complete banks, not functionally complementary, each working on its own capital and under its own personnel and located in one or more cities or states."

Commenting on the question whether the rapid development of chain banking was in the nature of a reaction against restrictions imposed on branch banking by the banking laws in many states the report says that observation does not wholly confirm this theory since chain banking is prevalent in some states where virtually no restriction is imposed on branch banking, as well as in those where the establishment of branch banks is prohibited. It adds:

The Question of Branch Banking

"However, the facts do show that anti-branch banking laws have been a factor in some cases, and probably in some sections, in the spread of chain banking. Instances have come to our attention where expansion along chain bank lines has been carried out by state banks whose expansion along branch bank lines was stopped by the passing of state laws prohibiting further branches. Yet whether expansion would have been along branch bank lines if the laws had imposed no barriers, it is impossible to say. There is obviously a well developed banking opinion in some sections that the chain bank method brings to outlying banks the strength and efficiency of a big organization without depriving them of their local individuality and sympathies. In view of the mixed factors noted, we feel it is unsafe to generalize as to what bearing branch banking laws have on chain developments.

"The recent era of rapid chain bank developments has found specific reflection in some state legislative action tending to restrict or control chain or group banking. Also we find a sharp difference of opinion among state bank commissioners who have expressed their sentiments regarding chain banking."

In a foreword to the report, issued in booklet form by the association at its New York City headquarters, Chairman Hecht says that "the Economic Policy Commission does not take a stand in advocacy of or in opposition to this new method of concentrating banking resources through the affiliation of banks into groups and chains, but is simply offering as a fact finding body what we believe is the first complete national picture of this rapidly growing movement."

SCHOOL SAVINGS GROW

A total of 4,222,935 school children participated in school savings banking in the United States during the last school year, depositing $23,672,496 and rolling up net savings of $10,539,928, bringing total bank balances now credited to this movement to above 50 million dollars, according to the annual report of the Savings Bank division of the American Bankers Association. Schools to the number of 15,597 are enrolled in the plan.

FRUIT UPSIDE DOWN CAKE IS EVERYONE'S FAVORITE

It's a topsy-turvy world at best, so why not an upside down cake for dinner tonight? Hot or cold, this is a dessert that every member of the family appreciates and it's safe for the children to have all they want. Usually enough, it's easy to make and is full of good, nourishing ingredients. The ideal cake in some women's minds would be an eggless, butterless, milkless concoction that apparently had everything in its favor from the standpoint of economy but would rate zero in nourishment.

You get out of a cake, pie or pudding what you put in it, and it's a waste of time, fuel and ingredients to carry the economy motif too far. So the three eggs and half cup of butter called for in this recipe are not a luxury but an investment in real food value. Dried fruit, however, may well be substituted for fresh if more convenient, and the almonds may be omitted.

Another economy that can safely be recommended is the use of self-rising flour instead of ordinary flour. This is simply a soft wheat flour which has been prelcavened at the mill. No baking powder, soda or salt is ever added when self-rising flour is used in a recipe. Think of the saving in measuring, sifting and mixing! And there's no possibility of omitting the baking powder, because it's already in and perfectly blended with the flour. Self-rising flour need be sifted only once and requires less stirring, so that a recipe calling for self-rising flour can usually be put together in half the time ordinarily required. That means a real saving of time in the busy housewife.

Self-rising flour is less expensive to use as it does not require any additional baking powder. This means quite a saving as self-rising flour and plain flour of the same grade sell at about the same price. A soft wheat flour takes less shortening so that makes another economy.

The ingredients required for the upside down cake are:

Fruit Upside Down Cake.

Fruit
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup self-rising flour
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoonfuls butter
½-1 to 1 cup brown sugar
½ cup nuts

If dried fruit is used it should be given several careful washings. Soak overnight, or cook slowly without soaking. No sugar is added. The fruit prepared, first melt the butter in a medium sized frying pan. Add the brown sugar and cook gently until melted. Then add the fruit with shredded nuts.

To make the batter, beat the egg yolks till thick. Gradually beat in half the sugar, using a Dover egg beater. Add the lemon juice. Beat the egg whites until stiff. Add the remainder of the sugar to the egg whites. A whisk egg beater is best for this process. Sift the flour into the egg yolk mixture, alternating each addition of the dry ingredients with one of the egg white mixture. Mix these in by cutting and folding with a spatula or the whisk egg beater. Pour the cake mixture over the butterscotch fruit. Bake in a slow oven (over 350 degrees) for 40 to 50 minutes. Bake this right in the skillet. Remove the cake from the skillet while still hot and turn it upside down for serving so that the glazed fruit is on top.

A simple one-egg is good to use instead of the sponge cake. Another good variation in the fruit is to use sour canned cherries, crushed pineapple, and nuts. Drain the juice from a No. 2 can of cherries, and a No. 1 can of pineapple, mix with the nuts and proceed as before. This makes a delicious combination of sweet and acid foods.

This cake, which makes a substantial dessert at the end of a light meal, such as meat loaf, creamed potatoes, browned beets and sliced tomatoes, may be served either hot or cold. Whipped cream on top makes it extra good and extra nourishing. A quarter of a cup of the dried fruit pulp folded into a cup of whipped cream, after it has been whipped, makes a pleasing variation.

Wartime Nurses

The army nursing corps says that in the Spanish-American war woman nurses were first used in the army hospitals. There nurses were under contract to the government. Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, a contract surgeon, was appointed superintendent of the army nursing corps. It was mainly through her efforts that the corps was organized and became a part of the United States army in 1901.

Of the Camel Family

The alpaca and llama are different species of animals. They are both domesticated and belong to the humpless camel class known as artiodactyls. In addition to the alpaca and llama the family includes two wild species, the guanaco and the vicuna. They are all indigenous to South America and valuable for their wool. It is estimated that the number of domesticated alpacas in South America is 1,500,000, while that of llamas is 700,000.

Old Stuff

Tom had been hearing Kipling's "Just So Stories" for the first time, and his imagination had been stirred and his vocabulary considerably enriched.

A cake of mother's baking had not come up to the usual standard, and had been removed from the table almost untouched after two meals. The next day when ice cream was served for dessert, Tom looked about the table inquiringly. "And what," he asked, "has become of that Neolithic cake?"

Something Wrong

A new system of memory training was being taught in a village school, and the teacher was becoming enthusiastic.

"For instance," he said, "supposing you want to remember the name of a poet—Bobby Burns. Fix in your mind's eye a picture of a policeman in flames. See—Bobby Burns?"

"Yes, I see," said a bright pupil. "But how is anyone to know it does not represent Robert Browning?"

In Person

Observers are surprised to know how quickly children adopt modern words and phrases into childish vocabularies. A worker at a children's museum was startled the other day by a little girl who, admiring a case of mounted animals, asked: "Lady, are these animals really in person?"

Standing nearby was a boy, evidently as well versed in movie parlance as the little girl. He quickly replied: "Sure they have been alive; did you think they were faked?"

THE TOBACCO MARKET

A very interesting and thoroughly sensible letter has been received from The Exchange Club of Nicholasville, which The Herald takes pleasure in reproducing. This letter says:

EXCHANGE CLUB
"Unity for Service"
Nicholasville, Ky.
October 26, 1931

Lexington Herald,
Lexington, Ky.
Gentlemen:

As a service Club for our community, we are appealing to you to help establish the highest possible price for the tobacco farmer.

The attitude of the average farmer, is extremely pessimistic and we believe that some optimistic article in your paper, will greatly help to make them optimistic and put them in a frame of mind to talk a good price for their tobacco, thereby appreciation instead of depreciating their product.

On the average, our farmers have one of the best crops of tobacco they have ever grown and there is no sound reason why they should not receive a good price for this crop.

Lets try to establish in the farmers' and buyers minds that we (the farmers) should get not less than a twenty cent average for this crop.

A twenty cent average would be low enough, considering present conditions as well as the price average over the last ten years.

Doesn't it seem reasonable to you, that if we appreciate our product, the buyer is more likely to pay us a fair price than if we depreciate it by talking, gloom-gloom-gloom.

Very truly yours,
NICHOLASVILLE
EXCHANGE CLUB
By J. RUSSELL KELLER,
Agricultural Committee

It is true that the crop this year is unusually good. It has stripped out well and is heavier than had been anticipated.

Further it is true that it is an unfortunate thing when the producers of burley tobacco present a "bearish" front in regard to their own product.

The consumption of tobacco is one thing that has kept up remarkably well and tobacco of quality such as this crop this year promises to be should be fully worth a price which will make the farmers' labor and investment profitable.—Lexington Herald.

WOODBURN GIRL MARRIED WHEN SHE WAS SIXTEEN AT LEXINGTON SAT.

Out on Gist Field Saturday, November 7th, Kentucky's Wildcats will have a chance to even things with Wallace Wade who so many years developed Alabama teams which had their way with Kentucky elevens. This time it will be Duke University's Blue Devils who will have Wade as their coach, and the Wildcats will be primed to do things from the starting whistle at 2:00 o'clock.

The game will be the feature of the University's annual homecoming. Hundreds of alumni have already purchased their tickets to the game which is expected to attract a crowd second only to the Tennessee game on Thanksgiving Day, which is already approaching the sell-out mark.

In "Kid" Brewer the Blue Devils will bring to Lexington one of the best backs in the South, while the Wildcats will match their best with "Shipwreck" Kelly, Ellis Johnson, Cecil Urbaniak and Dick Richards, not to mention a hard-charging line which has already made plenty of trouble for Southern Conference teams.

As each game passes and the Wildcats continue to show a flashy brand of football, Kentucky fans daily are expressing the belief that this year's Wildcats are the best in years.

A treat lies in store for all vaudeville enthusiasts, when the Four Marx Brothers, Groucho, Harpo, Chico and Zeppo, famous stage and screen stars, appear in person on the stage of the RKOO Albee Theater, Fountain Square, Cincinnati, the week starting Saturday, November 7th. The Four Marx Brothers are well remembered for their crazy antics and mirth-provoking humor in the screen successes "AAnimal Crackers," "Cocoanuts," and the more recent "Monkey Business."

It is said that the Marx Brothers are even funnier on the stage than on the screen, since it allows their personality to exert itself more readily. Advance reports have it that Harpo and Chico will furnish the musical entertainment, while Groucho's glib tongue and nimble wit leads the quartette in chatter and gags. Zeppo remains the fashion plate and straight-man. Harpo is a past master of the instrument which name he bears, while Chico's ability to bring forth harmonious chords rates him among the foremost pianists in the country.

On the same bill with the Four Marx Brothers are Summers and Hunt who will entertain in a comedy sketch entitled "After the Ball." Gloria Lea and the Harris Twins, dancers; and Bobby May, versatile young juggler, complete the "flesh" part of the program.

On the screen, popular Edmund Lowe stars in "The Spider," a mystery thriller from the famous stage play of the same name. He is supported by Lois Moran and El Brendel.

DAIRY FEEDING AND BREEDING SCHOOL

The annual dairy feeding school held during the past four years will be at Burlington, Tuesday, November 20th. The school will be divided into a half day feeding and a half day breeding school. This will be the first time that a dairy breeding school will have been held in Boone county. Further details of the meeting will be announced later.

HEBRON COOPERATIVE MILK MEETING

Members of Hebron local of the Cooperative Pure Milk Association met in Hebron last Saturday night to discuss the 1932 milk base.

Mr. Hubert Conner, director of the association and Mr. Frank Cox, field manager were the principal speakers on the program.

Local News

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Grubbs and sons had for their last Sunday guests Misses Elsie Dickerson and Kathryn Ryle, Leslie Clifton and Mr. James Ogden.

The meeting that has been in progress at the Methodist church here the past week, will continue throughout this week Rev. Pullen is doing the preaching and some very strong sermons are being rendered.

Mrs. Susie Stephens, son Wilford and daughter Miss Zelma, entertained last Sunday Miss Martha Blythe and Roscoe Akin, also David Wingate and wife, and Mrs. Lida Wingate and son William, of Erlanger.

A rush for marriage licenses in Boone and adjoining counties during recent weeks might indicate that the depression orgie is mythical. However, a sage philosopher remarked that it merely proved that the newlyweds had decided to try out the theory that "two can live cheaper than one." Well, its worth trying anyhow, but the only trouble is that there may be more than two. Then it would be "too" bad.

Mrs. Newton Sullivan entertained a group of her friends with a bridge party Tuesday evening. Those enjoyed the evening were Mrs. Lallie Eddins, Mrs. G. W. Tolin, Mrs. J. K. Cropper, Mrs. John M. Lassing Sr., Mrs. C. L. Cropper, Misses Mary Bess and Sarah Cropper, Mrs Wilford Rouse, Mrs. Stanley Eddins, Mrs. Harold Conner, Mrs. Alfred Jones, Mrs. Courtney Kelly, Mrs. L. T. Utz, Mrs. Geo. A. Porter, Mrs. M. A Yelton. The first prize was captured by Mrs. Lassing with Mrs. Porter second. Delightful refreshments were served.

Mrs. Mary Goodridge sustained a very painful injury when she fell and broke her hip at the home of her son Raymond Goodridge Monday morning. This good lady is 85 years of age and no doubt the injury will prove very detrimental to her health, which always has been of the very best. When Philip Tallaferro's ambulance conveyed her to the Booth Memorial Hospital, Covington, that afternoon it was the first time that she ever was taken to a hospital as a patient. Nor has she ever suffered with an illness of a serious nature in her entire life. Her many friends certainly hope for the best.

A group of young friends surprised Miss Helen Dixon with a birthday Wednesday evening at her home near Richwood. The spirit of Hallowe'en was carried out with costumes and games.

Those present were Misses Dorothy and Marian Sullivan, Catherine Bethel, Lula Cayton, Helen Elliott, Dorothy Evans, Virginia Miller, Eleanor Jean Carpenter, Dorothy and Myrtis Wilson, Messrs Winfield Aylor, Robt. Groger, Joe Dringenburg, Neville Hoffman, Robert Rouse, Cornelius Regan, Stanley Kern, Forest Ferguson, John Powell, Larry Kemen, Carlton Crisler, Grant Mattox, Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Carpenter, Mrs. Octavia Dixon and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rouse. All reported a good time.

Prices of 60 cents per ton on ground limestone plus $1.00 freight laid down at Erlanger were received by the county agent for a number of farmers the past week. This is the lowest price on record for this product where it has been shipped in by train.

The increased legume yield the past year thru use of lime and phosphate demonstrations shows the relative importance of the use of these soil fertilizers and correctives on most Boone county soils. The demonstrations further show that not all soils respond equally to lime and phosphate applications.

TALKING ABOUT THE WILDCATS
(By Niel Plummer)

As each day passes, it becomes more evident that the Kentucky-Tennessee game to be played on the Wildcat field at Lexington on Thanksgiving Day will attract what probably will be the largest crowd ever to see a foot ball game in Kentucky. Last fall 25,000 persons saw Alabama and Kentucky clash on Stoll Field. It looks like standing room only for the Tennessee game this fall.

From all parts of the state, players have come to the University to be members of Kentucky's freshman team this fall. This squad, while not the largest ever to come out for football, is certainly one of the gamest and best balanced outfits. To them go a lot of the credit for the success of the Wildcats because of the opposition given them in scrimmage, and how those freshmen are looking forward to being members of the Big Blue team next fall.

"Shipwreck" Kelly added another long run to his collection in the V. P. I. game which the Wildcats won 20 to 6 on October 24. Kelly snatched a Gobbler pass and dashed 95 yards over the goal, but the referee said he had stepped out of bounds after running 35 yards. Later V. P. I. players assured Kelly that he had been well inside the field at all times. Against Washington and Lee Kelly made a 96 yard scoring run.

Duke and Tennessee, at Lexington, Va., and Florida at Jacksonville complete the Wildcat's nine game schedule, on of the most ambitious in the Blue Team's history

The Art Department of the University of Kentucky is making a distinct cultural contribution to the commonwealth in the presentation each school year, of a series of exhibitions which are comparable in quality to those scheduled for the larger museums and galleries.

ARTICLE No. 1

If there is one thing about Auction and Contract that is certain and undisputed, it is the fact that no perfect system of bidding has been or is ever likely to be invented. Almost any system, if clearly understood by partners and intelligently played, will produce good results. The only difference between systems of bidding in both games lies in the difference in the skill of the players advocating the different systems. The only thing that makes one system preferable to another is the fact that it is more easily understood and applied by the average player. The writer has known of many match games between experts advocating different systems and, as a rule, such matches have been more or less even. And it is very lucky that there is no perfect system of bidding. If there were, the game would soon lose its fascination and charm. No one likes to feel that the other fellow knows as much as he does and, if the bidding were perfect, no one could put anything over.

What really makes Auction and Contract so fascinating, however, is its uncertainty. Every bid, practically, is in the nature of a speculation or a gamble for there is no guarantee that the cards will not be so distributed that your bid, no matter how sound, cannot be made. For example, suppose you bid one heart, holding five hearts headed by the ace, king, queen and an outside ace. No one will say that such a bid is unsound under any system, and yet you are doubled and lose your contract by three tricks. There were seven hearts in one hand against you. A bad break but no one can say you made a bad bid.

The following example hands apply equally well to Auction or Contract. The dealer bid one spade and second hand, holding the following:

Hearts — Q, J, 9, 8, 6, 4, 3
Clubs — 6
Diamonds — K, Q, J, 6
Spades — A

correctly bid two hearts. The dealer's partner, holding the remaining six hearts, doubled and defeated the contract by three tricks. These are bad breaks, of course, but show what happens even to the soundest of bids.

Here's the other angle: winning by bad bidding. The dealer holds a strong no-trump hand but only two little spades. Instead of bidding one no trump, he bid two spades and was doubled by second hand. He then bid two no trump and made three odd. Second hand and his partner had a set-up spade suit, but failed to lead it because of the dealer's bluff bid. A fine example of winning by bad bidding.

Still another example. The dealer bid one no trump and second hand, holding the following:

Hearts — 10, 7
Clubs — 7
Diamonds — A, K, Q, J, 10, 7, 5
Spades — Q, 8, 4

bid two spades on the theory that the dealer's partner, if he held a stopper in the spade suit, would undoubtedly bid two no trump. It happened just as second hand had planned. The dealer's partner bid two no trump, second hand doubled and defeated the contract by two tricks, making seven diamond tricks right off the reel. These examples of winning by bad bidding are given as a warning. Never try stunts of this kind for there's nothing to such bidding. If you win once, you are encouraged to try again and you cannot help but lose out in the long run. Learn some system well and understand it thoroughly. Once you have mastered it, stick to it and you will get results. The system you choose is immaterial, but the application is everything. Let your partner know what he can expect of you and don't disappoint. Be dependable first, last and all the time.

The following problem was submitted by a correspondent, with the statement that he was unable to solve it and asking for assistance:

Problem

	Hearts — K, 8, 7, 3, 2 Clubs — none Diamonds — none Spades — A, 10
Hearts — Q, 6 Clubs — K, 10, 4, 2 Diamonds — none Spades — Q	Y A B Z	Hearts — 9, 5 Clubs — 8, 7 Diamonds — 10, 4, 3 Spades — none
	Hearts — none Clubs — A, Q, 5 Diamonds — none Spades — 9, 6, 4, 2

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win five of the seven tricks against any defense? Solution in next Article.

Smith To Retire From Race For Nomination, Is Prediction

Editor's Note: The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(BY FRED HOLMES
Washington Correspondent for The Boone County Recorder)

Four weeks ago your correspondent predicted that Alfred E. Smith would not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year and would ultimately come out in support of Franklin D. Roosevelt. This paper was among the first to unequivocally vouchsafe that prediction.

Since then we have had to listen to an outcry by Tammany at its ratification meeting in favor of Al Smith for President in 1932, and there are not a few who persist in the belief that this was music in the ex-Gov. ears. However, well known as it is that Smith still retains a host of followers and admirers, it may be said that the ex-Governor has no illusions. He knows perfectly well that he cannot be nominated next year, and he prosably is aware that it would not be practicable for him to seek the nomination.

If Smith does not know, every other thoughtful individual knows that when he made Roosevelt Governor of New York in 1928 he closed the door upon himself politically. If New York were to offer a candidate for the Democratic nomination, its candidate certainly would be the present Governor, not the defeated ex-Governor. All the Democrats who objected to again facing in 1932 the awkward issue which Smith's candidacy stirred up in 1928 were sure to commit themselves to Roosevelt as a means of avoiding the necessity of nominating Smith. The story that Smith is under obligations to Roosevelt is a fallacy, for quite the contrary is true, and there is no legitimate reason why Smith might not conscientiously oppose the Roosevelt nomination.

Smith faces a situation in which another man is sure to have the New York delegation, perhaps steadily, at least for a few ballots, if the Tammany threats against Roosevelt are to be taken seriously. Pertinently it may be asked what chance has a man of nomination without the support of the delegation from his own State, and when the leaders of other States, no matter how much they may admire him, think that his nomination would entail more risk than that of any other candidate? No, Smith knows well enough that he cannot be a candidate—and he will not be a candidate.

Obviously the question arises what is he going to do? Clinton Gilbert, who writes a Democratic column in the intensely Republican and Administration-supporting Philadelphia Public Ledger confirms your correspondent's prediction as follows:

"As long as the New York delegation wishes to stand for Roosevelt, Smith, who probably favors Young or Baker or any one else to Roosevelt, will have to be for Roosevelt. He may even have to take the bitter medicine of having to make the nominating speech for Roosevelt. Of course, if Tammany really means to desert Roosevelt, as its leaders privately threaten to do, Smith may exercise a powerful influence in selecting the man who will finally be nominated. That is his one great chance to be the leader of his party in the 1932 convention."

We—and this includes the President of the United States—have been entertaining the Premier of France—not to mention his charming daughter. The coming of Pierre Laval to confer with President Hoover is an event of international significance which should not be lost sight of in the official ceremonies of welcome. No trifling errand could have brought him across the Atlantic and it goes without saying that his visit is much more than one of mere courtesy. Without any thundering pronouncement, he has made it perfectly clear that he is hoping to find a basis of cooperation with the United States in dealing not only with the present crisis but with hopes and fears for the future.

What France has asked before, and what M. Laval doubtless requested from President Hoover, is an assurance that the U. S. will not again stand aloof in a kind of proud sense of national self-sufficiency when there is a threat of war on a large scale. In other words, France feels the need of supplementing the Briand-Kellogg treaty. She would as the American Government to agree to that "constructive pact" which Secretary Stimson at one time, when in London, seemed disposed to accept for his Government, but which afterward was repudiated at Washington. According to the strong French conviction, along that path only lies security for France. Once assure her of that and she is ready to go to the limit in the way ofdisarmament.

Shortly after the arrival of M. Laval he clearly indicated that he did not expect his long pilgrimage to have been in vain and what he expected to take back with him some form of agreement between France and the United States. This, on the whole, is contrary to the Hoover-Stimson view that nothing very concrete can be expected of the Laval conversations.

The Premier's revelation came about in an interesting manner. Dressed in a Prince Albert coat and his proverbial white tie, and fingering a cigarette, M. Laval faced half a hundred press representatives. One of them asked him whther he expected to secure any definite agreement out of his conversations with President Hoover or merely to improve general relations. To this the Premier replied:

"If the sole purpose of the President of the Council or Ministers in coming to Washington was to improve relations between the United States and France and create a warmer spirit between the two sister republics, the trip would have been unnecasary and superfluous. It is necessary for us to arrive at definite and concrete"——

At this point Premier Laval hesitated, as if he were perhaps going further than he had wished, and then continued:

"Let us give you a resume of the entire situation. President Hoover and I expect to discuss all problems and as far as possible seek a solution in regard to some of them. Coming after the conversations in Paris, London and Berlin, this meeting in Washington marks an epoch in the direction of closer international cooperation."

In this connection it might be added that considering the present situation, the future position of this country toward the League of Nations is a question which in various Washington circles is earnestly, hot to say heatedly, debated. In Washington there is deep feeling about the League, and a little group of Senators, known as "irreconcilables," have gathered around them a following almost as vociferous as themselves. Outside of certain large journalistic figures, all of the most violent anti-League and anti-Court people are here. The truth is that outside of Washington there is no report that anyone is having a spasm over the question. Sentiment here about the League and the Court, as about many other things, is but mildly reflected among the people outside.

MAKE STUDY OF GRAYSON FARMS

A report on a detailed study of farming in Grayson county, made by the department of farm economics of the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky, contains answers to the question, "Why do some farmers make more money than others?"

The more successful farmers obtained larger crop yields, had livestock which were more productive, and used their labor more efficiently. The better farmers had more cows, sheep, hogs, chickens and turkeys.

The study indicates that the well being families in the region is dependent in a large measure upon their producing an ample supply of foods for home use, particularly vgetables, fruits and dairy and poultry products.

Following an account of the situation found in Grayson county, the authors of the bulletin outline systems of management for an 80-acre farm, 150-acre farm and a 2-acre farm. Effort is made in each instance to determine the crops and livestock and combinations of crops and livestock most likely to give the highest net returns for the use of the land, labor and funds.

Copies of the bulletin may be obtained through county agricultural agents or by writing to the Experiment Station. Ask for bulletin No. 317, "Farm Organization and Management in Grayson county."

LEG BAND LAYERS FOR HATCHING EGGS

Many good poultry raisers select breeding hens about this time of the fall. Hens that are still laying on Nov. 1 usually are good breeders, says Dr. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry work at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky.

The later a hen lays in the summer or the longer the period over which she lays, the greater will be her production, so that the high producer is the late layer and hence the late molter, provided her summer ration has been balanced, Dr. Martin points out in a circular called, "When and How to Cull."

Leg band hens that are still laying and use their eggs for hatching next spring, is his suggestion.

Wiley Holmes of Harlan county reports a yield of 3 tons of Korean lespedeza hay to the acre where a ton of hydrated lime was applied. Frank Risen, a Taylor county farmer, cut nine tons of lespedeza hay from two and a half acres.

Six Bell county farmers report good yields of Neal's Paymastr variety of corn. Corn yields and acreage in the county are larger than usual.

Three thousand tons of limestone will be applied to the land in Trigg county this year, the county agent estimates.

E. P. Trammel grew corn that will yield 50 bushels to the acre on Marsh creek land in McCreary county which he tiled drained last spring. It previously had produced little.

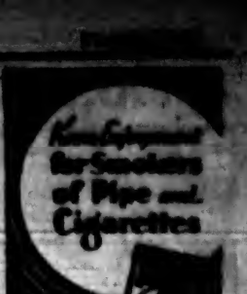
Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years



"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

Next Friday night Nov. 6th, the Burlington High School Tomcats and Kittens will journey to Hamilton High school where they will open their basket ball season. Since Burlington has no foot ball team they start basket ball earlier than usual. The Hamilton team is said to be stronger this year than it has been in many years. Monday morning Prof. E. E. Kirkwood appointed Martha Blythe, Rosa Pettit, Londa Lee Jarrell, Zena Garrison, Carol Rice and Bailey Greenup to act as librarians. One of those six will be in the library all of the time. Any pupil who checks out books must give the librarian his name, the name of the book and the number. This is being done in order to keep our library together as it has many valuable books in it. A schedule of the rules will be printed in this column next week.

At a meeting held by the Girls Reserve last Wednesday two delegates were appointed to represent them at the Girls Reserve Conference to be held at Alexandria, Ky., Nov. 20 to 22. The delegates are Lucille Ryle, Marjorie Hensley and Miss Anderson, the advisor. These girls are expected to receive some valuable information at the Conference and are to report back to the Girls Reserve at the next meeting.

Due to a teachers meeting held at Covington on Friday of this week there will be no school at the Burlington school on that day. Some of our teachers will attend.

The Senior class is waiting with anticipation the arrival of their rings which were ordered last week from Herff-Jones Co., repreented by Mr. Willis Berkshire. Mr. Berkshire is very fortunate in selling his rings to this class, this being the largest senior class B. H. S. has ever had. There are sixteen enrolled.

Thelma Aylor and Donald Kirkpatrick were absent from school last week.

7th and 8th Grades

Betsy Eddins was absent from school Monday.

Elmore Ryle returned to school this week after a few days absence.

Basket ball is in full swing and all players are working hard with Coach Lamb.

Don't forget the P. T. A. meetings.

Clara Jennie Hossman, daughter of the late Frank Hossman, and Mrs. Sophia Hossman, was born March 14th. 1883. She united with the Hebron Lutheran church October 1898, and continued as an active member throughout her life. On Nov. 24th, 1904, she was married to O. C. Hafer. Three children were born to them, a daughter and two sons. She entered into rest October 29, 1931, at the age of 48 years, leaving her husband and three children, her mother one brother and countless relatives and friends who mourn her passing. If we would attempt to characterize Clara by one word that would be "unselfishness." In the home she was a devoted daughter, wife and mother in the sweetest sense of the word devotion. She gave generously of her time and talents to her church, serving either as organist or in the choir for more than thirty years, as a teacher in the Sunday school and as an officer in the Missionary Society ever since it was organized. Long will she be remembered in the community as a dependable and untiring worker in all its progressive activities. A very appropriate service was conducted at Hebron Lutheran church Sunday afternoon Nov. 1, 1931; at 2:30. Rev. E. R. Wagner, of Dayton, Ohio, delivered the sermon. Her popularity was demonstrated by the large audience that gathered to pay their last sad respects to her. She was laid to rest in the cemetery near by beneath a bower of beautiful flowers. Pall-bearers were: William and Albert Baker, Elmer and Chesley Goodridge, Luther Rouse and John Eye. Seven of her Sunday school class carried flowers. Misses Vera Goodridge, Mary Louise Rouse, Dorothy Conner, Betty Grigler, Evelyn Conrad, Della Dolwick and Wanita Gordon. The Eastern Stars also carried flowers. W. A. Bullock, funeral Director had charge of the arrangements. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in the sad hour of sorrow.

VOLUME XII — Established 1875 — BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1931 — NUMBER 47

ALL SCHOOLS

WILL RECEIVE LARGE POSTER-PORTRAIT OF GEORGE WASHINGTON FROM CONGRESSMAN BRENT SPENCE

Announcement was made today by Congressman Brent Spence of Fort Thomas, Kentucky, that every school room of every school, in the Sixth District of Kentucky, will receive a beautiful portrait-poster of George Washington, executed in colors.

The portrait to be used in these posters is a reproduction of the famous Gilbert Stuart Athenaeum painting and is 22 inches by 28 inches in size. This poster was selected after a good deal of study, and is considered the finest example of poster making available.

The poster-picture featuring George Washington are being distributed by Congressman Spence in cooperation with the U. S. George Washington Bicentennial Commission of Washington, D. C., in order to stimulate interest among the thousands of school children of the district in the coming nine months celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of the Father of Our Country.

Congressman Spence is in constant touch with the activities of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission which was created by Congress to formulate and execute plans for the great celebration in 1932.

The United States Commission is placing a good deal of emphasis on the cooperation of the school children of America in this historic event. This poster-picture is just one feature of its work.

Congressman Spence announced that he will see to it that the schools, clubs, churches, and fraternal and patriotic organizations in the [illegible] are supplied

The George Washington Bicentennial Celebration will begin on February 22, 1932, and lasts until the following Thanksgiving Day.

Congressman Spence last week also presented the Boone County Recorder with one of the aforementioned portraits and for which we are exceedingly grateful. It is indeed a handsome poster and one which every school should be proud. We are planning to have it framed so that it may be more easily preserved.

BIRTHDAYS

CELEBRATED THREE AT A TIME AT HOME OF B. C. KIRTLEY, OF EAST BEND—CANDLES NOT COUNTED ON MRS. KIRTLEY'S CAKE

A three-ply birthday celebration was observed last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Kirtley, of the East Bend community. The observance was in honor of Mr. Kirtley, Shelby Acra and Elijah Stephens, both of Burlington. A large number of friends and relatives of the three men attended and immensely enjoyed the day. The feature of the day was the fact that Blufe wouldn't let them count the candles on his cake. When the cake was placed on the table Blufe did not wait for them to be blown out—he pulled 'em out. The guests, however, evidently overlooked a bet. They could have crossed up their host by counting the holes. But Blufe is safe for another year, unless some one digs up the family Bible.

ACHIEVEMENT EXERCISES HELD BY 4-H CLUBS

The final 4-H club meetings of the year and achievement exercises were held by the Norbeh Chamlons, Waltonians and X-Ll-All 4-H clubs on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

HONORED

[illegible] COUNTY GIRL

According to a dispatch in the Tulsa World, published at Tulsa, Oklahoma, Mrs. Clifton Voris recently received a very high honor when she was selected from two hundred singers to sing at the international convention of Christian churches, which convened at Wichita, Kansas.

Mrs. Voris, who is the choir leader at the Tulsa Christian church, was further honored when she returned to Tulsa after the convention by being invited to be guest soloist at the First Baptist church in that city on the following Sunday. She was one of the six chosen from the 200 singers and opened the musicians concert at the convention by singing "Open the Gates of the Temple." She also sang in the convention quintet, which was broadcast over a chain network.

Mrs. Voris is a daughter of Arthur (Podge) Alloway, well known thruout this section in base ball circles. We wonder whether any of the old base ball fans in Wichita, where Podge once was an umpire, recognized any of the qualities in her voice contained in Podge's when he used to yell—"Play Ball." Probably not, although Podge, himself, is no bad singer.

PLAY TO BE REPEATED

The P. T. A. play entitled "The Alley Daffodil" was staged before a capacity house here last Saturday evening and all who witnessed the performance were enthusiastic with their praise. The association realized a nice profit, although expenses were rather heavy.

Consequently they readily ensponded to a strong urge to repeat the show this week. So on Saturday evening at 7:30 a second opportunity will be given those who saw it and first chance to those who didn't. The same admission prices will prevail, namely, 30 cents for reserved seats and 15 and 25 cents general admission.

C. A. Fowler, ex-jailer of Boone county, enters the ranks of "Believe It Or Not" exponents with the report that he picked well ripened grapes from his arbor here on Monday, November 9th. Two bunches were left on the arbor for Armistice Day, so, if you doubt the report, drop around and see for yourself.

A FOUR PAGE NEWSPAPER THIS WEEK

For the first time in many years the RECORDER this week is publishing a four-page newspaper.

This is made necessary on account of the curtailed lineage of advertising we are now carrying.

As everyone familiar with newspaper work is thoroughly conversant, the food upon which every paper lives comes from two sources, to-wit, advertising and subscriptions. Subscriptions are slow. Only recently we have been compelled to reduce our rate substantially.

Advertising on account of the slowness of general business, is poor. Therefore, we are forced to drop back to a four-page publication. We hope that this will be for only a short time, but we shall be compelled to continue the policy as long as conditions remain as they are.

However, we shall publish every line of "real news" that is possible to obtain, or that is voluntarily sent to us.

As Andy says, "the re-pression is on.

ROLL CALL

BEGINS ARMISTICE DAY—ANNUAL CAMPAIGN FOR RED CROSS FUNDS IS UNDER WAY —TO END THANKSGIVING

The annual Roll Call of members to the American Red Cross begins Wednesday Nov. 11th, Armistice day, and continues thru Thanksgiving. In each precinct of the county membership blanks have been placed with workers for this great organization, the only one of its kind in existence which keeps in readiness to respond at a moments [illegible] of eggs [illegible] found to his utter horror and astonishment that he had several dozen 'cold storage" eggs in stock. Can you imagine cold storage eggs in a country grocery?

Then "Proc" proceeded further with the investigation and began to scratch his head and check up on the source of his recent egg purchases. He found that all purchases had been made from home folks, except two. Two parties had entered his store and offered eggs for sale, saying they were farmers from Kenton county. It so happens that the hen fruit right now is rather scarce hereabouts and Mr. Brothers made the purchase from both parties.

He then called Burlington merchants and found that parties answering the same description had sold eggs to them also. Investigation at local stores then revealed that they had been victims of the same scheme. So there's a new racket—bootlegging eggs.

If you take any eggs to town to sell, especially to "Proc" Brothers, you had better take along proper identification both for yourself and for your eggs

FLORENCE P. T. A.

Regular meeting of the Florence P. T. A. will be held in the Auditorium of the school on Friday Nov. 13th, at 7:45 P. M. All members and parents are requested to be present. After the business session a program will be given which will be in charge of the teachers of the grades.

Your school needs your co-operation. Mrs. Robert C. Eastman, president, will be in charge.

Friends of Mrs. Mary Goodridge, who is suffering from the effects of a fall in which she sustained a broken limb, will be pleased to learn that she is resting fairly easily and doing as well as could be expected under the trying circumstances. The limb was broken within half an inch of the hip joint and has been placed in a plaster cast. She is at Booth Memorial hospital, Covington.

Mrs. J. W. Kelly and Mrs. Leon Aylor were visiting Mrs. Kelly's sister, Mrs. B. J. Crisler and Mr. Crisler, at Petersburg, Monday of this week.

Gulley & Pettit have a new supply of fresh mountain Sorghum Molasses.

BOOTLEGGING

BUT ITS THE TAMER INGREDIENT OF EGG-NOG—THERE'S A NEW RACKET, BOOTLEGGING EGGS.

There's a new racket! If you don't believe it ask "Proc" Brothers, Limaburg merchant. Monday morning "Proc" rushed into the court house with a complaint. Someone just had rushed into his store with a complaint. And that was "Proc's" complaint. Not because someone had rushed into his store, but that they had a complaint.

You see, it was like this. Mr. Brothers was complaining that a lady had complained to him that she had purchased "stale" eggs at his store. Now, if there is anything that "Proc" hates it is for someone to claim that he sells anything that [illegible]

ELECTED

SENATOR IN KENTON COUNTY—O. M. ROGERS, OF ERLANGER, RECEIVES FINE MAJORITY—SUCCEEDS ANOTHER BOONE COUNTY MAN IN THE UPPER HOUSE

Another Boone county citizen has been honored by the voters of Kenton county, O. M. Rogers, of Erlanger, was elected to the State Senate by a fine majority at the election last Tuesday.

Oddly enough Mr. Rogers succeeds Senator Sam Adams, also a Boone county product. It will no doubt be a sacrifice for Mr. Rogers to leave his large law practice to spend sixty days in Frankfort in January, but the business of his clients will be left in capable hands, as his son Jimmy is rapidly developing into a competent practitioner.

On behalf of his Boone county friends, we say, "Congratulations

LOSES ARM

WHEN HAND IS CRUSHED IN COG WHEELS OF ROAD ROLLER—IRVIN ROUSE, OF UNION, IS VICTIM OF HORRID ACCIDENT

One of the most regrettable accidents that ever has occurred in Boone county befell Irvin Rouse, of Union, last Wednesday morning.

Mr Rouse was operating a county roller in the south end of the county, where his father, A. O. Rouse, county road overseer, was superintending some road improvements. The young man, who always is very careful and painstaking with machinery he has in his care, suddenly noticed a bolt falling toward two large cog wheels. Knowing that if the bolt reached the mesh of the cogs that it would be fatal to the machinery he made a grab for the bolt.

In his haste to get the bolt he allowed his right hand to fall into the mesh, where it was completely mashed. He at once was placed in an auto and driven at terrific speed to the Booth hospital in Covington. Blood flowed so profusely from the wound during the journey that it was feared that the injury might prove fatal.

Upon arrival at the hospital surgeons immediately placed him under an anaesthetic and removed the hand and forearm about midway between the wrist and elbow. He recovered immediately from the effects of the operation and is doing nicely.

Mr. Rouse is a young and active man and it certainly is a shame that he had to suffer such a grave misfortune. That he has a host of friends who are deeply sympathetic is evidenced by the fact that more than a hundred visited his room at the hospital last Sunday.

MAJORITY

FOR LAFFOON IN BOONE COUNTY IS SOURCE OF RELATION AMONG BOONE COUNTY DEMOCRATS—MARGIN IS 1,826

Boone county Democrats are jubilant over the outcome of the state election Tuesday of last week, primarily, of course, because the entire ticket was swept into office.

Secondarily, but of almost parallel interest to local partisans, the county returned a substantial majority—the best in years. At the same time they also point to the fact that every precinct in the county was Democratic for the first time in a major election since the presidential race of 1916, when Woodrow Wilson led the party into the White House for the last time—until 1932.

Since that time Constance has been listed in the Republican column continuously, while Beaver has done likewise since 1924, when she started to "go Republican." Then in the presidential race of 1928 several others followed suit. But it was different last Tuesday and Democrats are beginning to think and talk "old times" again. After the count had been completed last Tuesday in the first few precincts the Recorder went to press with the prediction that the majority would run probably as high as 1,-500. It climbed to 1,826, just twenty-six votes higher than anyone had dared to predict. Predictions centered around 1,200 to 1,500, with a scant few of the most optimistic saying that it would be 1,800. However, when Beaver and Constance came into the Democratic column it looked like the latter figure would be reached.

When Liston Hempfling, Republican member of the Election Commission, reached Bulington last Wednesday morning to help start the count he publicly stated that Constance might be a surprise to the Democrats. Many thought that he was "kidding," but the tabulation of the vote proved that Liston "knew his Republicans."

[illegible] charity, are pleased [illegible] success of their efforts and for which they deserve many thanks at the hands of their party in the county. Unstinted praise also is being handed to Judge J. M. Lassing, whose untiring efforts on the stump at impromptu meetings with the committeemen and others were fruitful. His last speech was made at Constance on Monday night. His laconic remark in that speech that "tomorrow the nation will be looking toward Constance" certainly must have had weight.

Responsibility for the affairs of the state now rests squarely upon the shoulders of the Democrats, who will be in full control of the state machinery after December 8. They face the situation with an enormous debt, but are confident that they will reduce that vast obligation and bear out their campaign pledge. With a Republican Governor and a Democratic House and Senate it has been disastrous. For the last four years it has been a rudderless ship.

The Democrats must make good.

A precinct tabulation of the vote in the race for Governor, as well as of the school and town races, follows herwith:

PAUL IN JERUSALEM
Acts 21:27-39

Really romantic incidents about the third misdenary journey of Paul are found n Acts, chapters 20 and 21. Follow with him on his return from Corinth. You will not go to sleep as did the man at Troas who fell out of the window. A final good bye was said to the Ephesian elders at Miletus, for Paul was aware that he was advancing to his own death when he proceeded to Jerusalem. Keep track of the "we" passages for then Dr. Luke, the author of Acts, was with Paul.

Plenty of trouble awaited Paul at Jerusalem. The people scarcely said "thank you" for the fine offering he brought for the poor saints there before they told him of the criticism scandal-mongers were delighting in.

To offset this Paul agreed to undertake a vow and pay the costs for others making a similar vow. While they were in the Temple courts the cry was raised that Paul had brought others than Jews into the sacred area. Then there was an uproar indeed and soldiers rushed down from the castle of Antonia to rescue Paul from the mob.

As the prisoner was being dragged up the stairs into the castle he saw the fine opportunity to speak once more in behalf of Jesus Christ. Here was the crowd surging about and the stairs furnished an ideal pulpit. Paul rehearsed his own conversion and the hissing broke out again and Paul was taken within to be examined by scouring. But just as the lash was about to descend on his bare back, Paul asked a question that had a startling effect. He asked: "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman and uncondemned?" 22:25. Read all the record and especially about the vision of commendation, encouragement and promise that came the next night, 23:11.

John M. Lassing, Jr., is able to be on the street again after a baffling illness of more than two months. While still very weak and emaciated he seems to be noticeably improved and feels that he is well on the way to a complete recovery, which is great news to his friends in this community.

A beautiful ring-necked pheasant made an informal and unannounced call upon the citizens of the county seat last Sunday afternoon. He dropped in on the boys loafing on the sidewalk and strutted cockily about the streets. He visited a few chickens, but, finding them rather unsociable, with a whir of his wings he was away to find his mate. It is hoped that the bloodthirsty nimrod will let him live this winter. If allowed to survive he will help his associates, which local sportsmen have been endeavoring to preserve, to multiply, so that in a few more years hunters may have some real sport.

The Florence High School basket ball schedule will be announced thru the columns of the Recorder soon. Coach C. G. Lamb, who had splendid success with the Burlington Tomcats while here, will have charge of the team. They have been named the Knights and Nightingales. A lot of symphony and significance in those names.

(CONTRIBUTED)

The local M. W. A. Camp had one of the most enjoyable meetings last Tuesday night, Nov. 3rd, that it has had for years.

When Consul Elijah Stephens arrived at the Hall he found it filled to its capacity, then it occurred to him that was his birthday and to say that he was surprised is only putting it mildly. He didn't just act seanely for a while. A splendid program was prepared for the occasion by the members of the camp. At the close a fine birthday cake which had 66 candles on it, was then presented to Neighbor Stephens by the Past Consul Mark Cook in a very appropriate manner. A nice lunch was then served by the ladies of the Camp and all departed wishing Neighbor Stephens many more happy birthdays.

John Acra, of Burlington R. D. 1, was in town Friday. Mr. Acra is one of our best farmers and is always up with his work.

TO REPRESENT KENTUCKY

Clyde Burnett, of Wayne county, and Martha Gray, of Harrison county, will represent Kentucky in the 4-H Club health contest which will be held at the National Boys and Girls Club Congress during the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago. In a contest, held during Junior Week at the University of Kentucky, they were found to be the healthiest among the 20,000 Junior 4-H Club members in the state. They will compete for national honors at the Chicago congress of 4-H Club members from every state in the Union.

NOTED MEN SPEAK AT DEDICATION OF NEW FARM BUILDING

Internationally known engineers attended the dedication of the new agricultural engineering building on the Experiment Station farm at the University of Kentucky. Among the speakers were Prof. S. H. McCrory, chief of the agricultural engineering bureau in the United States Department of Agriculture, and one of the nation's noted farm experts; and Dr. J. B. Davidson of Iowa State College, who recently spent a year in Russia advising the Soviet government regarding the mechanization of its agriculture. Other engineers in attendance included Prof. William Aitkenhead and Prof. T. E. Hienton of Purdue University.

"In the dedication of this fine building, Kentucky joins the growing list of states whose citizens recognize in agricultural engineering a force for progress," declared Prof. McCrory. "I am sure that the investment this structure represents will prove one of the best Kentucky has made. It can hardly be otherwise, for it is dedicated to two of its noble resources, the youth and the agriculture of the state."

The new building provides facilities for experimental work and teaching the use of the latest types of farm machinery, control of soil erosion, drainage of land, construction of farm buildings, use of electricity and other power in farming, sanitation, and other engineering problems involved in modern agriculture.

Many new features will be afforded the returning students and with the full cooperation of the civic clubs in Georgetown and the local post of the American Legion, this Homecoming bodes to be the best yet held at Georgetown College.

genuine cruller or Dutch doughnut only in being fried in deep fat. These are the doughnuts which the hearty Yankee pioneers used to eat for breakfast, preferably "dunked" in coffee. But they are not the delicacies which most folks have in mind when they think of doughnuts.

The genuine cruller is basically different from the Yankee doughnut. The dough from which it is made is much shorter and sweeter, and in its perfection is of a consistency which requires careful handling if it is to be dropped into the frying kettle without losing its shape. The standard shape of the cruller is, now, a hole surrounded by a rim of dough, but the old-fashioned doughnut was composed of a long strip of dough twisted like a section of rope. Indeed, the word doughnut is merely a perversion of "dough-not." But whatever the shape, whatever the consistency and quality of the ingredients, we say without hesitation that there is no such thing as a bad doughnut. The only thing that can spoil a doughtnut, in our opinion, is to sprinkle it with powdered sugar. That makes it into a Frenchified kind of confection which is not only un-American but very difficult to brush off the front of one's vest.

MEMBER KENTUCKY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DOUGHNUTS

Somebody has put forward the suggestion that October of each year should be celebrated as National Doughnut Month. We say "amen," to that, but we would broaden the proposal a bit by adding November, December, January, February, March, April, May and June. The doughnut is good eating in any of those months. We have eaten doughnuts in July, August and September without any harmful effect. By all means let us celebrate the doughnut.

In most parts of the country the word doughnut means the toothsome delicacy which was first introduced into America by the Dutch settlers of New Amsterdam, who called them "crullers." Away down East in New Engand the people of the older generation today still call the Dutch crullers "fried cakes" to distinguish them from the original Yankee doughnut, which is made from bread dough, only slightly sweetened, and which resembles the

MY 4-H ACHIEVEMENT STORY
By a 4-H Club Member

I am a member of the Norbeh Champion 4-H Club of Hebron. This is my fifth year in club work and second year in the Garden project. My project this year is an acre of tomatoes. I will tell you how I grew my 4-H project.

I bought my seed, prepared my seed bed and hot beds early. For the hot bed I used large planks to make the frame and nailed them together. Then I carried manure and packed it around the sides. This was to keep the cold air out of the bed. I then carried ten bushels of manure and put in the bottom of the bed which helped to keep the plants from freezing.

The seed were sown in rows and watered each night it didn't rain to sprout them. When the plants were about three inches high I transplanted them into a cold frame on my brothers farm. The ground in this bed was about the same as that on which I grew my tomatoes and the plants grew nice and stocky until around the middle of May, when I transplanted them in the field.

The tomatoes were set in three blocks. Two blocks of Bonnie Best and one block of Matchless. The three comprise about an acre. I plowed my crop three times and hoed them out after each plowing. The plants grew good and at this writing am still getting tomatoes off my Matchless plants.

Today I have sold 36 bushels for $90.40. I have cleared $42.60 from my project.

LLOYD HANKINS,

LOOKING BACKWARD

The Corncracker 4-H Club of Constance looks backward with great pleasure with the success that the club has had. This is the fifth year for the club, and practically the same leaders are in charge now as at the beginning. Out of the five years of club work the Corncrackers have entered demonstration teams four years and have had three teams to represent the county at Lexington Junior Week. The club had a member on the county judging team last year and two members this year. However the judging team this year did not go to Louisville because the dairy team went instad of the poultry judging team.

The Corncrackers have finished their projects 100 per cent for four consecutive years, and at least 90 per cent of the club members have received prizes at the fairs for the last four years.

In a year of depression the Corncracker Club has not suffered for lack of finances. The money expended has been used wisely and for the exclusive use of the club. The treasury will show a surplus at the end of the year.

The Corncracker Club does not wish to take all the honor of the club work. Even if the club has won the Boone County Bankers' Trophy for three consecutive years they have had some strong competition with several other 4-H Clubs. The Corncrackers meet the members of other clubs at Junior Week, at camp at the fairs and other clubs, and then it is not the Corncracker Club but 4-H Club members from Boone county. Other clubs have defeated us at different times in certain activities for which our club wishes to compliment you for your fine work. In some activities other club members have taken the honors. We do not envy you for that. The Corncracker Club is made up of 22 boys and gris who can smile in defeat as wil as to win. Every member is a sticke.

VIVIAN HOOD,
Secretary.

COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

HAMILTON BEATS BURLINGTON IN SCHOOL NOTES

Last Friday night at Hamilton the Burlington High School Tomcats and Kittens came thru with their first victory of the season by defeating both teams. The boys score was 24 to 3 and the Girls was 19 to 9. Coach McMillan had his girls in fine shape and they surely did their part.

In the first half the score was 8 to 4 in favor of the Kittens, the Hamilton girls making their scores in the first quarter but were unable to make any more during the game. There were no outstanding stars on the Kittens team in this game as each played equally well. During the boys' game two of the Hamilton boys were put out on fouls which might account for such a big score of the Tomcats, but we have rules in the game and must go by them. In the first half the score was 13 to 3 in favor of the Tomcats. Like the girls the Hamilton boys were unable to get a score after the first quarter. There also was no outstanding star in this game as Coach Kelly has a team that one man is just as valuable as the other. Next Friday night Nov. 13th the Tomcats and Kittens will hook up with the strong Petersburg team at the Burlington High School Gym. For the past four years Petersburg has been putting some fast teams on the floor and has made some large scores against B. H. S. but this time we hope the tide will turn. Seeing it and believing it are two different things, so be on hand next Friday night and see for yourself. The game will begin at 7:30 P. M., and the admission will be 25c and 15c.

The Juniors and Seniors are glad to say we have completed Chaucer in English.

The Economics Class is planning to enter an essay contest. The subject of the essay is to be "The Problem of Forestry in Kentucky."

The play which was given Saturday night by P. T. A. was very well attended.

Several from here attended the game at Hamilton Friday night.

Last week we received twenty new books from the Bellevview school which helps to make our Library bigger. Following are the rules and regulations of the Library for the pupils of the Burlington school:

1. Library books may not be taken from the Library at any time if not properly recorded by Librarian.
2. Books taken out over night must be returned to the Library by the beginning of the second period the following mmorning.
3. Books of fiction shall be returned one week from date of withdrawal.

Magazines may be taken out for one night only and they must be signed for as other books and returned promptly.

5. No reference books may be taken from building at any time.
6. Orderly conduct and proper precaution must be had from all students while in the Library.
7. Students will be held accountable for any damage done to books other than the usual wear.
8. Student Librarians have charge of the Library at all times and shall give assistance in any way that will help students in the use of the Library.

7th and 8th Grades

Harold Ogden and Everett Cress were absent from school Monday.

We have five pupils to represent us at the State Tournament Friday and Saturday of this week at Lexington.

Tuesday was the first day we have had a perfect attendance this year.

The 7th and 8th grades gave their first chapel program Thursday afternoon.

5th and 6th Grades

The 5th and 6th Grades will give a Thanksgiving Chapel on Monday Nov 23.

PROFESSOR SCHOOL NOTES
(Post Grad. School Reporter)

Last Friday school was dismissed in order that all our teachers might attend the Northern Kentucky Educational Association Convention held in Covington. Everyone of our teachers were present.

The Library is nearing completion. All the shelves are in and the tables are made and ready for use. A goodly number of books now adorn the shelves and as soon as the cards arrive, books may be taken out. Miss Virginia Adkins is to be Librarian.

Our teams are now named. The boy's team is to be referred to as "The Florence Knights," led by Captain Charles (Red) Riggins. The Florence Nightingales will be led by Mary Evelyn Higgins, sister of the Captain of the boy's team.

Last Wdnesday in Chapel several boys and girls tried out for the honors of Cheer Leaders. All were good but the teams voted and chose Helen Miller and Donald Tanner as leaders in the noise making efforts.

Our first game is to be with Hamilton. It will take place either November 20th or 21st.

A debating team is to be organized to carry on contests with other schools. This should prove to be an interesting outside activity.

The regular P .T. A. meeting will be held Friday the 13th. A very special program has been arranged. The first, second and 3rd grades have been working on their parts for this program.

Wednesday Chapel was conducted by the fifth and sixth grades. A number of visitors were present and seemed well pleased with the offerings of the children.

The lawn has been graded and several trees have been set out. grass will soon be sown and in the spring we will have a most beautiful front to greet one's eye.

HEBRON HIGH NOTES.

Friday night, Nov. 6th, was a big night for Hebron High, first because for the first time we could play basket ball in our new gymnasium, and second it was the first game we have played this season. The Alexandria Camels were our opponents in this first game. It will be remembered that our girls' team was a winner last year and it seems that this year they have made a very good start. They were able to defeat the Alexandria girls 15-6.

The Hebron girls' line-up was as follows:

Kathryne Ryle .....Center
Eva Mae Grant.....Forward
Blanche Wohrley .....Forward
Adella Riddll .....Guard
Helen Grant .....Guard

The score for the boys' game was not in our favor, standing finally 35-10 for Alexandria and yet when we consider that we lost four good men last year, we are not discouraged over the results of the first game. Our line-up was:

Barney Turner .....Center
Jim Watts .....Forward
Lloyd Hankins .....Forward
John Dolwick .....Guard
Olan Elliott .....Guard

Friday night, Nov. 13th, our teams will go to Piner.

At a meeting of the Girl Reserve Club last week, Miss Shirley Aylor, the president of the club, and Miss Blanche Wohrley were chosen as delegates to the annual conference of the Northern Kentucky Girl Reserve Clubs. This year the conference is to be held at Alexandria, Nov. 21, 22, 23. Miss Elsie Vice will accompany the girls as faculty adviser.

Our Hallowe'en stunt show which was held Wednesday night, Nov. 4, was very well attended. Many of the grade and high school pupils took part in the various stunts and the audience seemed to find the entertainment very amusing. The program was as follows.

Song, Si and Sally—Loretta Baxter and John Dolwick.
Living Pictures from Riley—High School Students.
Dance—Wanda Birkle and Betty June Getker.
Mock Opeation—Sophomores and Juniors.
Songs—(Blackface) French Treadwell, Venom Masters and Wood Edwards.
Upside Down Drill—Intermediate Boys.
Mock Wedding—Freshman Boys.
Stations—High School Girls.
Clown Stunt—Woodford Crisler, Robert England, Randolph Elliott.
Prize Fight—High School Boys.

Olan Elliott, of the Junior Class, was master of ceremonies and acted as announcer for the different numbers.

Hunters Take Field Monday; Weather Is Hindrance To Sport

WARM ATMOSPHERE CURBS AMBITION OF MOST SPORTSMEN TO ESTABLISH RECORDS—LOCAL NIMROD, HOWEVER, ESTABLISHES UNIQUE MARK

The open season on hunting was ushered in Monday of this week under very unseasonable conditions. With the mercury hovering around summer heat hunters were forced to abandon the chase for rabbit and quail at frequent intervals in order that they might be able to complete the route they had planned for the day. Many, however, permitted fatigue to overcome their desire for game and left the fields at an early hour.

Game Warden Edwin Johnson, who was active all day investigating violations of the game law, reported few offenses. County Judge N. E. Riddell said Tuesday morning that he entered a fine in but one case, which is thought to be a record for the opening day. Warden Johnson was accompanied by Capt. Hughes Spurr, of near Lexington, a superior officer of Mr. Johnson with the State Game and Fish Commission.

The climatic conditions thwarted the ambitions of many of the most zealous hunters, who usually go out for game records. Seventeen rabbits killed by W. A. Pettit, of Burlington, is the greatest number knocked out by any one man, according to our best information this writing. Ray Poole, local barber, made the most unique record of all hunters by bagging his own dinner. Ray, a competent [illegible] rabbit.

[illegible] the sun was [illegible] Ray diligently pursuing a skunk, which he apparently was endeavoring to capture alive. Had he succeeded in that effort it indeed would have been the "end of a perfect day."

THE PRODIGAL RETURNS

Last year the State Game and Fish Commission, in their endeavor to stock the fields with pheasant, sent out a number of settings of eggs. County Attorney B. H. Riley, of near Union, received one of these settings, which was hatched successfully.

The young pheasants were cared for diligently and became great pets actually feeding from Mrs. Riley's hand. Suddenly they took to the field without a moments notice, their wild nature apparently having overcome the solicitous efforts of every member of the Riley-Blankenbeker household, including Ben, Jr., who was sorely grieved at the loss of his pets.

Monday morning, however, one of the feathered wanderers returned and, when overtures were made to him, readily responded. Evidently the booming of shot guns early Monday impressed upon Mr. Pheasant the safety of his former home. When danger and trouble impend prodigals do return.

ALL COUNTIES

ARE URGED TO KEEP FARM AGENTS AS MEANS OF CURBING DEPRESSION AMONG AGRICULTURISTS — "WHEN YOU ARE SICK YOU DON'T DISCHARGE THE DOCTOR," SAYS MAGAZINE

"This is no time to do without county agents," says an editorial in The Progressive Farmer and Southern Ruralist for Nov. 1-14. "In such times as these, when the prices of farm products are low and taxes high, there is a strong urge to reduce county expenses. Some of the less productive expenditures and offices are created by state law or by state constitution and therefore such constructive servants as the county agricultural agent and the home demonstration agent become a mark for those who seek a reduction in county expenses.

"The services rendered by the county agricultural agent and the home demonstration agent are of such value in promoting better living and increasing the production of all crops, that any county agent, even though he did no more than carry the methods and practices of a half dozen of the best farmers to a few score of the less successful ones, would earn many times the salary he gets. That is true as relates to the production side of agriculture, but at this time perhaps the services of the county agent are more needed, in popular opinion, in the marketing of farm products, than in producing crops. CROP REPORT

SHOW INCREASED PRODUCTION IN KENTUCKY—TOBACCO IS 20 PER CENT GREATER THAN AVERAGE — ALL GRAINS IN ABUNDANCE

Kentucky's total production of tobacco, all types, in 1931, is estimated at 503,346,000 lbs., in the November crop report for Kentucky issued here by the Louisville office of the U. S. Division of Crop and Livestock Estimates. This is about one-half per cent decrease from the October 1 forecast; is 35 per cent more than the 372,151,000 lbs., produced in Kentucky in 1930; and is 83 per cent more than the state's average annual production of 327,761,000 lbs., 1925-29 inclusive.

The Kentucky corn crop this season is estimated at 91,488,000 bushels compared to 30,402,000 bushels last year, and an average annual production of 81,751,000 bushels 1925-29 inclusive. About 85 per cent of this season's corn crop in Kentucky is reported by farmers as being of merchantable quality. The average yield of corn per acre this year in Kentucky is 32.5 bushels compared to only 10.8 bushels in 1930, and a 10-year average of 27.2 bushels. The crop of 1930 was 2,093,552,000 bushels, and the 5-year average 1925-29, was 2,760,753,000 bushels.

The amount of corn remaining on farms in the United States on Nov. 1, 1931, is estimated at 4.4 per cent of the crop of 1930, or about 92,837,000 bushels compared with 72,338,000 bushels on Nov. 1, 1930, and an average of 96,961,000 bushels for the five years 1925-29.

The W. M. U. of Big Bone met and held their regular meeting Thursday Nov. 10th, at the home of Mrs. Lizzie Schwenke, 13 members being present. Also several visitors. All enjoyed the day very much.

We failed to get out the notes to our county papers for our Society which met at the home of the Misses Taylor near Union, and was impossible for the chairman to attend, but useless to say the day was enjoyed by all.

We are planning to take Mission Study Book on Christianity China Creation which we are hoping each one will try to get this book as we are going right along with our Mission study.

MISS VIVIAN HOOD, OF CONSTANCE, WINS GENERAL SCHOLARSHIP CHAMPIONSHIP—SECOND STRAIGHT TIME THAT BOONE TAKES THIS HONOR—FLORENCE STUDENT ALSO LANDS FIRST

If medals were awarded for progress Boone county would unquestionably receive one of the [illegible] of the State Rural School Tournament committee.

Last Saturday at Lexington Boone county schools finished third in scholarship tests, where as last year they had finished fourth. Three years ago they were placed way down the list. The tournament has been in vogue but three years in all. Last year twelve points were made in scholarship, while this year 26 and a half were scored.

Boone county students again scored two firsts, but this year seconds, thirds and fourths helped to make the county standing very much better. Supt. Norris heard many favorable comments upon the work of his schools, especially upon their feet of climbing [illegible] general Scholarship tests. Miss Vivian Hood, of Constance, captured this prize, while last year it was won by Miss Mellicent Berkshire, of Burlington.

The other first taken by Boone county was in Reading. Clifford Bauer, of Florence, [illegible] Boone county's other first last year was in History, George Flemon, of Verona winning. Their departure this fall was delayed for several weeks on account of the illness of John, Jr., who had continued to his bed for many weeks. Although not fully recovered it is thought that he will soon be entirely "out of the woods." Judge Lassing remained here to attend to a few business matters before taking his departure in a week or ten days. To say that we regret to see them leave is simply saying something that doesn't have to be said.

A SPLENDID SUCCESS

The second performance of The Alley Daffodil was a pronounced success from a presentation standpoint at least. The attendance of course was not up to that of a week previous when the house was packed, but many were so well pleased they came out the second night.

This indeed was a very entertaining play, admirably presented by each member of the caste. There was not a weak link. Everyone unanimously insists that it was one of the very best home talent performances they ever have seen.

The P. T. A. cleared a tidy sum which will be used for improvements at the local school, and which certainly are needed. The organization desires to extend its hearty thanks to any and all who assisted in any way to make the enterprise the success that it was.

Our School District, as well as Boone County in general, has much to be thankful for this year. In order to show in a small way our appreciation for blessings received, all the churches of the School District have decided to join in Thanksgiving at our Auditorium.

Brother Avery of the Sand Run Baptist church will deliver the address. Brother Brown of the Bullittsville Christian church and Bro. Campbell of the Bullittsburg Baptist church will have charge of the devotional.

The committee on music is composed of Mrs. Flossie Campbell Martin, Mrs. Alice C. Dye, Miss Alice Eggleston and Mrs. Oma Riley.

LOCAL GIRLS BROADCAST

Misses Mellicent Ann and Helen Berkshire, who have been piano and tenor guitar students at the Superior Music Studio, 36 E Fifth Street, Cincinnati, for the past few months, were broadcasting on the Superior Studio program from Station WKRC last Saturday. The program was heard by a number of the friends and relatives in Boone county, as well from more distant points. The Superior studio teaches modern music in an improved and easy manner and pupils with even a fair degree of aptitude can make splendid progress. That these two students have done well is evidenced by the fact that they were put "on the air" before their courses were completed. They will broadcast again in the near future.

CHILDREN ON WHEELS

The chance of an automobile accident is much greater if the driver is under twenty than when he or she is over thirty, according to statistics compiled by one of the large accident insurance companies. The records of some four million licensed automobile drivers were examined and it was found by far the highest percentage of accidents occurred when children under age were driving a car.

There are still a good many states and communities where very little or no inquiry is made into the qualifications of anyone who wants to drive a car. In the majority of the states today licenses are required, but the examinations and driving tests vary. And there are still a great many places in which any child who is physically able to hang on to the steering wheel and reach the pedals is allowed to drive.

Of course, the earlier in life one learns to drive, the more confidence the motorist acquires and the better he or she is likely to be as time goes on. But we think there is a great deal of wisdom in the law which obtains in some states, under which no one under 18 may be licensed to drive, and then only after a severe road test of ability. In order to learn to drive before applying for a license, young people in states where this law obtains must always have with them on the front seat an experienced licensed driver.

There will always be parents who will let their children talk them into taking out the car, whether really fit to drive it or not, and children will always want to get out on the road and "step on it." This is human nature, and it would not be anybody's else concern if people driving cars were not a menace to other motorists and pedestrians.

THE HOLY SUNLIGHT MISSION

The Holy Sunlight Mission had as their subject Tuesday night Nov. 10th "Peace, Joy and Happiness." This subject was selected by the leader for the evening, Mr. Joe Klasserner.

Mr. Lawrence Rodemer was the first speaker and gave us a very interesting talk on "Peace." This was followed by practically every one in the Mission telling of the joys they have, some in their homes, some at work and in various other ways.

The music was furnished by the Mission Musical Society" and a guest of Mr. James Harrison, a violinist. The entire meeting proved to be a "Star meeting for the leader presented each person with a star upon which was written a Bible verse. A very beautiful picture was given to the one having a number on the back of his or her star. This number was the number of the Bible verse used for a text by the leader for his remarks. Kenyon Clore was the happy winner of the picture.

A gold star was presented to the Pastor and surprised indeed was he to find the text of his message on the back of his star.

The Mission is endeavoring to bring happiness and good thoughts to the public. We are going to do all we can to secure good speakers, good musicians and anything which will be of interest to the entire community.

Friday night Nov. 20th, we have as our leaders for the evening "The Carter Brothers, mountain boys" from the hills of "Old Kaintucky." These boys are wonderful musicians and will give us an evening of great enjoyment. The instruments which they play are banjo, guitar, violin and ukulele. We shall also have with us a radio announcer and some guests of the Adams Music Co., in Covington, Ky. Come, see and hear the radio announcer in person that you have heard so many times in your own home. You are cordially invited to come and bring all your friends.

We promise you an evening of music and interest which you will never forget. Don't forget the date Friday Nov. 20th, at 7:45.

4-H TOBACCO SHOW WINNERS

Three community 4-H tobacco [illegible] and Mr. Allen Burcham was awarded first place in the Grant show and Mr. Jim Bob Wilson first place in the Hamilton show.

The tobacco show at Verona was the most hotly contested of the three shows. Jesse Hamilton of Verona offered an award of $3.00 for first premium exhibit and T. B. Sturdivents store the second premium. Frances Ransom and Robert Gibson received the first premium award on their exhibit of two hands each of trash, lugs, bright leaf and red leaf. Orville Judy received second, Sam and Vrne Sturdivent 3rd and James Chapman 4th.

The extreme lack of handling condition of tobacco during the past few weeks prevented many of the members from preparing their exhibits. Those who did were compelled to use artificial means to bring the tobacco in case. The exhibits displayed were of good quality.

DAIRY SCHOOL DISCUSS FEEDING AND BREEDING PROBLEMS

The fourth annual dairy feeding school will be held at Burlington court house Tuesday, Nov. the 24th, Mr. Ted Besh of the dairy department from the College of Agriculture will lead in the discussions.

The school this year will be divided into a morning program on the discussion of economical feeding rations and latest developments in the feeding of dary cows. The afternoon program will be devoted to results of research study on the increasing of production thru use of herd sires. Much has been said about the fine individual herd sires that have been used but very little until recent years has been known as to the actual worth of these animals as sires of producing cows in the herd. Local dairymen will also be on the program to give their experiments with two or more years feeding of home mixed dairy rations and use of proven sires.

The dairy feeding schools in the past have been the type that practical dairymen have benefitted. Each year favorable comment on the practicability of these schools has been general.

It is hoped the school this year will be as good as in former years and will be the best held to-date. The school will begin at 9:30 A. M., slow time and close at 3:15 P. M. The school is free and everyone interested in dairy problms is invited to attend.

COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

BURLINGTON HI SCHOOL NOTES

Friday the 13th did not prove unlucky to the Burlington Tomcats and Kittens when they marked up their second victory of the season against the strong Petersburg teams. Coach McMillan and his capable helper, "Pill" Greenup, who Mr. McMillan is giving credit for the team's victory, marked up the largest score yet made by any Burlington team. Berkshire, the center for the Kittens was the high point maker of this game, making ten of their thirty-nine points, with L. Ryle and Mary Phillips coming close behind with a large score. The guarding of Arnold and Burton was worth looking at, and as they were always on their feet, quite a few substitutions were made during the game which allowed all the members of the team a chance to play. Grant of the Petersburg team was the high point maker, making four of their eight points. The Petersburg girls are all good players and will give any team a hard struggle. When the game ended the score was Kittens 39, Petersburg 8.

Though the Petersburg boys have been defeating the Tomcats for a good many years it was no reason that they were going to do it again. It was a close game and when it ended the score was Tomcats 20, Petersburg 19. Though coach Kelly had two of his boys taken out on fouls he had men ready to go in their places. Petersburg lost one player on fouls. There was no high point maker in this game as each man did his share though Petersburg made most of their points on fouls. The careful manner in which Cecil "Zeke" Rigney refereed the game was appreciated—not only by school officials but by the spectators as well. Next Friday Nov. 20th, we will find the Tomcats and Kittens on the Piner floor where they will challenge those teams for two games. Let's all go and help boost our teams.

Zena Garrison was chosen reporter of the senior class.

The seniors are expecting their rings the last of this week.

Lucille Ryle, Russell Ryle and Bob Williamson were absent from school last Friday.

The girls of the Girls Reserve Club are planning on a grand trip to G. R. Conference this week-end. [illegible] be able to go [illegible] ball, so Mar[illegible] her place.

On Saturday morning of last week Mr. E. E. Kirkwood, Jas. Ogden, William Cook, Ralph Maurer, James McNeely, Virgil Vice and Harold Kelly Clore journeyed to Butler, Ky., to represent the Burlington Hi-Y Club at the older boys conference, which was held there. Being the 13th annual conference, considered the Hoodoo, but it was believed by all to be the most successful conference ever held.

There were nearly one hundred boys from the various Northern Kentucky schools, our school sent the second largest delegation from out of town schools. After hearing so many interesting and beneficial lectures we have returned inspired to do bigger and better things for our club and community during the coming year.

Last Monday at the regular weekly meeting of the Hi-Y Boys they were honored by having one of their advisors Mr. R. E. Berkshire, Editor of the Boone County Recorder, who made a short address on the recent "World Series," which was enjoyed very much by the club. The program committee has been asked to have Mr. Berkshire again soon for another address.

Mr. Wm. Ewald, the District Y. M. C. A. Secretary, was also a speaker at the meeting in the interest of the Older Boys Conference.

7th and 8th Grade

Wilford Fleek and Wallace Lucas were absent from the eighth grade Monday.

The pupils from here who went to the tournament at Lexington brought back two-thirds, one in Civics by Russell Loomis, and one in running broad jump by Edwin Hughes.

Harold Ogden and Howard Garrison were absent from the seventh grade Monday.

5th and 6th

Warren Kirkpatrick has been absent from school four days on account of asthma.

Don't forget our Thanksgving Chapel Program Friday Nov. 20th. Come and bring some one with you.

FLORENCE HI SCHOOL NOTES
(By Pat Ward)

An Honor Roll has been established in school. It really is an honor to get on this roster. An average of 95 in scholastic efforts and a prompt record of 10 in deportment before one although dulled may have the privilege of being classed as an honor student. The requirement for the grades is not so strict. It is however, quite right also. Ninety per cent in scholastic effort and 100 per cent in conduct places a grade pupil on the honor roll.

Grades 11 and 12

A perfect record in attendance this month. Quite an achievement for any school.

Last Wednesday the chapel program was conducted by the grades. Several visitors were present and all voiced the opinion that it was indeed a very enjoyable offering. The program was as follows:

Patriotically.
Star Spangled Banner—Entire Assembly.
Bible Reading—Virginia Adkins.
Declamation (The Proposal)—Alta Fogel.
Song—(Composed by Selves—Betty Laubisch, Jean Miller.
A Tribute—Pat Ward.
Vocal Trio—Lawrence Aylor, Mary Evelyn Higgins, Alta Fogel.
Piano Solo—Lawrence Aylor.
Class Prophesy—Helen Elliott.
Piano Solo—Dorothy McCauley.
Piano Solo—Dorothy Sullivan.
America—Entire Assembly.

Miss Catherine Bethel acted as Mistress of ceremonies.

We are all planning on attending the basket ball game to be held in our new gymnasium Friday night. Hamilton is to be our opponent.

Honor Roll

Pat Ward, Virginia Adkins and Lawrence Aylor.

Grades 9 and 10

Alice Cody has been absent from school a few days, due to illness.

Gladys Butts returned to school Monday.

Great prospects are seen in the students of these grades as speakers. Speeches are practiced in English class.

Honor Roll

Mary Alice Dixon.
Helen Dixon.

Library Echoes

The library is growing rapidly. A number of new books have been added to the list. Among the books adorning the shelves are The World Book Encylepodia and other Encyclopedia and fiction of the highest type. We hope that this library will soon be the best equiped most copious library in Northern Kentucky. Miss Virginia Adkins is librarian.

Athletic Activities

Friday night we dedicate our new gym and have arranged an elaborate program in addition to the three scheduled games.

Hamilton is bringing two strong teams here to help us in the dedication. Altho they have been slow to start this season all reports indicate exceptional fight and spirit coupled with speed and technique in both their teams. Florence teams have not as yet broken the ice this year, but have trained hard and faithfully and are determined to win. The boys team surprised the Florence Independents in a practice tilt with the score of 30 to 10. An Independent game is also scheduled and it to promises plenty of action.

The probable line-up of Florence is as follows:

Knights	Nightingales
C. Regan F	H. Elliott F
J. Powell F	D. Sullivan F
	M. Higgins C
	M. Laubisch G
F. Ferguson (c) G	C. Bethel G
C. Higgins (c) G
S. Kearns G Subs Mary Subs.	Marksberry Subs.
Aylor, Groger	Virginia Miller
Tanner	Alta Fogel

7th and 8th Grades

Our teacher, Mr. Lamb, appointed a reporter from each grade in our room. Edna Fogle was chosen from the 8th grade, while Alice Sayre Lucas was chosen to represent the 7th grade.

The Knights and Nightengales and the lower grade teachers elected our school cheer leaders last Monday morning. One boy and one girl was chosen, both being in the upper grade room. Donald Tanner and Helen Miller were the ones selected to keep pep going for all contests. Marvin Ross McCauley was selected by Coach Lamb as team manager.

Prof. Davis and teachers are planning a school honor roll. In order for us to get on this we must make all B's and A's with A in conduct. "Here is hoping."

Seven pupils from our room made the trip to Lexington, representing Boone county in the State Rural School Tournament. Those that made the trip were Clifford Bauer, William Campbell, Edna Fogle Helen Miller, Marjorie Bell, Marian Sullivan and Alice Sayre Lucas.

Emma Marksberry was absent from school Thursday because of illness.

Remember our first basket ball games and the dedication of our new gymnasium Friday night Nov. 20th. Come!

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Webster and son Ferris, and Lillian Presser spent Saturday night with friends at Crittenden, Ky.

Menifee county farmers made one of their largest crops of sorghum of superior quality, taste and color.

OIL FOR WATCHES

The oil used in watches—or that which should be used—comes from a cavity in the jawbone of the purpoise or the blackfish. The best quality is rare. Cape Cod fishermen bring in most of it. To be tested, it is taken up into Vermont, where the mercury often goes far below zero. The best grade is that which remains practically unchanged at these low temperatures. A single drop of this oil is enough to lubricate a watch.

Simpson county fruit growers disposed of a large crop of apples to the local trade at an average price of 75 cents a bushel.

More than Indemnity

Your fire insurance dollar provides far more than you realize. Of course it protects you from financial loss in case of fire. But it does so much more that it ranks as one of the most effective dollars you spend.

Merely as indemnity, Stock Fire Insurance is one of the cheapest necessities. Its average rate has consistently declined for more than 20 years, until in 1930 it reached the lowest figure in all American fire insurance history.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

teaches better building practices—furnishes a service for the suppression of arson, another for the improvement of community fire defenses and conducts many general fire prevention activities, all of which have contributed to the reduction of fire waste and the loss of life by fire.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

"THE CROSSROADS NEWSPAPER"

VOLUME 97 Established 1875 BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY JANUARY 7, 1932 NUMBER 1

DEATH BECKONS

TO MRS. CARRIE F. RIDDELL EARLY MONDAY—WAS WIDOW OF FOUNDER OF RECORDER—BURIAL WEDNESDAY IN HIGHLAND CEMETERY

Aunt Carrie is dead. As the Recorder is going to press for the second issue in its fifty-eighth year of publication Mrs. Carrie F. Riddell, widow of its founder, is being laid to rest in Highland cemetery.

Naturally the entire staff on the old county paper is deeply touched by her loss. Even the old press seems to moan significantly as sheet after sheet striking off this obituary comes from the cylinder.

The Recorder meant much to Aunt Carrie, who never ceased to be interested in its welfare after the death of her husband, the late W. L. Riddell, to whom she was united in marriage just five years after he had inaugurated its publication. Aunt Carrie knew its problems and we certainly shall miss her quaint, kindly solicitation and ever ready help and advice.

The building in which the Recorder now is being printed had remained her property until her death early Monday morning, January 4th. Had she lived 18 days longer she would have reached her 79th year, having been born on January 22, 1853. She first saw the light on what is now the Dixie Highway, then the old Lexington pike, near the top of the Willow Run hill south of Covington.

She was a member of a family of 11 children only one of whom survives, L. L. Pace, of McMinnville, Tennessee, who attended the funeral services in spite of his advanced years.

Carrie Pace was united in marriage to the late W. L. Riddell on November 24, 1880 and to this union were born three children, two of whom died in infancy, the third dying when but three years of age. She was preceded to the grave by her late husband, who passed away in 1921.

Although Mrs. Riddell was able to rear no children of her own her motherly nature found a haven in the fostering of five nieces and nephews whom she unselfishly cared for from their early childhood. When Mrs. Mollie Porter, wife of Alfred Porter, passed away leaving five children, all nieces and nephews of W. L. Riddell and wife they took them into their home. Aunt Carrie was a mother from that time until her death and her loss to them is infinitely a sad one.

These nieces and nephews, all of whom survive, are Mrs. Carrie Alford, Louisville, Mrs. Laura Huey, Petersburg, Mrs. Rachel White, Cincinnati, and George A. and O. R. Porter, both of Burlington.

Funeral services were conducted at the home here Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 with burial in Highland cemetery, C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, in charge of the arrangements. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian church, a congregation at one time a thriving one in this village.

The pall-bearers were George Kreylich, Otis Rouse, R. B. Huey, Wallace Rice, Newton Sullivan, Jr., and D. R. Blythe.

While Burlington people had become reconciled to her loss, due to her lingering and apparently hopeless illness, yet her death is keenly felt by those who have known her here throughout these many years. Aunt Carrie, as she was known to every citizen, was a unique, but affectionate and lovable character, and her departure from this realm serves but to emphasize the fact that a truly good woman has entered the portals of eternity.

An advertisement for the sale of a Ford sedan was placed in these columns in our last issue. Before the week was out the owner had sold the auto and turned away a half dozen other willing purchasers. Recorder advertising brings results. Try our columns this year and take a long, long step toward the eradication of depression.

Mr. Henry Clore, of near Florence, made us his annual prompt call on Thursday of last week. Mr. Clore makes it an invariable custom to call at the Recorder office each New Year's Eve for the purpose of advancing his subscription. He never fails to be prompt to the exact day—and its always in the morning. Although he lives but a few miles from the county seat he makes but one or two trips each year to Burlington. Come more often, Mr. Clore.

HOLY SUNLIGHT MISSION

The Holy Sunlight Mission of Constance, Ky., had a very interesting meeting Tuesday night.

Services were led by Bro. Joe Klusserner, whose subject for the evening was "What Blessing have I received at the Mission?"

It was indeed wonderful to hear the remarks made by the folks.

We enjoyed the duet sung by Miss Grace Peeno and Miss Hilda Rademer.

Everyone looked forward with interest to the "Watch Service" which we had Thursday evening.

We had many visitors with us and we certainly appreciated the interest they showed us in the meeting.

Nearly everyone present favored us either with a short talk or a New Year's Resolution.

All the specials were greatly enjoyed by all.

An election of board members was another feature of the evening.

Just before the bells began to toll out the "Old Year" the entire congregation bowed their heads in silent prayer.

When the New Year was ushered in many Greetings were extended to all.

INDIAN TEAM

WILL RETURN TO THIS SECTION FOR GAME AT FLORENCE—ALL-STAR TEAM PICKED FROM ENTIRE COUNTY TO PLAY

The First Americans, a traveling Indian basket ball team, made Burlington another very pleasant visit last Friday night, January 1.

Basket ball fans will recall this team, which played two very interesting games here last year. They defeated with ease a team picked from the church league teams of this place.

The players on this years team are taller and considerably better than those of last year, according to the opinion of many who watched them. Only two members of last year's team are with them. They plan to return to this part of the country in about two weeks for a game with a team composed of the best players in this section. The team will be assembled by Coach C. G. Lamb, of the Florence high school five, and will be played in the spacious new gym at Florence, where the artistic sharpshooters on the Indian squad will have more operating room. Watch for date.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

Winifred Huey, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Huey, of Burlington, is recovering from a mastoid operation, which he submitted to last Thursday evening. Thursday morning he awoke with what was thought to be an old fashioned ear ache. His suffering however, was so severe that he was taken to Dr. Yelton, who ordered him to the hospital at once. The operation was performed Thursday at 5 P. M., and the patient is doing very nicely, for which the many friends and relatives of the family are very grateful.

Miss Mary Furlong, one of Burlington's most honored and respected citizens was removed to St. [illegible] hospital in Cincinnati Saturday where she will undergo treatment for several weeks. Miss Furlong has been in very poor health for several years.

ANNUAL

POULTRY SCHOOL MEETING TO BE HELD AT FLORENCE WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13—HATCHING AND BROODING PROBLEMS TO BE DISCUSSED

The annual winter poultry school to discuss better breeding, hatching and brooding problems will be held in Florence on next Wednesday, January the 13th. Mr. J. E. Humphrey, poultry specialist from the College of Agriculture will lead in the discussions.

The winter poultry school held each year serves as a source for leading poultrymen to discuss and receive reliable information on better poultry practices and methods of more efficient production. However, the majority of the poultrymen who later in the year find themselves in greatest need for this information fail to attend. The school is held under the supervision of the county agent, there are no charges and everyone is welcome. It is hoped that those who have been having chick brooding troubles in the past will come and contribute their part in the meeting. The school will begin at 9:30 a. m. (slow time) and close at 3:00 p. m.

CLOSING

OF ERLANGER BANK ADVENTURES "HARD TIMES" FOR MANY BOONE COUNTY DEPOSITORS AND STOCKHOLDERS—ASSETS WILL PAY OUT, IS CLAIM

Hard times are harder for a number of Boone county citizens who were involved in the recent closing of the Erlanger Citizens Bank. While officers and directors of the institution assure all depositors that there will be no loss, yet they will be without the use of their funds until such time as liquidation can be completed.

The institution closed its doors late last Saturday after the board of directors had voted at a meeting held at 4:30 that it would be inadvisable to continue to take deposits from customers under the existing conditions.

General depression, which had caused a large shrinkage in bonds and real estate, was given as the cause.

A liquidating agent will be appointed as soon as a state audit of the banks accounts is completed, it is said.

YAGER ELECTED

Ward Yager, Commonwealth's Attorney for this district was elected president of the State Commonwealth's Attorneys association at the annual meeting of that body last week. Mr. Yager thus receives a very unusual honor, as he is serving his first term. However, he has a wide acquaintance over the state partly gained thru his association with the county attorneys, while serving the latter capacity for Gallatin county.

Owen Allen, of Petersburg, was a business visitor in Burlington on Wednesday. Mr. Allen called at the Recorder office and placed a classified ad. with us, which will be seen in other columns of this issue.

THREE GAMES PLAYED

Three more games were played in the Boone County Church Basket Ball league last Saturday evening at Hebron.

The fast Petersburg team, which seems to be the class of the league at this writing, continued on its winning way by taking an easy game from the Burlington Baptists. The score was 41 to 15, with Deck and Bradburn leading the attack for the winners. Uts was high point man for the Burlington team.

Bullittsville Christians nosed out the Sand Run Baptists by the narrow count of 23-22 after a five minute overtime period had been played. Roberts, for Bullittsville, and H. Eggleston, for Sand Run, were the leaders in the scoring.

The Burlington Methodists defeated Hebron 34-30. Conner led the offense for Hebron with 16 points, while Frank Maurer made the same number for Burlington.

Next week's schedule follows:

Bullittsville vs. Belleview.

Burlington M. E. vs. Petersburg.

Burlington Baptists vs. Hebron.

Sand Run has the bye. The game next week will be played at Burlington.

SURPRISE

On Sunday Jan. 3, 1932, fifty friends with well filled baskets came to help Eliza Voshell celebrate her natal day. Not knowing anything of the preparations for the celebration, it came as a complete surprise. Members of the family even slipped out an old ham, which had never been missed and had it brought back baked to serve as part of the dinner. As the mother had had tooth trouble the previous week and was unable to get about as usual, otherwise likely the ham would have been missed.

Various games, music by Hebert Deck, Reginald and Irvin Ryle helped while the hours away and the day passed all too quickly.

Those present were:

Russell Finn and family.

Leslie Sebree and family.
Leroy Vice and family.

COMMUNITY PROGRAMS OF WORK

Community agricultural improvement programs of work will be organized in each of the leading communities of the county during this month and next month. The purpose of these programs is to bring the farmer, the county agt., the experiment station and other cooperating agencies together to study and carry out methods of agricultural improvement.

Many new and more efficient methods have been worked out thru these programs in the past. The effectiveness and value of these programs to a large extent depends on the interest and ability of farmers and county agent in planning and carrying out the program planned. It is hoped the [illegible] programs will give greater [illegible] than any year in the past.

O. S. Rouse and wife entertained at a New Years dinner Sunday on [illegible] Day.

COLLECTIONS

AT COUNT HOUSE CONSIDERABLY BEHIND PREVIOUS YEARS—DOG OWNERS APPROVING CALLED TO PUBLIC ATTENTION AGAINST LAW VIOLATORS

At the close of business hours last Saturday, January 2, County Clerk Asa O. McMullen announced that he had issued just 750 automobile licenses for 1932. This is considerably behind the schedule of last year at this time.

Sheriff Herbert Snyder also states that his list of delinquent taxpayers is considerably larger than last year when it was copious enough to indicate a depressing condition among the farmers.

Dog licenses also are going slowly. Attention of dog owners is called to the fact that fifteen offenders against the dog law walked up to the bar and paid fines and costs amounting to more than fifteen dollars in each case at the December term of court just closed. These offenders were indicted at a preceding term of court in 1931 and swift justice was meted out.

An Epworth League was organized by the young people of the M. E. church last Sunday evening. An invitation is extended to all young people in this vicinity to join the league and help with its permanent organization. All meetings will be held at 6:30 P. M., each Sunday.

Those to whom County Clerk A. G. McMullen issued marriage licenses during the holiday season include: Joe. Holegate, 22, of Cincinnati, and Miss Virginia Miller, also of Cincinnati; Clarence Earl Easton, 20, of Burlington, and Miss Mable Lee Sorrell, of near Burlington; and Alvin Dringenburg, 20, and Mary L. Tanner, 22, both of Florence.

While hunting in the fields near Limaburg on Saturday, Dec. 26th, James Ogden, seventeen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ogden, accidentally shot himself in the foot when the trigger of a shot gun he was carrying was caught as he was climbing a fence. The injury, while still very painful, is not serious and he is able to be about with the aid of crutches. Jim is one of the local high school basket ball players and his absence from the team will be felt keenly.

BURLINGTON HI SCHOOL NOTE

After a big Christmas the Burlington Hi School pupils settled down for work to prepare for the mid-term examinations which will be given in the next two weeks as the first semester ends the 18 day of January. In the last semester of this year's work they are planning on some big events with both of our basket ball teams going strong, our debating team rounding into shape for a contest soon and the Senior play given at the end of the term, there is no reason why there shouldn't be taken up. With your help and cooperation old B. H. S. will go forward in the year of 1932.

On Dec. 23, 1931, the day school was out for the Xmas holidays, the Hamilton High school played B. H. S. two games. The Kittens won by a close score of 20 to 19 and the Tomcats won by a score of 29 to 9. The second team played until the third quarter and then coach Kelly put in the regular lineup. On Friday Jan. 1, the Preliminary game for the Indian game was played by the Burlington High School Tomcats and a picked team of former High school stars. The Tomcats won by a score of 35 to 33.

The Literary Society will not meet until Friday Jan. 15. The Girl Reserve and High-Y boys will resume their regular meetings.

James Ogden was absent from school on account of an accident that occurred during the Christmas holidays. The students are wishing him a speedy recovery.

The Sophomores are very sorry to lose Bob Williamson from their class.

Don't "Let George Do It"

At the solicitation of many tobacco growers Dawson Chambers has called a meeting of all interested tobacco growers of Boone County to meet at Burlington on the 9th of January at 1:30 P. M., to see if growers really are in earnest in wanting a pool.

Boone County will go on record for or against a pool to be judged by the attendance and interest shown in this meeting. If you are satisfied with present prices of tobacco and the future market outlook then stay at home but if you want a better price and are willing to sign a pool agreement then come to this meeting and show by your presence that you are willing to sign up.

This is one time that "George is not going to do it" as there will be no solicitation to get any one to sign a contract. A majority of the tobacco growers must volunteer to come forward and sign up if we have a pool.

The Burley Association must know what the growers desire before January 21st. So attend the meeting at Burlington on January 9th and vote yes or no on the pool question.

You will find the call of Mr. Chambers in this issue.

Every tobacco grower may consider himself a committee to have his neighbor attend the meeting on the 9th. It is now or never as far as this year's crop is concerned.

FRUIT STABILIZES FARM INCOMES IN WESTERN COUNTIES

Fruit growing, developed in the last 15 years, added $550,000 to farmers' incomes in the Purchase region of Kentucky, this year, W. C. Johnstone, agriculture agent in McCracken county, told the annual winter meeting of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society at the Experiment Station at Lexington. In the last five years, fruit in the Purchase counties has brought farmers a total of $2,522,800.

Until about 15 years ago practically all the cash income from farming in that section was derived from dark tobacco, which was largely exported. When foreign sales of this tobacco dropped, farmers were obliged to look for other crops.

The production of strawberries developed rapidly. In 1928 a total of 544 carloads were shipped from McCracken and adjoining counties. The commercial peach industry was introduced about 10 years ago. This year 106 carloads of peaches and 100 carloads of apples were shipped.

Recent developments in fruit growing in the Purchase include dewberries and raspberries. Plans call for 1,000 acres of raspberries in 1933.

Speaking of the subject of diversification, Mr. Johnstone pointed out the failure of the one crop of tobacco to meet the needs of agriculture. From tobacco farmers went to another one crop, that of strawberries, which they again found insufficient when low prices or crop failures came.

Gradually other fruit crops were added, in order that farmers might be assured of one crop or another every year. In fact there have been few years when any of these crops completely failed or when there was even a failure of two of them.

Lilian Francis, of the Waterloo neighborhood, spent last Friday night and Saturday with Mr. and Mrs Elmer Kirkpatrick and family in Burlington.

Quite a few party's were given during the holidays in and around Burlington.

Quite a few of our farmers sold their tobacco last week on the Covington market.

Quite a number of people from out in the county were in Burlington each day last week—paying taxes and getting license tags for their autos.

This office has been very busy the past few days completing the directory for the Boone County Telephone Company.

Magoffin county farmers grew approximately 650 acres of tobacco in 1931. Many of them grew their first tobacco.

"Dandy Agnes M. F. Nichols is advocating strawberry growing for at least 500 Clark county farms. She believes that strawberries could easily be made to add $50,000 to $100,000 to farmers' incomes in the county, and $50,000 more for women, children and men who picked the berries. The missing and school populations of the county are large, he says, and the strawberry harvest comes at the time of sack work and no school. Tobacco is unprofitable in Ohio county, according to Mr. Nichols.

Utopia Club members in Taylor county grew 3 300 bushels of certified seed corn in 1931. Morris Coppock made an average production of 42 bushels to the acre on 23 acres. There now are 637 Utopia club members in Taylor county. Utopia clubs are organizations of farm boys and girls who have passed the maximum 4-H club age of 18 years. They study and apply improved farm and home practices.

A New Year

A new leaf on a new Calendar - and thoughts are turned to the new year. While 1931 brought hardship and trials it also taught valuable lessons. Let us face 1932 with renewed humility and faith. To all our friends we wish a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

GROUPS TO MEET DURING FARM HOME CONVENTION

Farmers organizations will meet at Lexington during the 20th annual Farm and Home Convention at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Jan. 26-29th. Meetings have been announced for the Kentucky Jersey Cattle Club, the Kentucky Holstein-Friesian Club, the Kentucky Seed Improvement Association, the Kentucky Beekeepers' Association and the Farm Bureau.

Dairy farmers will hold a special meeting one morning, when problems of this industry will be discussed. The general session that afternoon will be devoted to dairying and related subjects. Dr. O. E. Reed, chief of the bureau of dairying in the United States department of agriculture, will be among the speakers.

A large number of farm subjects will be discussed at this year's Farm and Home Convention, including cooperative marketing, the tobacco situation, soil improvement economic production, pasture management, cattle, sheep and hog production, dairying, community building, land utilization, weed pests, insect control, fruit growing, farm buildings, child rearing, recreation, quality production, the government and business, landscaping, home-grown feeds, etc.

Among the speakers will be several nationally known men and women, and a number of prominent Kentucky farm men and women. Sessions will be held for homemakers and for farmers on all four days.

DAIRYING RETURNS HALF MILLION EACH YEAR AT MAYFIELD

Dairying has become a half-million dollar industry to Graves co., and adjoining territory served by the Pet Milk Company's plant at Mayfield, according to the annual report of G. C. Routt, farm agent in Graves county.

Returns to farmers producing milk and to haulers of milk totaled $448,386 n 1931. Adding to this amount the value of the butterfat sold in that region brings the year's total income from dairying to $559,-624.

Since the Pet Milk Company established a plant at Mayfield in 1927 that company has paid for milk a total of $2,224,768. Butterfat sales brought the total to $2,780,-961. Farmers in that region produced 103,480,347 pounds of milk in 53 months.

"Dairying has proved its need in Graves county, for it has given many farmers a cash income each month which they otherwise would not have had," notes Mr. Routt.

He traces the development of the dairy industry in Graves county, the building up of herds, the improvement of pastures, and the general results that have come to that region through the introduction of a year-around dependable source of farm income.

"The income from dairying in 1931," he continues, "would represent the value of 11,192,480 pounds of dark tobacco selling for 5 cents a pound, the price growers received in 1930. But dairying added fertility to the soil, arther than depleted it, and required less labor than would be needed to produce the same income from tobacco."

Junior 4-H club members in Madison county made a net profit of $8,329 in 1931.

A. M. Lewis of Carter county has completed his fourth year of keeping records on his poultry. He made a profit of $1.42 per hen above feed cost for the year ending Nov. 1.

Dean of boys' reformatory said 121 cases of assault, totaling $1,537 planned, at Chillicothe for $68,000, or an average of $14.16 per hundred pounds. The 4th Southern club work was said to prove disappointed by the Northern District Warehouse Association for the highest average production, best leaf-ity and record broke. The tobacco was grown by 4-H club members in Boone, Oakdale, Henry, Carroll, Owen and Trimble counties.

Working under the direction of county farm agents and the College of Agriculture, 4-H club boys are taught to grow high quality tobacco, and then employ the best methods of curing and grading, emphasis being placed on quality rather than quantity.

TEN NEW YEAR FARM RESOLUTIONS

It's always good to look forward to the new year with certain definite plans. Experience may twist and bend these plans into unrecognizable forms before the year is thru. Below are ten good new year resolutions for the farmer, each farmer may have ten better:

1. Plan my farm operations weeks and months in advance and plan to do the right job at the right time.

2. Cultivate fewer acres and do the job better.

3. Use only best quality seed—Kentucky grown seed preferred.

4. Use only purebred sires of known production ability—Life is too short to experiment with others.

5. Keep complete farm account records in order to know where to cull and where to strengthen.

6. Cooperate with my fellow farmer for the common good when this good is to my own interest. Not to be governed by false pride 'or jealousy.

7. Support good legislation that will protect farm interests.

8. Economize — Accurate farm records shows that those farmers who produce with the lowest cost per unit make the most money.

9. Raise a good garden and all food possible for the family—many farmers are spending $40.00 per month for groceries when $30.00 of this should be grown on the farm.

10. Secure the full cooperation of the farm wife, take her in as a partner in the farm business—she to a large extent hold the solution to the present agricultural crisis.

TWENTY FARM ACCOUNT RECORDS COMPLETED

Twenty Boone county farmers have just completed their 1931 farm account records on all farm enterprises carried on during the year. These records will be summarized by the county agent and the farm management specialist from the College of Agriculture in the very near future and each farmer will be given a comparison with the ten best farmers and the ten poorest farmers in the Northern Kentucky district who did similar types of farming. The comparisons will be on each farm enterprise conducted. The individual farm records are kept confidential but the comparison each farmer received gives a valuable guide in finding the strong and weak points in the individual farm business.

The number of farm account records kept during 1932 will be increased from twenty to around thirty. Thirty will in all probability be the maximum number that the county agent and specialist can give personal service help during any one year. During the past five years every single farmer who has completed one year's record has continued to carry on this work. There is no charge for the farm account service and farm account record books are furnished free of charge. Each cooperator must however agree to keep the record for a whole year. Those farmers not carrying on this work and who wish to start on the new year should get in touch with the county agents office in Burlington at the earliest possible date.

A story going the rounds of the burley district has to do with a grower who has just finished selling his crop and in the final settlement finds he owes the warehouse six dollars and disposes of it in this manner: "I'll never pay you this $6 until I am dead. If I go to heaven I'll mail it to you. If I go to hell I'll hand it to you."—Cynthiana Democrat.

Miss Llonda Lee Jarrell spent from Tuesday until Sunday with relatives in Covington.

Homemakers' clubs presented the Hopkins County Infirmary with 300 jars of canned fruit and vegetables and quantities of potatoes, apples and other food products.

Farmers in Crittenden and Livingston counties are planning to increase their strawberry acreage.

Sunday School Lesson

THE FIRST DISCIPLES
John 1:35-49

Rev. Samuel B. Price, D. D.

Thirty years of developing life are omitted by John in his Gospel. Only Luke, in chapter 2:41-50, tells of the visit to the temple at Jerusalem when the Lad was 12 years old. It is profitable to meditate on the kind of life that Jesus lived in the Nazareth home. Here is the ideal son and the record has never been written concerning those developing years.

Meanwhile John the Baptist had attracted much attention thru his wilderness preaching. Multitudes came to hear him in the Jordan valley. A group of faithful disciples was working with the Baptiser. One day Jesus came and sought baptism, though He had no sins to confess. God placed the seal upon this dedicatory act as the Holy Spirit descended in the form of a dove. The forty days temptation in the wilderness followed, during which time Jesus Christ truly faced His redemptive ministry.

One day it was the sublime privilege of John the Baptist to say: "Behold, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Some of the disciples of John thereafter identified themselves with this greater Teacher. John's wonderful unselfishness is indicated in that he was ready to give up his closest friends that they might have still better associations.

Forthwith personal work began, and that is the one method that Jesus has approved for the growth of His Kingdom. Andrew at once sought out his own brother Peter and brought him to Jesus. John doubtless brings his brother James to Jesus. When they reach Galilee Philip is added to the group of learners and he, in turn, locates Nathaniel and induces him to join this group of student-workers.

THE OLD YEAR IS GONE

That year is gone—here's another to take its place.

And there's no use fooling ourselves. There's no advantage at all in telling ourselves that the year that's past was a good one, a happy year and one that we'll remember with joy. It was a hard year, a savage year, a worrying sort of year, and there was misery in it.

People suffered. People lost heart. People felt as if the end of the world had come for them and they'd never be happy again. Some of us lost heart. We hung on with desperate courage, but with little hope. We weakened and turned coward. Some of us could have endured any suffering for ourselves, but we couldn't stand the suffering of people we knew, of people who were dear to us. So some people broke under the strain of the things that happened to them in 1931.

No, it wasn't a happy year. If you were happy in it, you were haunted sometimes by the fear that it was selfish to have any fun at all while other people were in trouble. The year was a bitter year, and it left us with a bad taste in the mouth. We feel like shouting after it the old saucy cry of impudent children, "Good riddance to bad rubbish!"

But there was one thing that 1931 did to us.

It tested us!

It tested our faith. If we had a philosophy at the beginning of 1931, now we know just how much it helped, how much of it is left today. Is it stronger now, or is it a thing of shreds and patches? If it has stood up, it was worth having. If it has failed, either we were too weak or it was never worth having—and that's something worth knowing.

Our friends were tested in 1931. Now we know who were the best among them. If we were in trouble, we learned who would help. We learned in bitter necessity, which of those friends would come close and which would turn away. We learned which of the green leaves turned to pallor and which to crimson and gold. And we found friends in 1931 that we did not know we had.....And as our friends were tested for us, so we were tested for those that call us Friend.

The year was a great crucible. We went thru the fire and it burned us to a crisp or it strengthened us. We learned in that crucible what weakness we must hereafter fight against in our own selves—and strengths we may, hereafter, depend upon.....It's something at least, to come upon a year that can do to us and live thru it and to come forth with greater wisdom into another year.

That year is gone. Let us be thankful.....Heres another right before us. May it teach us, in some happier way, fully as much as 1931 did.—The Kentucky World.

Plans are being made to enroll 100 Hickman county 4-H club boys and girls in dairy work for 1932.

As a result of a farm grazing contest among 4-H club boys and girls, houses have been painted and other improvements made on Lincoln county farms.

Dr. O. T. Smith, of Lee county, grew 128 bushels of onions on an acre. After the onions were harvested he grew 110 bushels of turnips on the same acre.

Seventeen thousand apple trees were purchased cooperatively by Knott county farmers last year. These trees were year-old grafts representing such varieties as Rome Beauty, Ben Davis, Grimes Golden, Stayman and Yellow Transparent, with a few hundred Delicious, Early Harvest and Red Junes. The grafts were set in rows 3 feet apart and 13 inches in the rows. They made rapid growth and now are 4 to 7 feet tall.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I had much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen. I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily; but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."
